FIRST TROOPS IN MEXICO

AMERICANS ON NEUTRAL SHIP TORPEDO SUNK

Consul Reports That No Warning Was Given Norse Craft.

WASHINGTON TO ACT.

GERMANY TODAY.
BY CAROLYN WILSON

Miss Carolyn Wilson, whose many brilliant articles on the war have appeared in "The Tribune," has just returned from Germany, where she made an exhaustive study of the internal conditions of the country. She has summed up her observations in a series of fourteen masterly articles which show the true attitude and condition of the German people after nearly twenty months of war. The first of the series appears in this morning's "Tribune" on page 5.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—The first ship carrying Americans to be torpedoed without warning since the new Austro-German submarine war on armed merchantmen went into effect was reported to the state department today.

It was the Norwegian bark Silius, from New York to Havre, with seven American citizens aboard. It was torpedoed in the Havre road on Thursday night without warning, according to official dispatches from the American consul at Havre.

That the Silius was unarmed was taken for granted, since it was a neutral ship of commerce. This fact in itself, officials said, may make the case more serious than any that has confronted this government since the war began. No government ever has even hinted that noncombatants—either neutral or belligerent—have not the right to travel on the high seas aboard neutral vessels.

THREE OF CREW DROWNED

All of the Americans aboard the ship were saved, but according to the press dispatches three of the Silius' crew were drowned.

One report says one of the Americans, John Hartmann, 18 years old, was wounded.

Other Americans on board were:

JOHN WARDMAN, Philadelphia.
DAVID SHERRAN, New Bedford, Mass.
HENRY MONAHAN, Boston.
DANIEL NORAH, Connecticut.

MUST ANSWER FOR ACT.

Immediately upon receipt of the dispatch it was stated unofficially that the nation whose submarine attacked the Silius will be held to account by this government. It is believed the submarine was a German one.

Taking the meager dispatch at its face value, officials frankly declared that the power the undersea boat represented will be called to accountability for the act.

Secretary Lansing will not act officially until he has complete details. He must have affidavits of passengers and crew showing beyond "reasonable doubt" that it was a torpedo and not a mine or internal explosion that sent the Silius to the bottom and endangered the lives of American citizens. Such affidavits cannot reach here, officials said, much before a week or ten days.

DEMAND A COMPLETE CASE.

Even if the official reports show the submarine commander afforded the passengers and crew the measures of safety which Teutonic powers have assured the United States would be given in case of unwarranted attack on belligerent passenger ships the United States, it can be authoritatively stated, will not be satisfied.

If the attitude of the president and Secretary Lansing, as frequently expressed in formal notes to the Teutonic nations, has not changed—and officials grimly declared today it has not changed "one iota"—the United States must insist on disavowal, reparation, and condign punishment for the offending submarine commander.

If such demands are made it is firmly believed they will be accompanied by an insistent request that they be granted without hesitation and without the parley and exchange of formal notes that has marked former incidents.

FIRST PICTURES OF VILLA BANDIT RAID ON COLUMBUS, N. M.

The photographs reproduced below were taken by E. S. Palmer and B. J. Corcoran of San Francisco, who were on their way to Chicago and stopped at Columbus a few hours after Villa's bandits had been driven across the border.

The upper picture shows the burning of the bodies of twenty-seven Mexicans who were killed in the raid. The smoking heap in the background is the funeral pyre, onto which the bodies of the dead Mexicans were thrown. It was made of a heap of coal drenched with kerosene. In the foreground is the galvanized iron coping of the Central hotel, all that remained of the building after it had been burned.

In the lower lefthand picture are three members of the Thirteenth U. S. cavalry who were wounded and were about to take the train for El Paso. The lower righthand picture shows the station at Columbus, the only building which escaped damage during the raid.

ARMY TO STAY UNTIL QUIET IS RESTORED

U. S. Will Not Heed Either a Protest or Pledge by Carranza.

MILITIA MAY BE USED.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Gen. Funston wired the war department tonight a request for four additional regiments of cavalry for patrol duty on the border. In response to Funston's request, Gen. Scott ordered the First cavalry, from Monterey, Cal.; the Eleventh, from Oglethorpe, Ga., and the Twelfth, from Robinson, Neb., to leave for the border.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—The American army is going into northern Mexico to stay until order is restored and Carranza demonstrates ability to maintain order and prevent further incursions of outlaws into the United States. It will number 12,000 to 15,000 men.

The American army will not be withdrawn because of any protest by Carranza.

The army will not be withdrawn upon mere assurances by Carranza that he is able to maintain order.

Gen. Funston is to be the sole judge of the ability of Carranza to maintain order.

This was the attitude assumed by the Wilson administration today as the war department initiated the "punitive expedition" to take Villa "dead or alive."

WHOLE FORCE HELD READY.

This amplification of the undertaking designed primarily to capture and punish the authors of the Columbus, N. M., outrage was made known by Secretary of War Baker in discussing the instructions transmitted to Gen. Funston.

The secretary said that Gen. Funston has been ordered to send as many troops as are necessary into Mexico and to keep them there until Carranza is able to maintain order and prevent any repetition of outlaw forays into the United States.

It is the general opinion of administration officials that if the withdrawal of American troops is to be contingent upon the ability of Carranza to suppress the bands of Villistas infesting the almost inaccessible mountains of northern Mexico the United States soldiers will remain in Mexico for an indefinite period.

TROOPS ARE OVER BORDER.

Despite the declarations from the war department that there is no official information to indicate that the movement of troops into Mexico has started, there is a strong belief that the Seventh cavalry set out today for the relief of the American Mormon colony at Casas Grandes.

The rushing of this advance is attributed to the recognition by Maj. Gen. Funston that the colony of 500 men, women, and children is in serious peril owing to Villa's threat against them and his reported dash to the south. The suppression of information is attributed to his desire to catch Villa unawares.

The war department offices are again ablaze with light at a late hour, and, while there is a barrier to all inquiries on this subject, it is known that the division of militia affairs is in conference. This is taken to indicate the possibility of calling on certain of the cavalry guardsmen for border duty. To this duty the national guard might be called easily, whereas it would require special action to use them for over border service.

CARRANZA MAY BALK.

That Carranza is likely to entertain opinions at variance with those of Gen. Funston regarding the need of American troops is a possibility that administration officials are not overlooking. Therein, it is generally believed, lies the chief danger of a clash between the Carranzistas and the Americans which might bring war between the de facto government of Mexico and the United States.

Fears that Carranza would assume a once an attitude of objection to the "punitive expedition" which would force the United States to undertake complete armed intervention in Mexico for the restoration of a stable government were noticeably allayed today by receipt of a message from the first chief to the state department.

U. S. ARMY AUTHORITIES GIVEN FREE REIN IN CAMPAIGN IN MEXICO

In this message Carranza voices no objections to the expedition and mentions numerous precedents for an American invasion of Mexican territory in pursuit of Indians, chiefly, which produced "excellent results." Carranza, however, does not assent specifically to the American undertaking and counters with a proposal that he be given permission to send armed forces into the United States if occasion warrants.

MESSAGE FROM CARRANZA.

The Carranza message was transmitted by Consul Silliman. It was dated at Guadalajara, March 10, and was handed to him by Jesus Acuna, Carranza's minister for foreign affairs. It follows:

"In due reply to your courteous note, dated yesterday and transmitted today, through John W. Belt (Silliman's secretary), I have the honor to inform you that, having brought the above note to the attention of the first chief of the Constitutionalist army and depository of the executive power of Mexico, he has directed me to say to you, to the end that you may, in turn, transmit it to the department of state of the American government, that he learned with regret of the lamentable incident which occurred in the town of Columbus, N. M., on account of the assault it suffered yesterday from the bandits led by Francisco Villa.

"Although there has been a competent number of forces in the state of Chihuahua to reëstablish order and afford protection to nationals and foreigners, ever since Francisco Villa appeared in the mountains of the above state, at the request of the governor of the state and of the Constitutionalist consul in El Paso, Tex., the first chief ordered the timely departure of 2,500 men commanded by Gen. Luis Gutierrez with instructions to actively pursue the bandits who had just crossed the line into American territory, which they undoubtedly did, compelled by the tenacious pursuit of the above mentioned forces.

Indian Raids on Mexico.

"The above lamentable incident is similar to the incursions which were made in the states of Sonora and Chihuahua by Indians from the reservations of the government of the United States. Incursions into the state of Sonora occurred more or less about the year 1880, when Geronimo, the Indian chief who died not many years ago in Fort Mount, Ala., led a numerous horde and invaded a part of the north of the state of Sonora, committing many murders and depredations of life and property of Mexican families, until after a long and tenacious chase by American and Mexican forces the band of malefactors was annihilated and its chief captured.

"The incursion into Chihuahua, led by the Indian chief Victoria, commanding about 800 Indians, took place between the years 1884 and 1886. Then the bands of marauders, committing also many crimes, went into the country as far as the villages of Tejolochic, or Tres Castillos, near the capotal of Chihuahua, and during the first formal encounter between them and Mexican forces, after having lost their chief, they were dispersed.

Liberty to Cross Border.

"In these two occasions, through an agreement between the governments of the United States and Mexico, it was decided that the armed forces of one and the other country might freely cross from the territory of one to the other in pursuit and for the purpose of punishing the bands of marauders.

"Recalling these incidents and the good results for both countries on account of the above agreement, the government presided over by the first chief, anxious to exterminate within the least possible time the hordes led by Francisco Villa, who has been recently placed beyond the law and to capture him to apply condign punishment, resorts to you as confidential agent, and addresses the government of the United States, requesting the necessary permission for Mexican forces to cross into American territory in pursuit of those bandits, acknowledging due reciprocity in regard to forces of the United States crossing into Mexican territory if the raid effected at Columbus should unfortunately be repeated at any other points of the border.

"The Mexican government would greatly appreciate a prompt and favorable reply from the government of the United States.

"Please accept, Mr. Confidential Agent, the assurances of my high consideration.

"JESUS ACUNA,

"Secretary in Charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs."

Refuse to Predict Action.

After studying the Carranza message administration officials were unwilling to predict the action which will be taken by the United States on the first chief's request. That question will be decided by President Wilson after his return from his week end cruise aboard the presidential yacht "Mayflower." The text of the Carranza proposal was flashed to the president by wireless this afternoon.

In some respects the Carranza proposal is deemed more satisfactory than was expected. It is believed that Carranza personally is not disposed to object to the American invasion of Mexico for the purpose defined by the president, and that he has proposed reciprocation for the purpose of placating anti-American sentiment among his followers.

It frequently has been stated by Mexican officials that Carranza would be overthrown were he to make any concession to the demands of the United States.

Hope to Avoid Animosity.

This aspect of the matter will be taken into consideration by the president and his advisers in determining the reply to be given Carranza. The president desires to avoid arousing the animosity of Carranza and the supporters of the de facto government and wishes to carry out the punitive expedition on a basis of friendly coöperation with the first chief.

It, therefore, is suggested by some administration officials that Carranza should be informed of the willingness of the American government to consider the permission of entry of Mexican forces into the United States in pursuit of outlaws if the American authorities are unable to cope with the situation.

Such a reply, it is believed, would satisfy Carranza and allay suspicion on the part of the Mexican people of the motives of the "gringos."

Some Cause for Worry.

The failure of Carranza, however, to state specifically his acquiescence in the American move is viewed with uneasiness by a number of the principal advisers of the president. They assert that if the message is to be accepted as assent to the American punitive expedition it is strange that there is wholly lacking any assurance that Carranza will coöperate with the United States in capturing Villa.

If Carranza is to stand aloof, give no assistance to the United States, and merely insists upon the reciprocal right of sending troops into American territory, there is grave danger, many administration officials believe, of a clash eventually between Funston's forces and the Carranza army. Funston is depending upon Carranza to block the escape of Villa to the south. If Carranza fails to do this or fails to coöperate with the American forces serious trouble may be the result.

These are the contingencies upon which the possibility of complete armed intervention in Mexico now hangs.

Carranza May Be Ousted.

His leadership no longer acknowledged by governors of many of the central southern states of Mexico, who now recognize Castro, the "constitutionalist representative" in Mexico City, as the first chief, Carranza is doomed, according to reliable advices reaching a prominent official here from the south of Mexico.

Americans and other foreigners, as well as the upper class of Mexicans, these advices say, realize that Carranza passed the crest of his strength some time ago and has since been growing rapidly weaker. Nor do they look with much hope on the movement of Felix Diaz. If another stronger man is to rise in Mexico he has not yet got his head above the crowd, according to these advices. Meantime the condition is one of hopeless chaos, waiting they know not for what.

Carranza has not dared, the advices point out, to go to Mexico City, the supposed capital of the country of which he is president. He transferred the capital to Queretaro and is merely marking time. If he has any control, even in the north, no evidence of it has percolated to Mexico City, where the Americans are wondering who will strip from the old first chief the last vestige of his authority.

Insure Safety on Border.

Secretary Baker today said the expedition in charge of Funston could best be described as a "defensive expedition."

Funston, he said, had been told to draw on the forces in his department at will and that the war department will see that his border patrol is replaced where necessary by troops from other departments. The department made this announcement so that American citizens in border towns should feel no fear for their safety during the operations in Mexico.

Funston reported that Pablo Lopez, who personally led the raid on Columbus, was the leader of the band who murdered a number of Americans at Santa Ysabel several weeks ago. Col. Slocum reported through Gen. Funston that Private James P. Taylor, troop F, Thirteenth cavalry, who was wounded in the Columbus fight, had died.

Col. Slocum reported through Funston today that eleven more dead Mexicans had been found, making a total of fifty-seven, and that eighteen bodies were reported to be lying between the camp at Columbus and the border. Gen. Funston commended highly the accurate fire of the troops at Columbus.

Funston's dispatch confirmed the report that 1,200 Carranzistas are pursuing the Villistas and are carrying a black and white battle flag, in order not to be mistaken by the American forces for the enemy.

Aeroplanes for Service.

The war department has recommended to Funston that the squadron of eight aeroplanes at San Antonio, Tex., be immediately put into active service in the campaign for observation work. The department considers this an excellent opportunity for the development and training of an aerial service in the army.

Gen. Funston's last dispatch was sent from San Antonio, Tex., but it is presumed at the department that he is moving along the seat of operations, keeping a general supervision over the whole campaign.

The department has received a number of offers of individuals and organizations for service in Mexico, but has declined them all so far, and does not expect it will be necessary to accept such service.

Funston's dispatches are now being sent in code and practically no details are being given out by the department.

Face Guerrilla Warfare.

Facing guerrilla warfare, in unfamiliar territory, and against a desperate, treacherous foe, probably heavy loss of life was not doubted. By overwhelming, sudden envelopment of Villa and his outlaws the army hopes to prevent extensive fighting. If Villa is not crushed decisively and quickly the administration believes operations on a much greater scale may be necessary.

The president wants to avoid such a campaign as would entail use of militia or calling of volunteers. Any delay in moving the regulars across the boundary would be to this end—to have every arm in readiness for fast work.

The American troops are going into a mesquite covered desert. The character of the country promises many obstacles. Establishing of supply bases at various points along the border for food, ammunition, and especially water, were prime factors.

GEN. PERSHING NOTED AS EXPERT IN GUERRILLA WAR

Indian Fighter Who Will Hunt Down Villa Is Hero of Many Battles.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

There are few officers in the army who possess so distinguished a record for bravery and efficient service as Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing, who has been assigned the task of rounding up Francisco Villa and exterminating his band of outlaws, and there is, perhaps, no man so skillful in guerilla warfare and Indian fighting.

With a brilliant record in the Philippines behind him—a record that gained for him a promotion from captain to brigadier general over the heads of 862 officers of higher rank—and the memory of a great tragedy still fresh in his mind—the death of his wife and three children in a fire at the Presidio in San Francisco last August—Gen. Pershing may be expected to give a swift and sure account of his command in the Mexican expedition.

Many Friends in Chicago.

He has many friends in Chicago, where he formerly resided. He came here in 1884 with his brother, James F. Pershing of 5327 Cornell avenue, and has been the guest of his brother many times in recent years.

He has the distinction of being the only white man honored by a datto—a judge, counselor, and chieftain—by the Moro tribes in the Philippines, an honor he gained by being able to govern the tribes through their own laws and beliefs as translated from the Koran.

He knows every foot of the country over which he will have to lead his men. He covered it all years ago in the memorable pursuit of Geronimo.

Sent to West Point from Missouri.

Gen. Pershing was born in Linn county, Missouri, on Oct. 13, 1860, and was appointed to West Point from that state. His career there was an honor both to himself and to that famous institution, and he rose to the rank of senior cadet captain. He left the academy to become second lieutenant of the Sixth cavalry, then pursuing Geronimo across the arid plains and hills of northern Mexico. Once his troop established a record of 130 miles in forty-seven hours.

In April, 1889, when in command of troop A, at Fort Wingate, Pershing set out with ten men to rescue some horse thieves and cowboys from 100 armed and maddened Zuni Indians. Through a strategic maneuver he obtained the release of the prisoners, rounded up the Indians, and marched every last one of them captive into Fort Wingate. It was years before army men ceased to talk of this exploit.

Takes Part in Sioux War.

Later Pershing was transferred to the northwest, where he took part in the Sioux campaigns of 1890-1891. Later he commanded the Sioux scouts until detailed as military instructor at the University of Nebraska.

The declaration of war with Spain found him an instructor in tactics at West Point. He immediately asked to be sent to the front, and was assigned to the Tenth cavalry, which did distinguished service at Santiago. After the war with Spain he was made a major and assistant adjutant general in the volunteer service, and was sent to the Philippines where he commanded an expeditionary force into the Island of Mindinao, to restore order and subdue the Moros.

One of his most stubborn fights was in the capture of Bacolod, after his force had been surprised by a large band of Moros. One hundred Moros were killed and many wounded. Pershing's loss was three wounded.

Tells of Bacolod Battle.

At another place in the island several thousand Moros manned a chain of six forts, upon which several brass cannon had been mounted. Pershing reduced them all. In telling of the Bacolod incident in a letter to a friend, Gen. Pershing said:

"First we got behind the enemy, much to their surprise, and could post our guns on the heights above and drop projectiles down into their fort, so that the artillery fire in this case was not all noise. We had some work and some fighting to gain this position.

"The fight began in a flood of rain that lasted all night and reconnoitering was difficult. The natives had such confidence in this fort they had been constructing for a year that they took their women and children inside, and these escaped during the fight.

Move in Face of Fire.

"Our main obstacle was a ditch thirty-five feet wide and forty feet deep. It was to be bridged, according to our plan, with fallen trees and over all a bamboo laid. In the face of a heavy fire our lines advanced against two fronts of the fort, putting out of business every Moro that appeared. When the lines were within fifty yards the bridge was completed by the companies detailed for that purpose, the trees having been previously cut and hauled as near as could be safely done.

"Thirty minutes later the assaulting infantry swung across and clambered up nearly in line to the top of the parapet. Here they were met with kampilan and kris and a bloody hand to hand fight occurred—one soldier against two Moros here, another turning his bayonet into a fanatic there, and Moros plunging headlong into the deep ditch in their impetuosity and impetus. It was, as a whole, a scene never to be forgotten."

Moros Respect Him.

After that the Moros had respect for Pershing. They found he was a very different type of man to deal with than the vascillating Spaniards they had been used to. He was appointed military governor of the district around Iligan and soon won the confidence of the natives through a knowledge of the Koran which he had studied.

The Sultan of Sulu appointed him a datto, an office almost as supreme in power as that of the sultan himself, and he came to be hailed as a "prophet" and a "priest." The natives brought their troubles to him and he acted as judge.

An early evidence of the faith imposed in him was when three children made orphans by the war were brought to him for disposition, although it had been the rule to sell such children into slavery. Pershing adopted the three children, a girl and two boys. Later the girl married at the age of 12, one of the boys died, and the other proved an incorrigible.

Attache at Tokio.

After he left the Philippines Pershing was assigned to the embassy at Tokio as military attaché. In January, 1905, he was married in Washington to Miss Helen Frances Warren, daughter of United States Senator Warren from Wyoming.

Mrs. Pershing and three of their four children were suffocated last August in a fire at the Presidio. At that time it was said they might have been rescued had not the red tape of the army prevented the earlier arrival of fire apparatus from the Panama-Pacific exposition, a short distance away. At that time Gen. Pershing was detailed at El Paso.

Picked as Hunter of Pancho Villa.

John J. Pershing.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11.—Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston will not go to the border for the present to assume charge of operations against Villa. Brig. Gen. Pershing in all likelihood will have active control of the punitive expedition.

BAKER ASSURES COMMANDERS OF FULL AUTHORITY

Head of American Expedition, Not Carranza, Will Determine on Measures.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Army men today, continuing in almost steady conference, found two prime causes for satisfaction over Mexican affairs. The first was the praise given by Maj. Gen. Funston to the work of the men under Col. Slocum at Columbus.

The second was the definite assurance from Newton D. Baker, the new secretary of war, that the prosecution of the campaign against Villa would be left entirely with the general in command of the expedition, who would not be subjected to too much advice from Washington.

The declaration that the state department will rely largely on the discretion of the military commander also has done much to help the army enthusiasm.

Funston Given Free Rein.

This position was shown by Secretary Baker this afternoon during his long conference with Lindley M. Garrison, his predecessor, and Maj. Gen. Hugh Scott, chief of staff. All three were present during the interview.

"The instructions given are quite explicit," Mr. Baker said. "The army is to disperse the band or bands which attacked the village of Columbus."

"And capture any?"

"If possible," he smiled.

"And how long is allowed for the job?"

"Gen. Funston is authorized to stay until the forces of the Carranza government are able to restore and maintain order so far as these bandits are concerned."

"And suppose Carranza announces to us that the 1,200 troops he has sent to Palomas are able to restore and maintain order, will Funston have to come out?"

"You mean is Carranza to be the judge?" queried the secretary. "Gen. Funston is to be the judge. He is to decide whether the Mexican soldiers can end the bandit raids."

Will Provide Sufficient Forces.

Mr. Baker said that Gen. Funston had been assured that however many men he sends into Mexico there will be sent to the border a sufficient number to protect the American side against sporadic raids. He declined to say whether a request for reinforcements had yet been made by Funston.

"Will there be a call for state troops?" he was asked.

"Do you mean the present organized forces of the national guard in the various states? If so, there is at present not the slightest intention of calling out such volunteers."

It is not known haw many dispatches came to the border through Gen. Funston, who for directing purposes remains for the present at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, Tex. Only a few were made public, among them one announcing the death from wounds received at the Columbus fight of James P. Taylor of Troop F, Thirteenth cavalry.

Pershing May Lead Troops.

Another message was from Col. Slocum and reported the sighting of a portion of the 1,200 Carranza cavalrymen whom Carranza announced he had sent to Palomas.

The list of accounted Mexican dead has been raised by Col. Slocum to fifty-seven, with eighteen more bodies reported by outposts. The message announcing this is ended by Gen. Funston's message to his superior:

"I have never heard of anything to equal the effectiveness of the fire of our troops on this occasion."

There is no statement from army headquarters to explain why Funston is not to lead the troops, as he originally urged, nor to prove finally that Brig. Gen. Pershing has been selected to head the expedition with Funston remaining on the American side in control of all military affairs on the border as in the past. That it will be a brigadier general is stated definitely, and there is reason to believe that it will be Pershing, who is already on the ground.

May Use Aerial Squadron.

The arrival of the Tenth cavalry from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., at Fort Sam Houston sugests the inclusion of considerably more than 5,000 horse in the first expedition and may presage the arrival of still more troops.

Tonight's general orders, supplementing those which directed certain cavalry regiments to prepare for immediate entraining, send the eight aeroplanes from Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, to join the advance expedition.

The orders also bring about the mobilizing of additional cavalry reserves now stationed far from the raid zone. These are the First cavalry, divided now among the Presidio of Monterey, San Diego, and Calexico, all in California; Fifth cavalry, now divided among Fort Myer, Va. (the most famous riders of the regular service), Fort Leavenworth, Kas., and Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Eleventh cavalry at Oglethorpe, Ga.; Twelfth cavalry, now at Fort Robinson, Neb.; Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and Fort Meade, S. D.

LIGHT BRIGADE HERO DIES.

Illinoisan, Believed Last Survivor of Famous British Regiment, Succumbs at Joliet.

Joliet, Ill., March 11.—William Roberts, 86 years old, believed to be the last of the survivors of the Twelfth Royal Lancers, the heroes of Tennyson's poem, "Charge of the Light Brigade," died here today of old age. He was one of the "noble six hundred," but missed the gallant charge at the battle of Balaklava when sent as a special courier to another division.

DOUBLE BORDER PATROLS.

More Troops Sent to Nogales, Ariz. —Wild Rumors of Invasion Stir Up Frontier.

Nogales, Ariz., March 11.—Patrols along the international boundary near here were doubled today. Wild rumors promising invasion of the United States as well as invasion of Mexico were carried through the crowds which filled the streets in Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora, just across the border. Both towns were tranquil tonight.

TROOPS ON MOVE; RUSH TO BORDER FOR VILLA CHASE

Funston Ordered to Turn Expedition Over to Subordinate; Will Rule Campaign.

San Antonio., Tex., March 11.—Orders were issued at Fort Sam Houston late today for the Second battalion of engineers, composed of companies E, G, and H, with Maj. L. Brown commanding, to entrain. Similar orders were issued to Field hospital No. 7, Maj. Jere B. Clayton commanding, and to ambulance company No. 7, Maj. Harold L. Jones commanding. No destinations were announced except that the details would go "west."

The engineering detail comprises one-third of the United States engineering corps and the order to entrain indicates that heavy engineering work is expected ahead of the expeditionary force.

Each company of the battalion is composed of from 140 to 150 men.

Funston to Stay Home.

Instructed by the war department at Washington that he was not to command personally the troops that will cross the Rio Grande into Mexico to search for Francisco Villa, Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston today began to arrange the details of the expedition and to plan for the safeguarding of the entire Mexican border.

During the day the general conferred frequently with his staff at Fort Sam Houston, southern department headquarters. A close censorship was established, however, on proceedings. All announcements were made by Gen. Funston himself.

Will Give Free Hand.

From Gen. Funston came this information:

That an officer subordinate to him, a brigadier general, would command the punitive expedition.

That this officer would have complete charge in the field and would not be hampered by unnecessary instructions.

That it would take two or three days to organize the force or forces that will go in pursuit of Villa.

That the first aero squadron, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, will be a part of the expeditionary force.

That a close watch will be kept at all border points for any symptoms of disorder that will necessitate the movement of troops.

Troop Moves a Secret.

Gen. Funston, for military reasons refused to state how large the expeditionary force would be, the time the forward movement would start, whether there would be one or several forces, and the point or points at which the Rio Grande would be crossed when the search began.

If there should be more than one expeditionary force, the common direction will fall to Gen. Funston.

Carranza Men on Border.

Douglas, Ariz., March 11.—Trains bringing approximately 1,000 infantry and cavalry of the de facto forces arrived at Naco, Sonora, tonight. These commands will start overland early tomorrow for Agua Prieta, from where they will be distributed at various points along the Sonora and Chihuahua borders in an effort to assist the American forces in their task of rounding up Villa's forces, according to Mexican officials.

FUNSTON TO DIRECT CAPTURE OF VILLA FROM AMERICAN SIDE OF THE BORDER

SAYS MEXICANS WILL BE UNITED TO MEET ATTACK

Villa Prisoner Asserts Whole Nation Is Ready to Fight Against "Invasion."

Columbus, N. M., March 11.—That almost the entire Mexican nation will rise against the invading American forces was the opinion expressed here today by Capt. Isador Farias, one of the wounded prisoners taken in the Villista raid Thursday, which has cost eighteen American lives.

"The American invasion will make Villa the national Mexican hero," Farias said. "Villa and his men probably will retire before the American soldiers for a time. But when the interior is reached the Villa forces will be strengthened a hundredfold by Mexicans who resent the invasion."

Six Mexican prisoners released by the Thirteenth United States cavalry were found riddled with bullets a mile east of this town this afternoon. They had been released and told to leave the city.

Some of the Mexicans were alleged to have aided the Villistas during Thursday's raid. An investigation is being conducted by both military and civil authorities.

The army officials denied that the "Ley de Fuega" had been applied to the prisoners.

Eager to Run Villa Down.

Eagerness to be away in pursuit of Villa was displayed today in the activities of United States troops on the border here. Confident that an early start would result in the speedy capture of Villa and the extermination of outlaw bands in northern Mexico, the border forces here had preparations completed to move immediately upon receipt of orders.

Constant vigilance was maintained by sentries and the daylight hours passed without important incident. John Blankenship, section foreman at Milpias, eighteen miles west, and family, arrived here and told of a raid on their home by bandits before dawn. Blankenship, his wife, and two children, heard the Mexicans approaching and sought cover in the brush until the band disappeared.

Officers and men of the Thirteenth cavalry attended funeral services for their comrades, killed in Thursday's fighting, and escorted their bodies to the train that carried them east. As the train moved away buglers sounded taps. In the procession marched Gen. Bertani, commander of the Carranza troops at Palomas, in respect to the American dead.

Officer for Villa Dies.

Capt. Pablo Garzia, a Villa officer, died of his wounds. Another Mexican prisoner, shot through the head, the bullet penetrating six inches in the right brain lobe, is expected by army physicians to recover.

Seven wounded Villa soldiers, captured by Col. H. J. Slocum's troopers of the Thirteenth United States cavalry in Thursday's battle here, will be charged with murder for the killing of the seven American soldiers slain in the fight, according to an announcement today by E. B. Stone, special agent of the department of justice. The prisoners include a boy 12 years old and two officers.

VILLA GOING TO SOUTHWEST.

Bandit Leader Reported to Be on Way in Direction of El Tigre District.

Columbus, N. M., March 11.—Villa, according to an official telegram received at the headquarters of the Thirteenth cavalry tonight, has moved southwest towards the Sonora state border in the general direction of the El Tigre mine district.

The land of horrors.
Land of bandits, outlaws, thieves.
Where the cut-throat and marauder,
Only blood and ashes leaves,
Mexico!

Mexico!
The land degraded,
Land on which the black blight fell;
Where the impish, fiendish orgies
Make it anteroom to hell,
Mexico!

Mexico!
The land of sorrow,
Land of anguish, dazed with grief,
Where the people lying prostrate,
Cry to heaven for relief,
Mexico!

Mexico!
The land of promise,
Land of treasures yet untold,
Where lie fallow future Edens,
Wealth and beauty to unfold,
Mexico!

In whose hands shall ever be,
Power to crush these feeble people,
Or to lift and make them free.

CORPORAL BARMAZAL ALIVE AND MAY GET WELL, REPORT.

Chicago Family Preparing for Funeral, but Dispatch Says Mexican Victim Will Recover.

While his family in Chicago was planning the funeral arrangements for Corporal Michael Barmazal of the Thirteenth cavalry, who was reported dead from a wound received in the raid on Columbus, N. M., the Associated Press sent out a bulletin stating that the boy was alive and doing nicely.

The Associate Press report sustains the private advice received from THE TRIBUNE's correspondent at El Paso, who wired last night:

"Corporal Michael Barmazal is alive and well. I have just talked to the sergeant in charge of Fort Bliss hospital over long distance telephone and he said that Barmazal undoubtedly will recover."

Barmazal is the son of Mrs. Michael Brown of 1215 South Homan avenue. Yesterday she received a telegram announcing her son's death from Lieut. John Lucas, commanding her son's troop.

The dispatches agree that Barmazal was shot in the neck.

HOUSE KNOWS NOTHING OF PLAN TO BUY NORTH MEXICO.

Colonel Denies Trip Was to Sound European Capitals on $200,000,000 Deal.

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—A report has been circulated in the financial district recently, and has even appeared in business publications, that one of the purposes of Col. Edward M. House's visit to European capitals was to sound the sentiment of the foreign powers on a proposition of the United States to acquire the northern part of Mexico by purchase. Some reports are that $200,000,000 was the price to be paid.

Col. House was in his home, 115 East Fifty-third street, today when asked about this rumor.

"I knew nothing of that being a part of my mission until I returned here," he said, smiling. "If the administration has any such plan in prospect I have no knowledge of it."

DIAZ PAPER SEES A WAR BREWING

El Paso Constitution Protests Against U. S. Invasion of Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., March 11.—La Constitucion, which is said to favor the party of Felix Diaz, came out today as little more than a pamphlet of protest against Washington's attitude. On its front page huge black letters across its columns proclaimed:

"We Protest," with this statement beneath: "Villa Is Not Mexico."

The paper then went on to say that individuals of all countries commit crimes against other countries and one crime is no worse than another, that the large and peaceable Mexican colony in El Paso surely cannot be held responsible for the act of one man, such as Villa, and the invasion of Mexico will cause racial feeling to arouse itself on both sides, with the result that both countries may suddenly become involved in a struggle.

In an editorial, the Constitucion declares that the United States has intervened officially in the recent Mexican revolutions; its newspapers have published articles and cartoons to stir up American popular feeling in regard to Mexican affairs, and that not long ago the press praised Villa as the Napoleon of Mexico; and that American business interests have helped to finance and equip various revolutionary parties for selfish reasons.

Then, in heavily leaded type, the paper recalled the case of French intervention in Mexico in 1862 under treaties that were afterwards entirely disregarded in the forcing of Maximilian upon a throne. La Constitucion implies that the pending invasion is likely to result in the same way as in 1862.

El Paso Del Norte, an influential independent paper, spreads the heading across the front page, "The American Government Orders the Invasion of Mexico," but adds as a subheading, "The same government says invasion, not intervention."

TOMORROW SEES MEXICO INVASION; MORMONS SAFE

Await Mobilization of Soldiers at Strategic Points Before Start Across Line.

El Paso, Tex., March 11.—"We're going in Monday."

That was the statement at Fort Bliss tonight. The older men with the shoulder straps did not say it. They were silent. But the boys with plain uniforms said and believed it, and the hour for the armed forces of the United States to leap across the Mexican border after Villa was generally expected to arrive some time Monday.

When marching orders are received, Uncle Sam will go right across the international bridge into Juarez from El Paso. Simultaneously, other forces will cross into Mexico at perhaps Douglas and south of Columbus.

Delay Due to Mobilization.

That was the plan generally accepted by army men tonight. The delay in starting after Villa, they said, was due solely to the physical problems of collecting the necessary men and supplies at the strategic points and to the determination of the department "not to go off half cocked."

As feverish activity progressed at Fort Bliss tonight, indications grew that the Carranzista leaders were opposed to any American invasion of Mexico.

A small detachment of the Juarez garrison was throwing up a breastwork on the south bank of the Rio Grande, almost directly opposite the United States post's wireless station. Fort Bliss officials ridiculed the idea that this had significance.

Mormon Colony Is Safe.

The Mormon colony of Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, is no longer in danger from attack by Villa bandits, according to Gen. Gabriel Gavira, commandant at Juarez. Gen. Gavira stated that sufficient reinforcements had been sent into the district to protect the foreigners there, and that the refugee train held in readiness to leave for the north probably would not be sent.

The only train expected tonight from the south was a special carrying Gen. Luis Gutierrez from Chihuahua to Juarez, where he is to confer with Gen. Gavira.

In El Paso some apprehension was aroused among the authorities by the large number of Mexicans crossing over into Texas, but an investigation showed that they came to get out of the range of any conflict. Many declared they had seen enough of war.

U. S. Move Friendly Act.

Gen. John J. Pershing issued a statement terming the Villa expedition "a most friendly act of assistance" on the part of the United States, while preparations for the expeditions against Villa were being rushed at Fort Bliss.

Reinforcements are expected here before the expedition gets under way to relieve for active service the seasoned men now on patrol on the border.

The forces on duty in this section consist of two mule batteries of the Fourth artillery, a field battery of the Fifth, nine troops of the Eighth cavalry with the Thirteenth at Columbus, and the Sixth, Seventh, Sixteenth and Twentieth regiments of infantry, besides signal corps and hospital detachments.

ACTIVITY AT ARMY POSTS.

OMAHA, Neb.—Instructions came to railroad offices from the war department immediately to assemble equipment at Fort Meade, S. D., Fort Robinson, Neb., and Fort D. A. Russell, near Cheyenne, Wyo., preparatory to moving the troops now there to the Mexican border.

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—The 2,000 United States troops at Fort D. A. Russell were made ready today for immediate movement on instructions from Washington. Railroads were mobilizing equipment for their use.

STURGIS, S. D.—The Third squadron, Troops I, K, L, M, Twelfth cavalry, stationed at this point, have received orders to be prepared to leave for the Mexican border on a moment's notice.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—The Third United States infantry, stationed at Madison barracks and Fort Ontario, has been notified by the war department to be ready for a possible movement to the Mexican border.

DOUGLAS, Ariz.—The Tenth United States cavalry, Col. W. C. Brown commanding, arrived here from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., after a two days' march.

Chicago Tourists Describe Columbus Terror and Ruins

The first eyewitnesses of the scenes in Columbus, N. M., immediately following the murderous raid of Villa's bandits to reach Chicago told THE TRIBUNE of the massacre last night and brought with them exclusive photographs of the death and devastation wrought by the border ruffians.

E. S. Palmer and D. J. Corcoran were passengers on the Golden State Limited traveling from San Francisco to Chicago. Their story vividly describes the raid of the Mexicans and the ruin they left in their wake.

While their train remained only a short while in Columbus, Mr. Corcoran was able to take three snapshots of the little town. These photographs tell a complete story.

Passengers Told of Trouble.

"The passengers on our train had been warned there was trouble ahead," said Mr. Corcoran. "The raid took place at 4 o'clock in the morning and it was after 7 when we began to grow a little apprehensive.

"A guard train with soldiers aboard was kept ahead of our train and all along the railway we were able to see the cavalry patrols.

"We arrived in Columbus around 10:30 or 11 o'clock in the morning. The sight that met us was horrible.

"The first building of the town proper was an adobe shack, used for customs purposes, at the right side of the railway track. Across the street from this is the railway station.

Few Buildings Standing.

"These two buildings seemed to be the only ones standing on the right side of the track. A little further down the right side of the track is the cavalry camp.

"But on the north side of the railway almost everything was in ruins. We experienced some difficulty because the left side of the train was closed and the passengers naturally were all eager to view the stricken town, but we managed to open a vestibule door and go into the town for a few moments.

"Mr. Corcoran was able to take some snapshots despite the orders of the soldiers that none approach the ruins.

Hotel Totally Destroyed.

"The hotel had stood immediately across the street from the station. This was totally destroyed. In fact, there was scarcely a scrap of material left to show where it had stood. The sheet iron coping lay where it fell and only this indicated the funeral urn for some brave Americans slaughtered by the raid of the Villistas.

"Beyond the hotel was a row of common buildings. In front of these was a huge fire. Coal had been heaped up and the kerosene and gasolene from scores of containers poured over the coal. The bodies of twenty-seven Mexican raiders were thrown on this heap and the whole thing fired.

"This fire was burning fiercely when we stepped off the train and we were able to see some of the bodies tossed into the flames.

Take Injured Aboard.

"The train remained in Columbus only long enough to take aboard those who had been injured. There were a number of soldiers. Three of these were badly wounded, one shot through the arm and his two companions being shot through the body. And yet, badly wounded, they were game enough to go over the whole story of the raid for us and explain the conditions of the border warfare.

"One man, a storekeeper whose name I did not learn, told me that the looters came into his place all ready to shoot. 'But I got four of them before they got me,' he told me. He was shot through the body and was permitted to lie in his store in the belief that he had been killed. After the raid was over he was found by citizens and given first aid.

First Aid Quickly Given.

"When the train arrived in Columbus all of the first aid work had been completed and the wounded cared for in the homes that remained. Only those who had been dangerously hurt were removed to El Paso.

"Incidentally I cannot say very much for the treatment given the United States soldiers in El Paso. Two of the men, shot through the body, were permitted to lie on the station platform for half an hour after the train arrived. Another man, shot through the shoulder, was compelled to step off the train without aid. There were no ambulances to take them to the hospitals and the heat made it extremely dangerous for them to remain without surgical aid for so long a time.

"Of course, we were too late to see the actual rioting. The cavalrymen had not returned from their chase after the Mexicans. But the soldiers on the train were able to give us a good description of the whole affair.

"The raiders entered the town from the southeast. At this point there is a deep ravine that runs along the side of a foothill. It was through this sandy ravine, soft enough to prevent noise from the horses' hoofs, that the men following Villa came.

"Of course the cavalry men in camp were asleep except for sentries. Also there was a sentry with a machine gun squad on the crown of the hill at the entrance to the town. It was said that this machine gun refused to work. However it was, there were no shots fired until the Mexicans had entered the limits of the sleeping town and had begun their killing and burning.

Two Troops in the Town.

"There were two troops of cavalry in the encampment and there were three troops on patrol duty along the border. Thus the soldiers were at a keen disadvantage. The fighting was short and bloody. The soldiers, quickly aroused, hurried into the streets and after the conflict there were twenty-seven dead Mexicans in the streets.

"A few soldiers remained on guard and the remainder made a quick dash after the Villa bandits.

"The people of the border, so far as I was able to determine, are thoroughly disgusted with conditions. Even the small boys are carrying revolvers to defend their mothers against the attacks of the Mexicans. The people have been expecting just the sort of thing that has occurred.

Fears More Raids.

"There are cavalrymen patrolling the entire border, but of what use are they against a body of 1,000 men? There will be repetitions of Columbus just as often as Villa chooses to make a dash out of the mountains and down upon the peaceful Americans on the border.

"The soldiers are of the opinion that if Villa gets two or three days' start of the American soldiers it will require 40,000 men to capture him. Villa is a master of the territory south of the border. He has stirred up the ignorant and poorer class of Mexicans to the belief that it will be easy to whip the Americans. These lower classes believe down in their hearts that the Americans will be easy of conquest. When Villa spreads the news that he has taken an American town this belief will be all the more strong. It is thus he is able to recruit more men for his bandit army.

U. S. Faces Dangerous Task.

"Villa never will be taken with ,000 men. This is not because he is such a superior warrior or because his men are competent. But the Americans are up against a dangerous game, pursuing an outlaw with strong force in the Sonora and Chihuahua mountains.

"The Columbus affair is just a recurrence on a larger scale of the many massacres that have taken place in individual instances many times. Immediately after the Columbus affair Villa's men made a dash for another town to the west and committed another outrage before they escaped into Mexico."

FLED IN TERROR.

In Las Cruces, N. M., which is forty-four miles northeast of Columbus, Mrs. Harry Cohen of 134 East Seventeenth street, New York, was residing for her health's sake. She is the wife of a merchant.

"Everybody down around the border was quite nervous," said Mrs. Cohen last night, as she stepped from the Santa Fé train that had carried her to Chicago. "Bloodshed, however, was thought only a possibility. Now it is a fact. We were wakened Thursday morning with the news of the Columbus massacre. Nineteen Americans were dead. Women had not been and would not be spared. And we were only thirty miles from the border!

"I wrote a telegram immediately to my husband, 'Am coming home immediately. Take train at 10 o'clock.'

"I was fearful up to the last minute. Everybody down there now is alarmed."

She left last night for New York.

'ON TO MEXICO' SPIRIT SWEEPS OVER CHICAGO

Recruiting Stations Swamped and Militia Armories Crowded by Eager Civilians.

A single idea pervaded Chicago yesterday and held almost every healthy, able bodied, red blooded young man of the city in its grip. It was:

"If there's going to be war in Mexico, I'm going to do my share."

In times of peace the sight of a khaki clad soldier of Uncle Sam on the streets of the city attracts but little attention, unless it be to attract alleged humorous remarks pertaining to "soldier boys." Then, Americans do not reverence uniforms.

But now it is different, decidedly different. Wherever a "soldier boy" appeared he was treated with a new and marked respect, and many were the glances of envy and admiration he received from husky male citizens who wished devoutly they could change places with him "to be able to get the first crack at those Mexicans."

Patriotic Spirit Rises.

Everywhere patriotism and the spirit of "on to Mexico" manifested itself. Interest in the recruiting offices of the regular army "was trebled in forty-eight hours," to use the words of an officer. All of the armories of the Illinois national guard, the scenes of such bustle and activity as has not been witnessed within them since the Spanish-American war days, were Meccas for hundreds of young men anxious to follow the colors across the Rio Grande. Plans for raising volunteer regiments were made. Even the federal and state naval recruiting offices, which in the present situation naturally would be affected the least, reported an increased number of inquiries for prospective applicants for enlistment.

At United States army recruiting headquarters it was stated by Lieut. F. R. Kenney, chief recruiting officer of the Chicago district, that there was a marked increase in the number of enlistments. Even youths under 21, the age limit required, told the sergeants posted outside the recuiting stations they were older, in the hope that they might be able to enroll.

This led to the issuance of a warning to parents against making false affidavits concerning the ages of their sons. Every suspicious case will be investigated thoroughly, it was pointed out.

Fort Sheridan on Move.

It was learned during the day that the soldiers stationed at Fort Sheridan, comprising troops A, B, C, D, a machine gun troop, and signal, hospital, and quartermaster corps of the Fifth cavalry, may be called to the border at any moment. Lieut. Col. Daniel L. Tate, commanding the post at present, received the following order from Col. D. A. Frederick, commander of the department of the lakes:

Hold command in readiness to move for the Mexican border at once.

"Rookies" Form Regiment.

The Fort Sheridan training camp volunteers was organized at the Hotel La Salle last night by a group of citizen-soldiers, who underwent a system of military training at Fort Sheridan last summer.

The purpose of the organization is to muster a complete regiment of citizen volunteer soldiers to be attached to the regular army for duty in Mexico or any other military activities the United States may be called upon to undergo.

At another meeting, to be held at the Hotel La Salle this afternoon, the organization of the officers will be completed and permanent headquarters established in the Hotel La Salle.

EUROPE TO NEED AMERICAN BLOOD IF IT SURVIVES

Prince of Monaco Sees Continent a Possible Desert—Wars Beget Wars.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—[Correspondence.]—It is to America that the Prince of Monaco looks for the regeneration of Europe.

"The only chance for the survival and future civilization of Europe," said he in receiving the correspondent of the Associated Press, "is the infusion of American blood into European peoples, and if such a thing were possible," he added smilingly, "I would like to see the best physiological means used for the purpose of injecting it. No country has done more for the progress of humanity than America, and it is only by learning from America that there can ever be such a thing as a United States of Europe.

"But there is this difficulty. European peoples are the slaves of tradition. It is in their blood, resisting every tendency to change. They live, as it were, in a web of race prejudices and customs and ideas which only the adoption of the American outlook can alter. If this change does not take place, and there should be three or four more wars in the modern style, Europe will become a desert.

Finest Men Dying.

"Every war sows the seed of other wars. Many colonels of regiments will tell you that the first 200 of their men killed in battle are always the finest men in the regiment, and thus war takes away the best of the race and leaves its reproduction to those of inferior quality. A few more such wars and Europe will be devastated, and those who are left with any strength or spirit will seek another sphere for their energies. That is why the peace at the end of the war must be established on such strong elements that the future may be for a long time preserved against brutal force, not one that will lead to further wars by unjust treatment towards the independence of any nation."

As the possible basis of such a peace Prince Albert said:

"The best basis is that of nationality. It is a complicated problem, but with the exercise of good will not insoluble. On this principle there need be no intrusion of political or extraterritorial ambitions

Prince a Man of Science.

Prince Albert of Monaco has won a more solid reputation as an oceanographer and man of science than as the ruler of the small but famous principality from which he takes his title. When not engaged on ocean exploration he usually resides in Paris. His chief part in the war is concerned with the maintenance of about 1,000 beds in his principality for the use of the wounded, and with the hospitable care, at his spacious "hotel" in the Avenue du Trocadero, of a weekly draft of four homeless soldiers on war leave from the front.

Kaiser Not for War.

The prince, though best known to the world as a scientific student of the ocean and its wonders, is a personality of greater interest today as one of the German emperor's oldest friends.

"To me," he said to the correspondent, "the kaiser's appearance under such unexpected features when he was reaching the highest level of power, success, and influence is a mystery I cannot fathom. He has plenty of discrimination and good sense, as I often had occasion to notice when he spoke of some man or group he had been talking to, sometimes for several hours at a time. I don't yet see clearly enough his own will appearing in the character of this war, which is the most humiliating blow ever given to civilization. It is quite possible, I think, that the kaiser was forced into the war by two great influences in his country—militarism and pan-Germanism. Besides, it is not after a few months that sufficient light can be thrown upon such complicated events to obtain historical truth."

INSTRUCTIONS FOR GUIDANCE IN THE USE, CARE, AND MAINTENANCE OF ARMAMENT IN DEFENSIVELY ARMED MERCHANT SHIPS.

1. The Master should arrange wherever possible that the space in the immediate vicinity of the gun is railed off, and passengers and other unauthorised persons should not be allowed near the gun.

2. A notice to this effect should be posted up near the gun.

3. When the ship is in harbour, one of the two Ratings is always to be on board to keep guard on the gun and ammunition, and the Master is to use his discretion as to keeping both Ratings on board, should he consider such a course to be desirable.

4. The gun is to be kept covered at all times when not in use.

5. Whenever the ships anchor in the vicinity of a man-of-war, a request should be made to the Commanding Officer of the man-of-war for an armourer to inspect the gun and mounting.

ISSUED TO

DEFENSIVELY ARMED MERCHANT SHIPS.

ADMIRALTY,
GUNNERY BRANCH.
(G [illegible] May 1915)

To back up their latest note to the United States on its submarine warfare Germany submitted facsimile copies of the instructions of the British admiralty to its armed merchantmen. These facsimiles were sent as appendices to Germany's formal note submitted to Secretary Lansing last Monday.

A copy of the note was brought to "The Tribune" by Carolyn Wilson, its staff correspondent, who has just returned from abroad. In yesterday's "Tribune" two of the secret British admiralty orders taken by the Germans from the steamers Woodfield and Linkmoor were published. Above are given other orders found on the Woodfield as to the use of the guns carried by armed merchantmen and when they should be employed against enemy submarines.

CONFIDENTIAL. No. 45

In no circumstances is this Paper to be allowed to fall into the hands of the Enemy.

This paper is for the Master's personal information. It is not to be copied, and when not actually in use is to be kept in safety in a place where it can be destroyed at a moment's notice.

Such portions as call for immediate action may be communicated verbally to the officers concerned.

25th February 1915.

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING SUBMARINES APPLICABLE TO VESSELS CARRYING A DEFENSIVE ARMAMENT.

1. Defensively armed vessels should follow generally the instructions for ordinary merchant ships.

2. In submarine waters, guns should be kept in instant readiness.

3. If a submarine is obviously pursuing a ship, by day, and it is evident to the Master that she has hostile intentions, the ship pursued should open fire in self-defence, notwithstanding the submarine may not have committed a definite hostile act such as firing a gun or torpedo.

4. In view of the great difficulty in distinguishing a friend from an enemy at night, fire should not be opened after dark unless it is absolutely certain that the vessel fired at is hostile.

5. Before opening fire, the British Colours should be hoisted.

It is essential that fire should not be opened under Neutral Colours.

FRENCH LIFE LOSS GREAT.

BERLIN, March 11.—French losses to March 1, 1916, totaled 2,500,000, according to a semi-official statement given out here today.

The information came from sources at Amsterdam, it was stated, and is based upon a confidential report made by Gen. Gallieni, French war minister. According to this report, the French have lost 800,000 killed, 1,400,000 wounded, among these 400,000 seriously wounded, and 300,000 missing.

From the same source it was stated the British losses total 600,000.

RENEW ALBANIA FIGHTING; AUSTRIANS REPEL ITALIANS.

Emmanuel's Men Below Durazzo Fall Back on Avlona After Short Artillery Fight.

BERLIN, March 11.—[By Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.]—Fighting between Italian and Austrian troops in Albania has been renewed. Austrian forces advancing along the coast below Durazzo encountered Italian soldiers who, after a few skirmishes, fell back in the direction of Avlona, their principal position in Albania.

The official Austrian account of these operations and the progress of the campaign on the main Austro-Italian front, as received here today from Vienna, follows:

Balkan front—Italian troops which remained on the lower Semeni, being menaced by our eastern wing, hurriedly withdrew after firing some shots with cannon. The Italians then offered temporary resistance on the heights north of Feres, but soon left and crossed the Vojusa river, destroying all bridges behind them.

Northern Albania and Montenegro are completely calm.

Italian front—The artillery fire on the Isonzo front is more active. In the Doberbo sector there is fighting with mine throwers and hand grenades.

Italian Losses Heavy?

BERLIN, March 11.—Italian soldiers, home on furloughs, report terrible Italian losses and a hopeless situation on the Austrian front, according to interviews printed in the Berlin newspapers today. Out of one Italian battalion, 400 have been killed and the rest captured by the Austrians, the reports said. Another company returned with only thirty men. The Italian troops are said to be suffering from cold and exposure on the Alpine front.

Aid Portuguese Defense.

LISBON, March 11.—The Portuguese cabinet has resigned to give place to a national defense government which is being formed.

Parliament adopted a resolution giving the government power to take all measures necessitated by the state of war existing with Germany. Leaders of all the opposition groups offered to support the government. At the suggestion of the president of the chamber cheers were given for the entente allies.

After a lengthy interview with the Portuguese secretary for foreign affairs Herr Rosen, the German minister to Portugal, left today on a special train for Madrid.

FATE OF VERDUN NOT VITAL, VIEW OF NORTHCLIFFE

English Publisher Says Fall of Fort Would Put Germans Little Nearer Paris.

LONDON, March 11.—Lord Northcliffe, who has just visited the Verdun battlefield, in a message to the Weekly Dispatch, declares that Verdun is a great deal more interesting than important.

"It does not need a personal visit to the battlefield to realize this," the newspaper publisher continues. "If the Germans think that an attack on the unarmed and dismantled forts of Verdun opens the road to Paris, they have a very faint notion of the French preparations and the French power of resistance."

Comparing the present German troops with those who fought early in the war, Baron Northcliffe says:

"Last week I saw German prisoners who had escaped the hellish fire of the French 75s at Verdun. Where had gone those splendid stalwarts captured at the battle of the Marne?

Finds Germans Weary of War.

"Much of the rank and file now left of the Germans is undersized and badly dressed, with faces that bear a look of fright that seems as if it would last a lifetime. With two exceptions among those with whom I spoke, all were utterly weary of warfare and begged to be told when peace could be expected.

"The fact about the whole war is that Germany is in the position of a besieged city, and she is striking out blindly by land at Verdun. She will presently, I am convinced, strike out by sea."

Turning to the actual fighting at Verdun, Lord Northcliffe says: "Not a word is hinted in anything sent out from Germany of the horrible slaughter to which the German troops have been subjected this week. Thursday was a black day for the Germans, when, drugged with ether, the men came on in mass formation to be mowed down by the French 75s and machine guns, as usual.

Call French Reports Accurate.

"Reports published in the English newspapers from Paris are to my personal knowledge on the whole most accurate, and they show that for one or many reasons the crown prince is gambling with human life to an extent unprecedented, even in this war."

BERLIN CONFIDENT THAT ALLIES WILL BE BEATEN

GERMANY UNIT IN HOPES FOR FINAL VICTORY

Whole Nation Works and Endures to Nullify the British Blockade.

Miss Carolyn Wilson, whose many brilliant articles on the war have appeared in "The Tribune," has just returned from Germany, where she made an exhaustive study of the internal conditions of the country. She has summed up her observations in a series of fourteen masterly articles which show the true attitude and condition of the German people after nearly twenty months of war.

The subjects studied are treated in separate articles, as follows:

1. Introduction.
2. Germany and raw materials.
3. Germany's food and fodder question.
4. Germany and repopulation.
5. Part women are playing.
6. Germany's plans for future trade in China.
7. Germany's hope for trade in Turkey and the meaning of the Bagdad railway.
8. Germany's attitude toward America.
9. Germany's friendship for Ireland and the Irish company in the German army.
10. Germany and the problem of Poland.
11. Germany and finance.
12. German prison camps.
13. Peace plans.
14. Conclusions.

The first article, which is presented herewith, gives a general idea of life in the big cities of the empire.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

[Copyright: 1916: By The Tribune Company.]

Germany after exactly a year. Was she being starved out, as my English friends asserted? Was she so short of raw materials that this strict English blockade need only be kept up another six months and the war would be over?

Was she financially so decrepit that her bankers were counseling the state to give in? Were there noisy, fatal riots in the streets, women crying for bread, soldiers running down a hundred women with their bayonets, as my morning's England paper had reported?

HELD ONCE AS SPY.

How was I going to be treated, anyway, if I did succeed in getting into Germany? Remembering my last experience there, locked up for a week in a two by four cell, under suspicion as a French spy, with the firing squad practicing target shooting every morning before breakfast, I wasn't sure it I wanted to try it again or not.

However, armed with several cordial telegrams from friends in the foreign office, I started for the frontier, and after going through a strict examination of baggage and person they called me out and, waving a well thumbed yellow book in my face, said accusingly:

"Why didn't you tell us you were a member of the Ford party?"

NAME AMONG FORD PACIFISTS.

"But I'm not," I disclaimed with haste, if not with anger.

"Your name is in this book," they informed me with unavoidable finality, "and no matter how much you may try you can't get through."

"I'll bet you ten marks," I said to the under officer who was conducting the examination, "that I am back again and get through within ten days."

Like a good sport he took me up, and so I was extremely interested in my next trip to get a glimpse of him and remind him. But he came out of his office himself when my passport was presented and, digging into his pocket, said with a rueful smile:

"You get the best of it both ways—not only get into Germany but get the money, too."

Is there a difference during this year? every one asks.

Yes, of course there is a difference in Germany—a big difference. It lies not only in the streets and the restaurants and the hotels; it lies in the homes, too. Life is more serious, more intent, more expensive and more carefully sparing.

SEES FEWER YOUNG MEN.

When I was there before it seemed as if all the young men of the nation were out promenading the streets in the afternoon in a sort of bravado against the reports that Germany had called on her last conscript.

But this time the streets are comparatively empty of men in civilian's costumes who might be called on to go to the front.

The reports of the number of men between 18 and 42 years of age who are still employed in various businesses is large enough to warrant the Germans in their assertion that they still have millions to call upon. But there are not the millions of last year.

As to expense. Living continues to be less expensive than it was in Paris or London, thanks to the careful regulation of prices by the government, but restaurant prices are almost twice as high as they were last year. And the increase is going on.

Electricity becomes more expensive after April 1. Taxes are being put on every form of income and industrial gain. Fodder is so dear that it is cheaper to be a human than a horse these days.

Meat Days Are Named.

Then beside the expense there is the difficulty of getting various forms of food, notably butter, milk, eggs, and all forms of fresh pork. The government has regulated, as you all know, that Monday and Thursday no food shall be cooked or served with fats of any kind.

Tuesday and Friday there shall be no meat and Saturday there shall be no form of pork sold. They have further restricted selling hours for pork and fresh meat, so that if the purchasers are not there on the dot they have to go home meatless and thus economise (unwillingly) for the state.

This limited time for selling butter is responsible for the long butter lines outside the hundreds of small butter stores in Berlin. I know families who have been without butter for four and five weeks because their maids never get into line early enough to get any butter. There are various parts of the country, notably east Prussia, where it is almost impossible to get any butter, and some friends of mine in Königsberg were six weeks without butter and five weeks without milk.

Now that the new butter cards have gone into effect, it will probably be easier, as each member of the family may receive only a quarter of a pound and it will do no good for the maid to go and stand in line for two hours to get more than her share.

These butter lines are the reason for the optimistic statements in English papers regarding German riots, and crowds crying for bread and peace in one breath. The line usually is standing five to six hours, sometimes beginning as early as 5 o'clock in the morning.

These cold days waiting becomes tedious, and, as there are always half a dozen policemen to keep the quarter of a mile of butter seekers in order and trained down to a long, slim line, the belligerent spirits often try to wander from the limits laid down by the policeman and sneak up under a warm shelter.

German People Not Discouraged.

In all my travels throughout Germany this time, although I heard many persons speak about peace, and wish that the war was over, it was never with a spirit of discontent with the government or of criticism, but the humanitarian wish for the good of all the countries.

It is undoubtedly true that a large percentage of the Germans want peace, and naturally want it now during the height of Germany's military achievements. Their financial situation must necessarily become worse instead of better, and if there is any possibility of making a peace that is not too disadvantageous, I think Germany would be willing to do so.

I spoke of the expense of living, and the high taxes, as well as the money to be paid in on the generously subscribed war loans; and yet in spite of these drains, there is no lack of money being spent. I went into several jewelers' shops with a friend from Copenhagen, who was buying her diamonds in Germany on account of the advantage of exchange on American money. Every shop was full of women looking at diamonds and pearl necklaces, rings or large gold bags.

Woman Buys Costly Jewelry.

In one store two women came in and asked to see pearl necklaces. The man laid out six, all costing $3,500 or over. The elder woman, who was in mourning, looked at them casually through her lorgnette, took perhaps three minutes in deciding, and bought one costing over $5,000, and then asked to see diamond earrings.

These took her a little longer, comparing the color and brilliancy—six minutes perhaps. But at most she wasn't in the shop for fifteen minutes when she left, having paid about $6,500 for jewelry.

And this is no exception; jewelers tell me they have never had such good business, and they give as a reason for this the fact there are many widows of officers who brought a large dot to their husbands at marriage, and have never had control of a penny of it until now.

In place of paying taxes on this income, they are investing it in jewels which up to the present have not been taxed, and which may be a good investment in other countries after the war if the value of the German mark continues to fall at its present rate.

There appears to be in all Germany a big boom in spite of the high prices, for there are thousands making fortunes (on paper) out of the war. It all goes round in a circle—the government pays out huge sums for contracts and labor, calls for loans, and gets its own money back again.

However, on account of the new and strong movement against any form of unnecessary import, there will probably be no money leaving the country; for Germany has now reached the point where she only exports to neighboring neutral countries the goods they really need in return for goods, not money. A new law has gone into effect forbidding the import of "luxus" articles, such as oysters, caviar, cheeses, silks through Holland which had come from France, and various other articles which had to be paid for by the wholesale dealer in gold.

Small change is scarce. The fives and also the ten pfennig pieces have been issued in iron and most of the merchants return at least 10 pfg. of your change in stamps.

Raw Material Problem Solved.

As far as raw material goes, the problem is said to have been practically solved. I heard that Germany was satisfied with the copper question, though I don't know what the solution is. At least it is certain that not a pound of copper remains unaccounted for in the kingdom, even to the approximate number of pounds of overhead wire which can be taken without injuring traffic to any great extent.

The kitchen range doors have disappeared from the kitchens, as well as all copper and brass articles. I met an indignant dentist in Berlin who had been to America on a vacation, and during his absence the government inspector had come around for the list of copper and bronze articles in the house. An overconscientious maid had not missed a thing, including all his instruments, so that when he came home he had a denuded office to greet him.

Wounded Kept in Seclusion.

As usual, the German has arranged to care for the wounded so that none of them appears in big cities to depress the population. In all the time I was in Berlin, Dresden, and Hamburg I didn't see a wounded man, except three soldiers limping slightly and walking with a cane. There were no armless sleeves swinging loose from the coat as there are in Paris, and no wooden stumps thumping along the pavement.

In Paris I can't go three blocks without seeing half a dozen "mutilés," whose poor, broken bodies would bring tears to my eyes. But I searched vainly in Berlin for them. One Sunday I was walking by that Hindenburg atrocity in the Tiergarten into which enthusiastic Berliners were hammering nails, and in the tremendous crowd I noticed a man whose right arm seemed to swing oddly from his body.

In spite of the fact that the hand was gloved and held a cane, I thought that it was false, and so walked near in the crowd and pushed it as if accidentally, and the whole arm swung out uselessly, cane and all, from the shoulder. I felt an actual satisfaction at having discovered one man crippled by the war walking around Berlin.

Around the corner from the Esplanade is a large building given up to blind soldiers. This building is right in the heart of Berlin—you pass it a dozen times a day, and yet you never meet any of these blind men out walking with their attendants. I learned after I had been there a couple of weeks that they are never taken out except after dusk, and then to the Tiergarten to walk, that no one may be depressed by the sight.

Money Flows in Circle.

The German care of their wounded has improved, according to their statistics, since last year. They claim that 70 per cent of all their wounded go back to the front again. For those who stay behind, hopelessly wounded, wonderful systems of training for new vocations are now working, of which I shall tell in a later article.

Many women are seen in every form of work in the larger cities. Only women are street car conductors now, and to see them as guards of the subway trains is a sight to remember.

The German woman at best is seldom slight and lissome and these subway guards wear full and rippling bloomers that end half way between the knee and ankle, over which they wear full padded coats with sleeves a yard wide and then on top of all a dinky cap with a hard visor.

Another odd sight is the women digging the subway and what particularly amused all my friends was a large and husky blonde shoveling soft coal. This subway is a proof of the industrial activity of Berlin. They have already built one subway costing nearly $1,000,000 and are working on another.

This second subway has given rise to an odd engineering feat, for when they were half way through they discovered that their supports would have to be driven into a peat bed. As they feared the effect of the acids in the peat on concrete they erected two bridges inside the tunnel, one with a span of 200 yards and the other of 125 yards, probably the first time that a bridge has ever been built in an underground railway.

Victories Encourage People.

This then is the general impression of Germany: each person out working for the state, soothed by the military victories into assurance of final triumph, belief in the enduring qualities of Germany as regards materials in the English starvation war, not too much need or poverty and little dissatisfaction—except on the part of some Socialists who are working against the annexation of any conquered territory; seemingly sufficient men to carry on an offensive at various points of the front, and an absolute spirit of self-sacrifice as regards men, money and food.

The second article by Carolyn Wilson on the internal conditions in Germany will appear in tomorrow's "Tribune."

FIFTH SON OF KAISER WEDS; EMPEROR MISSES CEREMONY

Prince Joachim Marries Princess Marie Augustine of Anhalt in Royal Castle of Bellevue.

AMSTERDAM, March 11.—The marriage of Prince Joachim, the fifth son of Emperor William, and Princess Marie Augustine, daughter of Prince Edward of Anhalt, was celebrated today in the royal castle of Bellevue, according to a dispatch from Berlin. The marriage took place in the presence of the German empress, the Duke and Duchess of Anhalt, and other relatives. Emperor William was not present.

The engagement of Prince Joachim and Princess Marie of Anhalt was officially announced Oct. 14 last. Prince Joachim was 25 years old Dec. 15 last and is a captain in the Fourteenth regiment of Hussars. He was the only unmarried child of the emperor.

DANISH FOREIGN MINISTER RECEIVES FORD EMISSARY.

Told Copenhagen Meeting Has No Power to Act on Peace Call, but Will Present Appeal.

COPENHAGEN, March 11.—That the Copenhagen conference of Scandinavian ministers of state was not called to discuss foreign politics, and that it would contravene the rules laid down for its guidance and be outside its purpose to act upon a call to neutral nations for steps toward peace, was the declaration made today by the Danish foreign minister, E. J. C. de Scavenius, to representatives of the Ford mission, now known as "the neutral conference for continuous mediation."

In response to an appeal of the committee, of which the Rev. Charles F. Aked is chairman, for a hearing before the Scandinavian conference, Minister de Scavenius received the members at the palace today and heard their address, and after explaining the scope of the conference, said he would lay the appeal before his government and report his action to the ministers from Norway and Sweden attending the conference.

Dr. Aked said that he and his associates were delighted at their first official recognition and reception since coming to Europe and reported their success to the American legation.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—This year's income tax collections will probably reach $100,000,000, an increase of $20,000,000 over last year, according to treasury information today.

BERLIN REFUSES TO BACK DOWN IN U-BOAT POLICY

Holds Inventions Change International Law as Regards Sea Action.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, March 10.—[By wireless to Sayville, N. Y., March 11.]—On the ground that so-called "defensive armament" on merchant ships lies not in the caliber of its guns, but in the extent and purpose and use of such armament, the German government cannot see its way clear toward discussing with Secretary of State Lansing what he may consider legitimate defensive armament.

Berlin's contention is that there is no such armament as can only be used defensively and not offensively.

Germany Stands Pat.

The German government seems disposed to stick to its standpoint that under modern conditions there can be no legal defensive act on the part of a peaceful merchant ship against an attempt to search it to ascertain its character by recognized warship legality, which attempt is recognized by international law.

Germany is not endeavoring to change international law, but is merely calling attention to the fact that time and conditions already have brought about such a change, and now that the situation is presented for the first time asks for a decision on such change in accordance with the principles that rule equity and justice in every country.

Proof of British Orders.

These are some of the impressions I gathered today in a talk with Herr von Jagow, German secretary for foreign affairs.

"The best evidence in law is admission," declared Herr von Jagow. "We have proof of the highest kind—namely: admissions made by the other side to the effect that British armed merchantmen do fire at sight on German submarines which may approach near enough for the legitimate purposes of ascertaining the nationality and character of a ship, or, as the government of the United States desires, to stop and search it.

"The London Times of Feb. 10 in arguing for heavier guns for merchant ships confirms the offensive character of the secret instructions from the British admiralty to British merchantmen to act offensively and gives several cases of such offensive tactics.

Fired at German U Boat.

"The Times says the P. & O. steamer Cangar, when off Malta on its way to India, saw a submarine's periscope and fired at it, obliging the boat to dive. It reappeared on the opposite side of the liner and was again fired at but not hit. When the submarine dived it was seen no more.

"A second instance was that of the French ship Plata, which on Jan. 27 sighted a submarine half a mile away. Fire was opened from the stern of the steamer and the hostile craft, believed to have been struck in a vital part, soon dived and made off. The Clan Mactavish, though it did not meet with success, points to the readiness with which merchant seamen can attack when threatened."

British Break Word.

Herr von Jagow was asked whether these instances could in any possible way be construed as "defense."

"How does this conform to the specific declaration and promise made to Secretary Lansing by Ambassador Spring-Rice on Aug. 25, 1914?" Herr von Jagow said. "The British ambassador says: 'I have the honor, in view of the fact that a number of British armed merchantmen are now visiting United States ports, to reiterate that the arming of British merchantmen is solely a precautionary measure adopted for the purpose of defense against attack by hostile craft. I have at the same time been instructed to give the United States government the fullest assurances that British merchant vessels will not be used for purposes of attack, that they are merely peaceful traders, armed only for defense; that they will never fire unless fired upon, and that they will never under any circumstances attack any vessel.'

"Are we to understand that the British admit that they do attack and that the British admiralty's secret instructions to that effect nullify or revoke the specific assurances to the American government made by the British government."

U. S. Should Be Neutral.

Herr von Jagow seemed to think that if the American government closed its eyes to this obvious deliberate violation of the promise made by the British government Washington must be consistent and not object to Germany taking counter measures.

"There seems to be some misunderstanding of my views expressed to you recently," the foreign secretary said. "We are not seeking to change any rule of international law in this particular during the war. The necessity for a new decision, however, of international law has arisen and arisen only since the commencement of the war.

"Although undoubtedly doing away with pirates and privateers ipso facto, the Paris declaration of 1856 also did away with the necessity of arming merchant ships, and thereafter merchant ships really had no legitimate excuse to be armed. The necessity for the rule having been done away with, the rule itself ceased to be operative, though the contingency for the concrete application of this proposition did not arise until the present war."

Question Never Brought Up.

Herr von Jagow pointed out that in the war between Germany and France in 1870, the Turco-Grecian, Spanish-American, Russo-Japanese, Balkan, and other wars nothing happened on the sea to bring up the question.

The foreign secretary expressed the belief that had the question been brought up during peace times a majority of the nations undoubtedly would have taken the view that conditions today no longer justifies armed merchantmen and would have recognized the change of the day accordingly.

"The only remaining excuse for arming merchant ships by the English is that submarines have fired without warning on Swedish merchant ships. This was done, as already explained, because British ships fired upon submarines on sight and in retaliation against England for stopping food for the civil population, although Germany offered that this food be distributed to civil population direct under the auspices of the American embassy. This food blockade has already been declared illegal by the government of the United States.

Considers Parley Useless.

"The imperial government, however, might be willing to concede where such retaliation, however justified as reprisal for an attempt recognized by the United States as illegal to starve its women and children—that such retaliation shall not be carried out in that form when it effects the rights of neutrals."

I gained the impression that Herr von Jagow considers useless negotiations on question of defensive armament, holding, as he appears to, that there can be no armament wholly defensive and which may not be offensively used and that the German government is disinclined to recede from that standpoint.

International Law Change.

Returning again to remark that Germany does not want to change international law, but merely calls attention to the change that half a century of time has made in law, and that a decision should be made in accordance with such changes, the foreign secretary said:

"International law written, except when it appears in treaties or conventions, such as Paris and the various Hague conventions, depends upon immemorial customs and the general customs and the general principle of law recognized by all nations.

"The principle that the reason for a rule ceasing the rule itself falls is a principle firmly incorporated in the equitable system of law of both England and the United States. The German government in this matter not only appeals to the sense of reason of the United States and its government but to those principles of equity and justice on which the whole system of American law and justice are based."

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

GENERAL.

Germany has declared war on Portugal. The only place they can come in contact, unless Portugal sends troops to help the allies, is in Africa, where Portuguese East Africa lies directly south of German East Africa, Germany's sole remaining colonial possession.

FRENCH FRONT.

The heavy German attacks on the French position at Verdun have continued. There have been some local attacks and heavy artillery fire along other parts of the western front. These, however, have been merely for the purpose of preventing a withdrawal of the troops in these regions to the neighborhood of Verdun. After driving in from the north a distance of six and one-quarter miles, taking all the French positions in that distance, the German attacks the last week have been most intense to the west of the Meuse.

Here they have succeeded in advancing over a front of about four miles and to a depth of about two. In the east they have captured Fresnes, the head of the salient of the first defenses facing to the east. Generally when the French lose a position they attempt to take it by a counter attack. Sometimes these counter attacks are successful for the time being.

The German attack to the west of the Meuse was necessary because they had advanced so far to the east of the Meuse that the French held positions on the western bank which enabled them to enfilade with their fire the German positions facing south on the east side of this river. Every advance to the west of the Meuse in the Argonne and still further west in the Champagne puts the Germans nearer to the salient held by them at St. Mihiel on the Meuse river to the south of Verdun.

This movement if continued and also the German advance from east towards the Meuse if continued tend to ultimately put the French holding Verdun and vicinity in the position of having to take the choice of retiring or being cut off. The stopping of such advances is of more importance to the French than the stopping of a direct advance from the north or northeast against Verdun itself.

This cutting in from the flank, if successful, may lead not only to the loss of Verdun but to the loss of a considerable number of troops and guns. A direct drive against Verdun, if successful, would mean the loss of Verdun, but the probabilities are that the greater part of the troops and guns could be withdrawn.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There have been some local actions along various parts of this front, but nothing of consequence.

ITALIAN FRONT AND BALKANS.

There has been nothing of consequence in either of these theaters of war. In the Balkans the allies still hold Avlona on the Adriatic and Saloniki, while the central powers control everything else except Greece and Roumania, which still remain neutral.

ARMENIAN FRONT.

The Russians have continued their advance in this theater of war. Their fleet has control of the Black sea. They have taken advantage of this to land troops at Atina, sixty miles east of Trebizond.

The troops so landed have advanced to Riza, thirty-five miles east of Trebizond. They have captured Bitlis, which is 280 miles from Ras-el-Ain the nearest point of approach in the Bagdad railway. They have also slightly advanced in Persia.

Apparently the Russians are resting on the defensive in Europe and concentrating their efforts on Turkey in Asia.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The British relief force under Gen. Aylmer has been reinforced and is reported to have succeeded in advancing again in order to relieve Gen. Townsend's force, which is still shut up in Kut-El-Amara.

SUMMARY.

The Russian advance in Asia Minor and the German attacks in France are the only events of importance. The Russian advance in Turkey is of importance because it probably will prevent any Turkish attempt against Egypt at the present time. The German attacks in France make up an offensive which is one of the decisive events of the war, if not the decisive event.

Just as last spring the French and British by failing to make any general attack upon the German line in France allowed Germany a free hand to concentrate her forces and use them against Russia, so at the present time she is being allowed to concentrate and make a tremendous effort in the western theater of war. Since her attacks on Verdun began she has steadily gained ground, capturing prisoners and guns.

Apparently the German attack was well prepared, as it has steadily proceeded along the course of first subjecting the French positions to such heavy artillery fire that their infantry could not resist the German infantry when it finally advanced to the attack. There were then pauses in which the ground captured was fortified and necessary arrangements made to continue the attack, which then proceeded along the same line as before. The principle followed is that of Grant, keeping at it no matter what the resistance or the cost.

HINTS GERMANY HAS TRIED TO EMBROIL U. S. AND JAPAN.

Mikado's Foreign Minister Blames "Certain European Powers" of Endeavoring to Antagonize Nations.

TOKIO, March 11.—It is the belief of the Japanese foreign minister, Baron Ishii, that "a certain European power" in the past has endeavored to create differences between Japan and the United States to further its own ends. This opinion was expressed by the foreign minister in a statement before the Association of America's Friends.

He gave it as his opinion that the efforts of this European power were exerted for the purpose of serving its own aspirations for dominance. As that power now is occupied with its own troubles, the baron said the source of intrigue has been removed. Relations between Japan and America have never been so good as today, he continued, and their friendship will become even more cordial, as should be the case.

The semi-official newspapers point out that there is no reason at present why Japan should emphasize the excellent relations with America, but they assert that there has been German intrigue for the purpose of affecting Japan's relations with both America and Great Britain, and that it is necessary to call attention to it.

RUSSIAN ARTILLERY SHELLS TEUTON TROOPS ON MARCH.

Germans Dispersed in North, and Austrian Infantry and Batteries Bombarded on South Wing.

PETROGRAD, March 11.—The official statement issued by the Russian war office today follows:

Two large parties of German scouts attempted to approach our trenches near the Oldavnein and Bussey rivers. They were dispersed by our fire. Our heavy artillery dispersed an enemy column marching on the right flank of the Dvinsk position. German artillery bombarded the railway station at Kalkuny for an hour and a half.

In the district southeast of the large village of Koiki we repulsed an attempt made by a large enemy party to approach our trenches. In the middle Stripa region we took some prisoners. To the east of Czernowitz our artillery successfully bombarded enemy battalions on the march. We observed that shells exploded among the enemy's guns and caissons.

Held in Stamp Theft.

Mrs. Julia Leonard, 4238 South Kedzie avenue, was held for removal to St. Paul for trial on charges of receiving part of the stamps stolen from the internal revenue office there last January. Her hearing was before United States Commissioner Mark A. Foote, who placed her bonds at $25,000. Her case will go before the court next Wednesday for an order of removal.

In All 'Round Quality the Cadillac Has No Rival

Strong as that sounds it still is true. Of course there are cars which rival the Cadillac in this or that detail. Some are longer, some are lighter, some have silver trimmings, some boast a much higher price. And some folks believe these things prove quality.

But in all 'round quality where is the car you would call a rival? Just remember the things that go to make up the Cadillac all 'round quality—keep them all in mind. Understand them.

What Is Quality?

Quality is not a selling feature placed where you are sure to see it. Nor does quality consist of a novelty, added to attract the public fancy. Still less is quality made up of things that were good enough a few years ago. These "qualities" you find in some cars, but are they thereby rivals of the Cadillac? Hardly.

Cadillac all 'round quality begins with the integrity, the purpose of the men who build the Cadillac. And back of that is a successful experience unrivaled in the entire industry. No wonder Cadillac design sets the pace, creates the standard! No wonder others follow!

Cadillac Design Leads

If the Cadillac organization had not produced the epoch making "Eight," what would some forty other makers be making now? Who knows best what is all 'round quality—whom would you rather bank upon—those who originate from genius and conviction or those who follow from necessity?

The all 'round quality of Cadillac design needs no proof. Was ever car so widely copied? But quality goes deeper than design—or ought to. You know it goes deeper in the Cadillac.

Cadillac Material Standards

In steel and iron and bronze and aluminum there is as much difference as in brains. And just as the Cadillac organization attracts the best brains in the industry, so do those brains know and seek the best materials.

There is no price limit on the material in the Cadillac. Ask any man who sells material to the Cadillac factory. He will tell you only one other maker is nearly so exacting on quality standards—and his car sells for double the Cadillac price.

Cadillac Workmanship

And as for workmanship, you probably know how the Cadillac organization was the first to develop accuracy to a point which permitted interchangeability of parts.

There is no car in the world so closely adhering to fine standards as the Cadillac. More than 1000 measurements in each Cadillac are exactly like the same measurements in every other Cadillac—within a thousandth of an inch. No wonder all Cadillacs are satisfying cars!

Here, then, are the three cardinal points in Cadillac all 'round quality—design that leads the world, material the best in the world, workmanship that creates new standards of accuracy. In this all 'round quality the Cadillac has no rival.

Cadillac Value Astonishes

Naturally then these results follow: No car stands up with the Cadillac. Its performance has revolutionized the industry—as you know. Its long life, dependability and slow depreciation are never questioned.

And the volume of business attracted by this all 'round quality has made the Cadillac unrivaled in good value. In no other car at any price can you buy any more—if as much—all 'round quality. At the Cadillac price ($2080) no other car is considered in the same class.

Just what are you seeking in a motor car? If it's all 'round quality, you are sure when you select a Cadillac. If it's good value for your money—well, where can you find a rival?

GERMAN DRIVE BEFORE REIMS WINS GROUND

Kaiser's Men Again Gain Foothold in the Village of Vaux, Close to Verdun.

LONDON, March 11.—The Germans last night made a sudden attack to the northwest of Reims and took French trenches to a width of 1,400 yards and for a depth of about two-thirds of a mile. Paris says some of the ground was regained.

The Germans also made advances near Verdun. They occupied part of the village of Vaux. Berlin reports they also cleared all the French out of the woods of Corbeaux and Cumieres, west of the Meuse. Attacks on the fort of Vaux and at Douaumont failed, with heavy losses to the Germans.

There was a lull in infantry fighting on the whole front today, Paris reported.

GERMAN OFFICIAL REPORT.

The German official report, issued in Berlin, says:

Saxon regiments stormed strongly fortified positions in the wood sectors southwest and south of Ville-aux-Bois, eleven miles northwest of Reims, over a width of about 1,400 yards, and for a depth of about two-thirds of a mile. Twelve officers and 725 uninjured men fell into our hands.

On the western bank of the Meuse (Verdun region) the last positions held by the French in the Bois des Corbeaux and the Bois de Cumieres were cleared.

On the eastern bank of the Meuse lively artillery activity reigned, especially to the west of the village of Vaux and of Fort Vaux and at several points on the Woevre plain.

PARIS ADMITS LOSSES.

The earlier French report, admitting losses of ground to the Germans, said:

North of the Aisne, the enemy, after having bombarded our positions between Troyon and Berry-au-Bac, moved out from Ville-au-Bois and attacked the salient formed by our line at Bois des Buttes. After a very spirited fight we drove the enemy from its northwestern extremity, as well as from the western section of the wood.

West of the River Meuse the Germans delivered a strong attack against our trenches along the highway from Bethincourt to Chattancourt. An immediate counter attack gave us full possession of the important communicating trench which the enemy had succeeded in penetrating.

East of the Meuse the enemy has redoubled his efforts between the village of Vaux and the Vaux forts. The Germans took possession of some houses in the village of Vaux. We are still in possession of the western part of the village. As a result of several attacks against the fort itself the Germans made some progress along the surrounding slopes, but their efforts to reach the barbed wire entanglements in front of the fort were checked by our fire.

TELLS OF HUGE LOSSES.

The later French report gives more details of the Verdun action. It says:

The enemy did not attempt any infantry action along the whole of our front. According to the latest reports, the fruitless assaults launched yesterday against our trenches west of Douaumont were disastrous to the enemy. The Germans attacked three times in columns of four, but were mowed down by our artillery fire and the fire of our machine guns. They were obliged to retire, leaving the ground covered with dead.

In Artois, to the east of Neuville, we exploded a mine, the crater of which we occupied. Between the Somme and the Oise we bombarded German organizations in the region of Herbecourt, Laucourt and Beuvraignes.

North of the Aisne a lively cannonade has been maintained in the region of the Bois de Buttes, south of La Ville aux Bois.

GERMANS PREDICT VICTORY.

The Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs:

"The fall of Verdun is confidently expected in Germany within a few days. The Vossische Zeitung says:

"'Verdun has lost its character as a sally port against our southwest front. This means an important gain to us.'"

Semi-official and unofficial reports from Paris which are reproduced with emphasis here dwell on what is termed "the fantastic mendacity" of the German claims with regard to Verdun fighting both as regards positions and prisoners.

These claims are denounced indignantly in Paris and London and are held to show that the Germans are compelled to resort to trickery to hide their true position from their own people. All reports which reached Paris dwell upon the terrible slaughter of the Germans.

"The general situation at Verdun continues excellent," the Times says today. "The French view that the war consists almost entirely of 'killing the boches' has become very widely accepted. The French regiments advance gayly, singing in unison. 'Passeront Pas, Passeront Pas' (They shall not pass). They are glad to know that the enemy is giving them plenty of opportunity to shorten the war by much killing of the boches.

"During the last two days the butchery has been extraordinarily heavy. Many are inclined to consider the disastrous German attacks on Douaumont, Vaux, Bethincourt and the Bois des Corbeaux as decisive and perhaps as marking the high water mark of the sacrifices to which the enemy is prepared to go.

"Everywhere the enemy's great effort failed and in the opinion of the very highest authorities the French remain masters of the field, and the offensive has been definitely brought to a standstill."

Spirit of Revenge.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily Express says:

"Now and then, at long and rare intervals, you meet a few civilians on the roads around Verdun, in little groups of two or three, but sometimes alone.

"An old woman, usually with a fierce look—an old she wolf who had snapped and snarled to the bitter end and was now forced to go—just such an old woman wandered into the motor transport yesterday.

"'Where are you going, mother?' was asked. 'That is not the way to safety.'

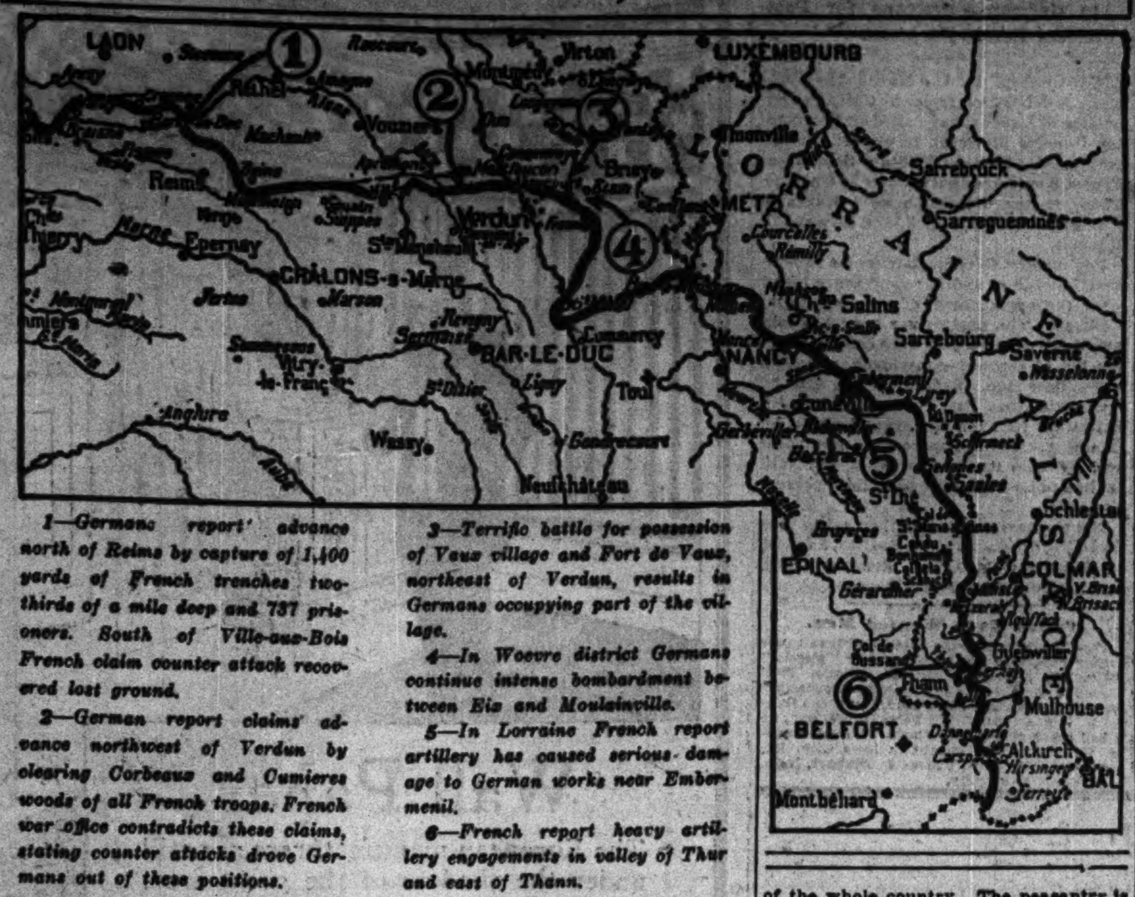
"'I am not seeking safety,' she said. 'I am going down to the hill there to where the river runs red, with red ice on it. I want to see this and die happy.'

"This old woman is typical of the spirit of the whole country. The peasantry is absolutely fearless and almost unconscious of danger. They know what the Germans are and have lived in expectation of a great revenge. The bill is being paid now. They know it and are fiercely, cruelly, calmly exultant.

"This is their moment. It is true that the broken ice in the river is red, and that the hillsides are heaped thickly with half frozen German bodies. There are no words to convey the picture of the ghastly devastation and utter misery of the whole countryside around Verdun. In and out along these miles of horror the peasantry is wandering, to drink in the scene, in order to quench the bitter thirst of hatred.

"These people of Lorraine have been under the German heel for a generation. They have not forgotten the last forty-four years, and vengeance is theirs at last."

Battle Lines on West Front Along the Aisne, Before Verdun, and in Alsace-Lorraine.



1—Germans report advance north of Reims by capture of 1,400 yards of French trenches two-thirds of a mile deep and 737 prisoners. South of Ville-aux-Bois French claim counter attack recovered lost ground.

2—German report claims advance northwest of Verdun by clearing Corbeaux and Cumieres woods of all French troops. French war office contradicts these claims, stating counter attacks drove Germans out of these positions.

3—Terrific battle for possession of Vaux village and Fort de Vaux, northeast of Verdun, results in Germans occupying part of the village.

4—In Woevre district Germans continue intense bombardment between Eix and Moulainville.

5—In Lorraine French report artillery has caused serious damage to German works near Embermenil.

6—French report heavy artillery engagements in valley of Thur and east of Thann.

PRINCE OF WALES GRATEFUL.

Illinois Daughters of British Empire Receive Letter of Thanks for War Donation.

Mrs. George Cooke Adams, state regent of the Daughters of the British Empire, received a letter yesterday from Buckingham palace in which the Prince of Wales acknowledged the receipt of $5,000 from the Illinois chapter for the purchase of a motor ambulance for Red Cross work in the European war.

The letter expressed the prince's thanks for the gift.

Find Carpenter Dead in Room.

Charles F. Carroll, a carpenter in the Pullman shops, was found dead yesterday in his room at the Hotel Florence, Watt avenue and One Hundred and Eleventh street. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid was found beside the body.

TREBIZOND TO YIELD WITHOUT FIGHT, REPORT

Russians Within Day's March; Harass Turks by Land and by Sea.

PETROGRAD, March 11.—The Turkish port of Trebizond will be surrendered to the Russians with little or no resistance, according to Tiflis dispatches today. Big guns in the harbor have been dismantled and all the city's valuable stores removed.

Russian vanguards are now within less than a day's march of the city. The Russian fleet is harassing the retreating Turks by shelling the roads lying close to the Black sea shore.

Attack Russian Squadron.

BERLIN, March 11.—German hydroplanes bombarded a Russian squadron consisting of one battleship, five destroyers, and several merchantmen in the Black sea yesterday, it was officially announced today. Hits were observed on the destroyers.

The attack occurred near Kaliakra, northeast of the Bulgarian port of Varna. In spite of a heavy fire the German planes returned safely.

CAPTURED AUSTRIAN OFFICER WRITES FRIEND FOR TRIBUNE

Note from Leopold Kulka, Former Chicagoan, Reveals He Is Prisoner in Russian Camp.

For four years Leopold Kulka was engaged in the automobile supply business in Chicago. Three years ago he established an auto supply business in Budapest. When the war broke out he received a commission in the Austrian army.

Friends in Chicago had received no word from him until yesterday when Arpad Weiner of 306 South Franklin street received a post card from Krasnojarsk, a Russian prison camp in Siberia. The post card, dated Jan. 8, reads as follows:

"Dear Arpad. I wish to notify you that I have been a Russian prisoner of war since June, 1915, and I would be very grateful to you if you would send me the Sunday edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and a few back numbers of the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's Weekly. The postage is free. Please write to me in German very soon and tell me how you are getting along. Thanking you for your attention, and with best regards to Miss and Mr. Coney and also to you and your dear children, I am, your cousin,

"LEOPOLD KULKA."

URGES GERMANS TO SEEK PEACE

Harden Says Nation May Be Forced to Accept Terms Later.

WARNS OF GREAT COST.

LONDON, March 11.—Maximilian Harden, in an article in Die Zukunft, which has been received here, makes a strong demand for peace and urges that the German government start negotiations immediately.

"Germany," he says, "has heaped victory upon victory. Upon her, therefore, devolves the duty of making an offer of peace. Such an offer could only add to and not diminish her prestige. It would be a proof of her strength, not weakness.

Germany in Need of Peace.

"Besides, Germany must propose peace because she is in need of peace. Germany is victorious in the field, but internally she is beset with difficulties. We cannot deny that the preparations for the third harvest are more difficult than for the second. We do not yet lack men, but we can no longer obtain certain raw materials.

"Meanwhile our war expenditure is increasing to an alarming extent. At the end of three years of war we should have lost every one of the commercial markets where we had established positions which were seemingly unassailable.

May Face Enemies' Will.

"If Germany waits longer it will find itself reduced to obey the will of her enemies. It thus becomes necessary that it invite the world to conclude peace. This invitation may be interpreted as a sign of weakness, but that matters little.

"If our offers are declined we shall have fulfilled the final duty which our conscience dictated toward Europe and toward humanity."

DECORATES MOEWE'S CREW.

Take the Advice of Your Physician

Ask any reputable doctor these questions:

Is bran bread an efficient laxative?

Is bran bread a safe laxative?

Is bran bread made with Whole Wheat Flour a nourishing food?

His answer will be an unqualified "YES" to each inquiry.

Then ask him what his opinion is of Sulzer's Bran Bread. He may possibly never have tried it, but if he has it is certain that he will praise it.

In fact, the steadiest purchasers of Sulzer's Bran Bread are physicians.

It is so good to eat that it is worth while having regardless of its nourishment and its laxative qualities.

CHICAGO NURSE HAD TO BORROW SOLDIER'S PANTS

Miss Marie Lamos Was Almost Drowned on Torpedoed Ship.

With a mental picture of the terrors of Balkan warfare surpassing in its detail the endless reel of a cinematograph, Miss Marie Lamos returned to Chicago yesterday.

Miss Lamos was a nurse and member of the Montenegrin relief expedition that left for the Balkans last summer. She was one of the victims of the dynamited steamer Brindisi.

Began to Sink.

"I was on the steamer Brindisi with some 400 Montenegrin reservists on board and a few civilians," said Miss Lamos jauntily. "It was plowing its way through the Adriatic last January when suddenly I heard a terrific explosion. I was not particularly alarmed until the boat began to list and pointed bow down, toward the bottom of the sea. Then the steamer lurched over to its side. I jumped into the water and suddenly noticed that the Montenegrins about me were committing suicide.

"They cried in their anguish that they would die by their own weapons and not the enemies'. O, it was beautifully heroic. My first thought was of home—then I thought I must save myself at all costs. I swam about in the water until I saw a rope. I held on to this until the terrible suction frightened me, and I let go of it. Another girl was holding on to the same rope. I cried to her to let go. But she did not, and I did not see her again.

The Cries of the Drowning

"The water was full of dying men. I heard their cries for help. I saw the poor fellows die one by one. I climbed on the side of the boat, which had begun to settle, and stood up. But it began to sink, and I dove into the water again, and for the first time realized that it was bitter cold.

"Very soon I managed to grab hold of a heavy plank. This I held on to until a launch chugged along from the Albanian coast and picked me up. I landed at Medua, on the Albanian coast, with just a skirt and a waist on. On the shore I dried some of my wet clothing, and incidentally had some of it stolen.

"A Montenegrin officer happened along and loaned me his trousers. He gave me his underwear and other bits of apparel, and thus attired I went into the city. Here I met Dr. George Guca, who had come over on the Brindisi with me. He, too, had been rescued. He was my escort from that time on.

Then the Aeroplanes.

"I had been in the city but a few hours when the Austrians made a raid on the place with a fleet of aeroplanes. The bombs dropped everywhere. Here I was, penniless, almost clotheless, and compelled to walk two days through Albania to Scutari. Serbian soldiers fleeting from the onrush of the Austro-Hungarians were everywhere—some 65,000, I think."

Miss Lamos indulged in a number of genuine forced marches. To get out of the war zone—for she could do no nursing with no equipment and no money—she tramped four days through marshes and over hills to Durazzo and slept out in the open more than one night. From Durazzo she went to Corfu, and soon after to Athens.

"I went to a Greek tailor to have some clothes made," said she, "and inadvertently the man told me that he wanted to marry me to a Greek officer. Of course I led him on just for the fun of it.

"A little tea was arranged which I attended and there met the gallant soldier. He was fat—Oh, so stout—and attired in a brilliant uniform, and he had saturated himself with perfume. When he proposed to me, I told him I'd have to think the matter over. But I was careful not to let him see me after the episode."

WOMAN SLEUTH AND POLICEMAN CLASH ON VICE

Wife of U. S. Secret Service Man Says Patrolman Drank and Caressed Her.

Accusations and counter accusations will be made before the police trial board by Fred Schober, a city policeman, on the one hand, and on the other a man and a woman investigator, the latter the wife of a United States secret service operative.

The investigators are J. C. Williams of 64 West Schiller street and Mrs. David Groh of 5525 Prairie avenue.

David Groh's occupation is given in the city directory as "commercial traveler." It is so given because every government secret service man is required to have, in addition to his real occupation, an ostensible and pretended employment, to the end that he may work in secrecy.

Suspended by Nootbaar.

Fred Schober until yesterday traveled out of the South Chicago station. Now he has been suspended by Capt. Nootbaar, who has preferred charges of having drunk intoxicants while on duty against him.

Schober admits that on the evening of Jan. 14 last he had been drinking and somewhat befuddled, it is said. His suspension was caused by the filing of affidavits with Capt. Nootbaar by Williams and Mrs. Groh, who have been employed by the Hyde Park Protective association, of which Arthur Burrage Farwell is secretary.

Their affidavits assert that on the night of Jan. 14 they went to South Chicago's old redlight district. They drank in several saloons, and, inquiring of a saloonkeeper for lodging, were directed to the Mackinaw hotel, 9148 Mackinaw avenue, in which they registered. Then they departed, saying that later they would return.

Assert He Fondled Her.

In a saloon at Ninety-second street and Mackinaw avenue, they swear, they had drinks with Schober, who was on duty. Schober, according to the affidavits, made love to Mrs. Groh and fondled her.

At 12:45 o'clock on Jan. 15, they declare, Mrs. Groh dodged from Policeman Schober's last embrace, and she and Williams returned from South Chicago.

Schober yesterday admitted having drunk liquor while on duty. But he added this:

"When they left me, they didn't take any car north. They went back to the Mackinaw hotel."

And Matthew Duticham, manager of the hotel, supports Schober's accusation.

TWO POSTOFFICE ASPIRANTS OPPOSED BY LABOR LEADERS.

Chicago Delegation Lays Objections to German-Americans for Postmaster Before Burleson.

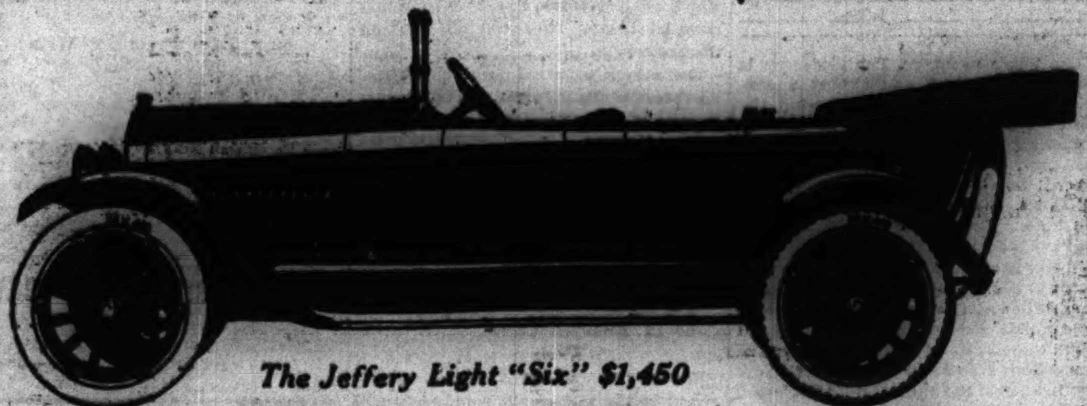
Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.—A delegation from the Chicago Federation of Labor today called on Postmaster General Burleson to oppose the appointment of either William Schlake or Ernest Krutgen as postmaster at Chicago. Those in the delegation were Margaret Haley, John Fitzpatrick, and Edward C. Nockels.

Postmaster General Burleson and Senator Lewis had another conference today over the appointment of a postmaster at Chicago. The postmaster general again asked the senator if he were committed to the list of German-Americans submitted some time ago. Senator Lewis said he was until that list was rejected in its entirety. In such an event he said he would present not more than one name and demand its consideration. He said he had not selected the particular person, however.

The postmaster general then asked how he felt toward Joseph G. Branch, a friend of Secretary McAdoo. Senator Lewis said he could not consider Branch.

Police Have Wanted Men.

The "register" at the detective bureau yesterday contained the names of four "guests" wanted by authorities outside Chicago. Paul Cullen, a member of the "Cowboy Minstrels," wanted on a serious charge in Dayton, O.; Daniel B. Worthy, wanted in Terre Haute, Ind., on a bad check charge; Charles E. Stewart, wanted for wife abandonment in Iowa City, Ia., and David Walwos, wanted in Elkhart, Ind., charged with larceny.



The Jeffery Light "Six" $1,450

No Other Six at Its Price Can Match This

FOR the first time since the close of the Automobile Show, where it was first shown, we give more than a few brief lines in a printed notice to the new Jeffery Light "Six."

The demand has so far exceeded the number of cars we have been able to obtain that we have not dared to advertise this car.

It is a serious question with us whether we shall be able to supply the additional demand which we know even this brief notice will create.

Nevertheless, we propose to clear up this "Six" question in Chicago here and now.

We say to you that there is absolutely not one other "Six" selling in this city at $1800 or less which can match the new Jeffery "Six" at $1450 in actual road performance and power.

We say to you that we will gladly demonstrate the unquestionable superiority of this new Jeffery in the following simple way:

You are to select your own test. You may make it flexibility, performance through sand and mud, hill climbing ability—whatever you wish or all of them combined, just as you wish. We will then take this car out on a side by side test with any other car in its price class which you can persuade to make the trial, and if we cannot outdemonstrate the other car—if we cannot prove to your satisfaction that we have in this Jeffery the car of superior performance—you are to buy the other car. If we do show to your satisfaction that our claims of superior performance are the truth, then we are to have your order.

That's fair, is it not?

We say to you that this car's performance in the one real test of motor power and stamina—hill climbing—has never been equaled by any other car selling at its price. Starting at two to five miles per hour, it will pull a grade faster at the top of a hill than any other car in its class.

Not only is it supreme in performance, but we defy any "Six" at its price to match it in quality of body and finish. If any other "Six" is not willing to enter this comparative test, you can draw your own conclusions.

The Best Car $1000 Will Buy Is the Jeffery "Four"

To the man with $1000 to put in a car, we can only repeat our message of the past few weeks—that in the Jeffery "Four" you get absolutely the best car this amount will buy. You may include every "Four," every "Six," every "Eight," every "Twelve" selling at around this price, and not one of them can match this car in flexibility, in power, in economy, in durability, and in the quality of materials and grade of workmanship.

It is absolutely unequaled at its price in appearance, in style, and in finish.

It is the car of least depreciation in its class.

These are facts well known to Chicago. Almost a thousand Jeffery "Fours" sold in this territory is all the evidence needed that it's supreme at its price.

Wall Paper

The European manufacturers are still under the shadow of the great war, and the only demand for wall papers and draperies—through the course of natural events—comes from America.

This does not mean that the designing and making of new wall papers and draperies has ceased even within the sound of the firing line. It is somewhat amazing to note how much has been accomplished by the English and French makers.

Our country, however, is the real center of demand, and the measure of new accomplishments, in which many of the greatest artists of Europe have participated, is so great that realization is difficult unless a visit is made to our store to view the artistic imported color schemes, both in wall paper and drapery fabrics.

Wall Paper from the cheapest that's good at 10c the roll to the best that's made at $15.00 the roll. Draperies designed to go with them.

TIZENS UNITE TO BACK MOVE FOR AQUARIUM

Representatives of Hundred Societies for Permanent Body at Institute.

Representatives of 100 organizations met yesterday at the Art institute and established a permanent committee to work for an aquarium for Chicago. Coöperation was assured from practically all the institutions which might be in a position to assist in establishing the aquarium.

The Field museum offered its organization for the management of the aquarium if it is located near the museum. The South park commissioners offered a site for the aquarium. Gov. Dunne and Mayor Thompson, through representatives, offered their coöperation. The state fish commission promised to do all it could. Julius Rosenwald, the first citizen to make a definite offer of financial assistance in establishding the project, was present and took a great deal of interest in the meeting.

Personnel of Committee.

The committee appointed to obtain for Chicago the "finest aquarium in the world" consists of John Barton Payne, Julius Rosenwald, and John W. O'Leary, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. These men were given power to enlarge the committee and organize it into a permanent body. The motion for the permanent committee was made by Clifford Arrick, who represented the Indiana society.

Clubroom Filled.

The clubroom of the institute, where the meeting was held, was crowded with men and women interested in the problem of establishing an aquarium. Above them there was a long line of men, women, and children, which stretched through the corridors of the institute. They were waiting their turn to see the fish exhibit which had been placed there by the Chicago Aquarium society.

Seth Lindahl, chairman of the meeting, announced that the exhibit would continue for another week on account of the crowds.

Dr. Frederick J. V. Skiff, director of the Field Museum, and Stanley Field, president of the museum, promised the support of that institution in establishing the aquarium. Dr. Skiff said that he had consulted with E. R. Graham of Graham, Burnham & Co., architects, regarding a new building.

Building Cost Near $50,000.

Mr. Graham said that the fisheries building at the World's fair could be reproduced in steel, brick, and terra cotta for a cost of $50,000. That does not include the equipment, however.

Dr. Skiff said a few years ago the cost of maintaining the New York aquarium was only $11,000. Last year, however, according to Mr. Field, it was more than [illegible]

"If the question of an aquarium were submitted to the voters," said Dr. Skiff, "there would not be a single vote cast against it. If children were permitted to vote there would be many repeaters. The arguments in favor of it are scientific, economic, and popular.

Sees Threefold Returns.

"The benefits to the community from a selfish standpoint alone would be such that it would bring back into the community two or three times the amount of the cost every year. More people go to Naples to see the aquarium than to see Mount Vesuvius. The aquarium in Hawaii is maintained by the steamship and street railway companies because of the trade it brings to them.

"There is nothing within reason that the Field museum will not do. It will give its time, and experience, and influence. From the president, who is here, to the most insignificant apprentice in the museum we shall do everything that could reasonably be expected."

Other speakers were John D. Shoop, superintendent of schools; Stanley Field, Robert McMurdy, Henry von Meeteren, state game and fish commissioner, who represented Gov. Dunne; C. B. Whitford, state fish culturist; John P. Garner, representing Mayor Thompson; Charles H. Trigg of the wholesale fish dealers; Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, president of the Chicago Woman's club; and Guy Guernsey.

G. O. P. MANAGERS TO PICK KEYNOTE MAN MARCH 20

Upham Gets Word of Meeting to Settle Big Question.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The temporary chairman of the Republican national convention will be selected at a meeting of the subcommittee of the national committee to be held in Chicago one week from tomorrow, March 20.

This information came directly from National Chairman Charles D. Hilles to Fred W. Upham, chairman of the Chicago committee on arrangements. It settles the uncertainty as to the date and the program of the subcommittee meeting. The subcommittee members will be in session at the national headquarters to be opened this week at the Congress hotel.

Elihu Root of New York will not be one of the men considered for the temporary chairmanship. This has been determ'ned during the week, if eastern advices are reliable. The New York delegation will present Mr. Root as its first choice for the presidential nomination and Mr. Root's name becomes eliminated from consideration in conection with the temporary chairmanship.

McCall Not Considered.

Gov. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts is not in the consideration to handle the gavel and to make the Coliseum keynote speech. Rapid fire developments within the week in the New England states, as the information gets to Chicago, tend to indicate that Gov. McCall will be the Massachusetts candidate for the presidency, with the prospect that New England will be with him. If this is true, as western politicians figure the returns, it means a sudden switch from a strong undercurrent of sentiment reported one week ago turning toward Col. Roosevelt.

The progressive United States senators and the men who are in the leadership of the campaigns for Cummins and La Follette will present the candidacy of Senator Borah of Idaho for the temporary chairmanship. Former Gov. Charles S. Osborne of Michigan is all but an avowed candidate.

Forty Delegates for Fairbanks.

Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana, former vice president, is the leading candidate for the Coliseum convention nomination next June on the face of the returns as they stand at the moment.

Thanks to the state-wide primary in Indiana last Tuesday, Mr. Fairbanks now has forty instructed delegates for him, and nobody else has any. Thirty of these hail from Mr. Fairbanks' own state and the other ten come from Kentucky.

However, while Mr. Fairbanks has been picking up his own state and a half of his neighbor across the Ohio, the Republicans generally have been choosing uninstructed delegates to Chicago.

Result of Week's Campaign.

The net score at the end of the second week of the active campaign for national delegates stands:

Total delegates	985
Delegates Elected	96
Uninstructed	56
Instructed for Fairbanks	40

During the week just ended Theodore Roosevelt went to the limit in demanding that his name be kept out of the Illinois presidential primaries.

Secretary of State Stevenson at Springfield last night announced he had considered all of the legal points and had determined to throw out the Republican and Progressive candidates who had filed as pledged to Roosevelt. This goes for John R. McCabe, in the Sixth district, and two pro-Roosevelt delegates in the Eighteenth, or Cannon district, all of whom are filed as "unpledged." Secretary Stevenson also held as insufficient the petition of George L. Levy, Republican candidate for alternate in the Second district.

Vermont, by a referendum vote, adopted the state-wide direct presidential primary law and will elect national delegates in April.

SOCIALIST NAMED BENSON.

First national party nominations for 1916 were announced yesterday. Results of the Socialist party nation-wide referendum vote on candidates for president and vice president were made public.

New York wins both places. Allan L. Benson of Yonkers becomes the nominee for president and George R. Kirkpatrick of New York City is the regular nominee for vice president. Mr. Kirkpatrick defeated a woman, Kate O'Hare of St. Louis, associate editor of the Rip Saw, for the second place honor.

The ballots were tabulated by state secretaries and then sent to the national quarters in Chicago, the counting being completed yesterday. The vote was as follows:

FOR PRESIDENT.
Allan L. Benson, Yonkers, N. Y.	16,639
Arthur Le Sueur, Fort Scott, Kas.	3,495
James H. Maurer, Reading, Pa.	12,264
FOR VICE PRESIDENT.
George R. Kirkpatrick, New York City	20,607
Kate O'Hare, St. Louis, Mo.	11,388

Four candidates for executive secretary of the party were also on the ballot, but as none received a majority the names of the two highest will be resubmitted for a referendum vote. The candidates and votes:

Carl D. Thompson, Chicago	11,784
Adolph Germer, Mount Olive, Ill.	10,882
Walter Lanfersiek, Chicago [present secretary]	5,269
L. E. Katterfeld, Everett, Wash.	3,538

The names of Mr. Thompson and Mr. Germer will be resubmitted.

KRENGEL FILES RECOUNT SUIT AGAINST KIMBALL

Thompson Candidate at Aldermanic Primary Charges Discrepancy of 204 Votes.

Recount proceedings have been begun before Judge Scully in the County court by Frederick W. Krengel against Ald. John N. Kimball, his opponent in the recent aldermanic primary in the Seventh ward.

The present alderman has been declared the victor by 195 votes, but the petition of Mr. Krengel says that a discrepancy of 204 votes exists in the count.

Mistakes were made in fifty precincts which resulted in eighty votes being improperly credited to Kimball and 124 votes were not counted for Krengel, according to the petition. The case was set for Wednesday by Judge Scully.

"HOT STOVE JIM" RAISES CRY OF PRIMARY FRAUDS.

Faction Leader Demands That Hoyne Act on Charges of Repeating and Slugging.

Charges of fraud in the primary in the Twenty-first ward were laid before State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday. Action is demanded by James A. Quinn, the Harrison representative in the ward. His charges are backed up by Ald. Geiger, who declares there was wholesale repeating. Richard Prendergast, assistant state's attorney, added to the charges when he told of being slugged in the polling place adjoining the saloon of John O'Malley, leader of the Sullivan faction which is accused of fraudulent activities in behalf of Dorsey R. Crowe.

Ald. Geiger said he had evidence that one man voted eighty-one times. Ald. Hugo Krause, who is not up for reëlection, said that the conditions were the worst in years. Women were openly flaunted as they came to vote, he said.

"Between 1,500 and 2,000 illegal votes were cast in the primary," said Ald. Geiger. "The repeating was so flagrant that I have reconsidered my decision not to run against John F. O'Malley for ward committeeman."

O'Malley's men declare the charges are only another "dream of 'Jimmy' Quinn's."

Arrested; Confidence Game Charge.

Richard Guthman, 1442 Catalpa avenue, a retired teaming contractor, surrendered and was released yesterday on bonds of $10,000, fixed by Judge Heap, on a warrant obtained by Mrs. Elinora Mowen, 5452 Lyndale avenue, charging Guthman with operating a confidence game. Attorney Charles E. Selleck, representing Guthman, said the trouble grows out of a note given her for a $9,000 loan.

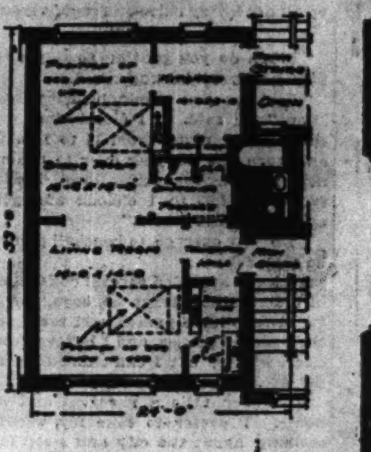
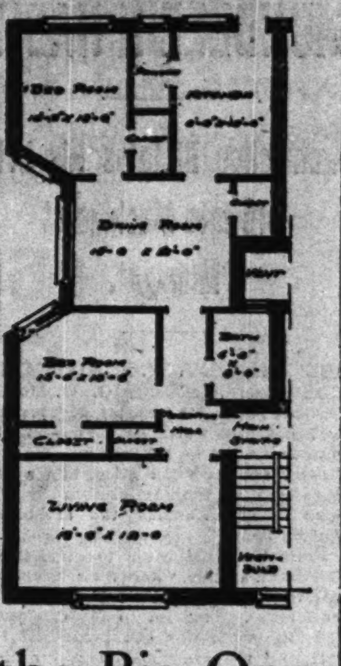
Three Rooms Murphy-ized vs. Five Rooms Ordinary





The Smaller of These Two Apartments Is Just as Big as the Big One

because the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed has been installed in the 3-room unit—doubling the efficiency of every room but the kitchen.

The Murphy Bed is changing our ideas of living economy and building efficiency because it transforms 3 rooms into 5 rooms by slipping out of the way and out of sight in the daytime. It does the same thing, proportionately, for smaller or larger homes. Yet it is a real bed—not a folding bed nor a piece of sham furniture.

In the smaller of these two apartments the tenant has

2 Rooms to Furnish and
3 Rooms to Care For as against

4 Rooms to Furnish and
5 Rooms to Care For

In the smaller apartment the living-room and dining-room become bedrooms at night—when they are no longer needed as living-room and dining-room.

Mr. Tenant: Murphy-ized Apartments save money for you and save work for your wife. Write us for list of Murphy-ized Apartments just completed and for rent.

Mr. Builder: Murphy-ized Apartments will increase your investment return from 10% to 50%, because you can build a larger number of efficient units in a given space and they all stay full.

FIVE MILE WALKS AND COLD SWIMS, MUNDELEIN HABIT

Archbishop Dictates His Letters Into Machine at Midnight.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

His grace Archbishop G. W. Mundelein is a believer in fresh air, deep breathing, and cold water swimming—and he practices what he believes in.

After the reception given him a few days ago at the Auditorium by the Knights of Columbus the archbiship walked home.

From the Auditorium to State street and North avenue, where the archiepiscopal residence is located, is two and a half miles. This led to the disclosure that the walk was about one-half the "stunt" the archbishop sets for himself as his daily constitutional.

A Night Walker.

"It's the only way I can keep up with my work," said Archbishop Mundelein. "I like to walk five miles a day whenever it is possible, but I must walk from three to four miles a day if I keep in condition.

"Often I walk at night because of preoccupation during the day. My secretary, or one of my priests, accompanies me, and I enjoy the outing. It helps my breathing and my general health."

Walking is not, however, Archbishop Mundelein's most strenuous physical exercise or his keenest enjoyment. He is a swimmer, and doesn't quit going into the water until the first of November. At least, this has been his practice for the last five years.

An Ocean Swimmer.

"While I was in Brooklyn," he said, "I established a mission at Long Beach, several miles from the city. I built a house near the edge of the ocean and there made a home for the priests who came out from the city for a vacation of two or three weeks.

"I stayed there all of the time during the summer and took a swim in the ocean every day before going to my work. The visiting priests would sometimes go in swimming with me, but many is the time I have gone in the water alone late in the fall when no one was around. I kept it up until November. I'm afraid I'll not be able to continue that practice in Chicago."

Has No Day Off.

"Do you take one day in seven to yourself, as most priests do?" he was asked.

"No, I can't do that,' he replied. "On Monday the priests come to see me and on other days I have to work to the schedule, which means two and three meetings a day.

"I shall begin holding confirmations before Easter. Many do not realize the work involved in going to a church for a confirmation service. It takes an entire forenoon. I inspect the entire premises of the church and the residence of the priests. I personally investigate the vestments and see that none are torn, soiled, or in any way out of place. I can't leave this work to a secretary. I am responsible for the proper observance of all necessary rules and requirements."

Dictates at Midnight.

"When do you get time to do your correspondence?" he was asked.

"Perhaps you would be surprised to know," he said. "I dictate into a machine every night from 11 to 12 o'clock and turn the copying over to the office next morning for transcribing. I usually retire at 12:30 to 1 o'clock and get up any time from 7 to 8."

"Do you ever go to baseball games?" he was asked.

"I have attended several college meets in order to encourage the boys," he said. "I always have passes sent me to go to the baseball games, and I believe in good, clean sports, but I can't find time from my work to go.

"I never take a vacation and leave home. I prefer to take my vacations walking about the city and sleep in my own bed at night. If I leave the city it is on the business of the church, and I get back as quickly as I can."

WOMEN UNIONISTS FIGHT SWANSON'S CANDIDACY.

Trade Union League Resents Judicial Candidate's Stand as Legislator on Ten Hour Law.

"Women cannot vote for members of the state legislature, but sometimes we can get a chance at them when the legislators want to run for some other office. This is one of the times."

Such was the ultimatum of Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the Woman's Trade Union League of Illinois yesterday. The league this afternoon will start its fight against the election of Senator John A. Swanson for judge of the Municipal court, Miss Nestor said.

The March bulletin of the league advocates his defeat because of his stand on the woman's ten hour bill in 1911, when he was a member of the house, and on the woman's nine hour bill, when a state senator in 1915.

Senator Swanson, when informed of the attack, said:

"In 1911 I stood in the house for an amendment to the ten hour bill which would have permitted employés of stores in sections of the city outside of the loop to work twelve hours on Saturdays without increasing the total number of hours for a week upon the ten hour basis. I favored strictly the terms of the original bill as affecting factories."

DALMORES' RING VANISHES, BUT HE WEEPS NOT

Suspect Tailor or Friends? "Jamais! Nevaire! It Is Impos-see-ble."

Charles Dalmores, the grand opera star, is a philosopher and eminently a gentleman. If you don't believe it list to this tale of how his $1,000 diamond ring took wings yesterday.

Mr. Dalmores only knew one period of life when he was not immaculate. That was when he was in the trenches. And that is why a tailor near the Auditorium hotel has a steady job whenever Dalmores is in Chicago.

Twice a week he calls at the hotel, gets a consignment of garments, presses them and returns them. Yesterday morning he called and had just departed when Dalmores received a shock.

Two friends had called to see him, arriving just before he finished dressing. So did the tailor. Dalmores indicated the garments the tailor was to take, then turned to talk with his friends.

Carefully choosing a necktie, he stuck a jeweled pin in it, then reached for his big two carat diamond ring.

"Mon Dieu! My ring! He is gone!" He exclaimed. There was a hurried search, but no ring appeared. He called the tailor and instructed him to search all pockets in the garments he had taken, but no ring.

"Do you suppose the tailor or any of your friends could have taken it?" he was asked.

"Jamais! Jamais! Nevaire! Ze tailor, he is my friend. My friends, they are my friends. It is impos-see-ble. Ze ring is here—it is gone—pouf! I do not weep, I do not seeng."

HE FORGED FOR $1,000 A MONTH

Man Arrested in Shreveport, La., Accused of Swindling Banks.

CAUGHT BY TELLER.

C. S. Walker

C. S. Walker of Detroit is under arrest in Shreveport, La., accused of having swindled banks throughout the country of $60,000.

Clarence W. Toole of the Burns Detective agency, declares that Walker is the man who obtained $1,000 a month by his forgeries for the last five years.

Walker was arrested in Shreveport when he presented a check for $100 at a bank there. The paying teller glanced at him and remembered the circular of warning which the bank had received.

He excused himself for a moment, sought the circular, and read:

"This swindler will appear at your window and greet you in a friendly manner, and call you by name. When you state that you do not recall having met him before he will display evident surprise. He will mention some gathering or affair that you have attended, and endeavor to convince you that he became acquainted with you on that occasion.

"He now has your confidence and at this precise moment he extends a check to you for cash."

This had been Walker's procedure a moment before. The teller also perceived that his description was that of the man in the circular: Forty or 45 years old, 5 feet 9 inches high, weight 180 pounds; figure, stout; complexion, ruddy; brown hair and blue eyes.

WEALTHY YOUTH ARRESTED AFTER AUTO KILLS MAN

Cigar Manufacturer's Son Says He Didn't See Victim—Death Is Instantaneous.

Daniel Casey, 27 years old, believed to have lived at 1138 West Fifteenth street, was instantly killed last night when he was struck by an automobile which was being driven north in North Michigan avenue at Lake street. Archie Wengler, son of Mathias Wengler, a member of the firm of Wengler & Mandell, cigar manufacturers, was taken into custody as the driver of the car that struck Casey.

Witnesses were unable to tell whether it was the automobile owned and driven by Wengler or another north-bound automobile which killed Casey. The second automobile did not stop after the accident and detectives are searching for the driver.

Casey, who was formerly employed by the Illinois Central as freight clerk, recently went to work for Sears-Roebuck company.

Last night he went to the railroad offices to visit his friends. With Daniel Bailey, 5624 Lowe avenue, and Thomas Mulqueen, 1015 East Forty-third street, he left the freight offices and walked west in Lake street.

In the automobile driven by Wengler were Richard Benner, employed in the purchasing department of the Chicago Tunnel company, and T. R. Wilson, a sanitary inspector employed by the city health department.

Wengler said he did not see Casey, and it was not until he felt his car jolt over the body that he knew of the accident. Wengler stopped his automobile and with the assistance of his two friends and Bailey and Mulqueen carried Casey to the sidewalk and summoned the police.

"I think this is a bad luck automobile," young Wengler said when taken to the police station. "It was stolen by bandits several months ago and they were riding in it when one of their number was shot and killed by a policeman."

COVERT THREAT IN LOAN APPEAL MADE BY JAPAN?

United States Gold Sought to Exploit Mikado's Development of China.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—While the European war rivets the attention of the world Japan and China have carried their struggle into the American money mart. The outcome will determine the success of Japan's immediate plans for the development of the resources of China and may influence to a marked degree the relations of the United States with the two oriental empires.

It appears that the United States became the scene of this contest as soon as Baron Shibusawa, the great Japanese financier, arrived in this country a few months ago. The baron, it seems came not only to cultivate a better understanding in the United States of his people and their aims but to interest American financiers in furnishing the vast sums of money that will be needed by Japanese enterprise to develop concessions in China.

MEETS U. S. GOLD BARONS.

The baron was entertained in New York and other American cities, met the leading financiers, and explained the opportunities for profitable investment in China made possible by the influence Japan has established over that nation.

The Chinese government, it now transpires, at once took alarm and its representatives in this country set out to checkmate Baron Shibusawa. Chinese officials in the United States charged that the baron not only sought to obtain capital for the exploitation of China but to create so large an American interest therein that the American government would be deterred from interfering with the future plans of Japan to extend its control over China.

A COVERT THREAT?

Baron Shibusawa made it clear to the American financiers that in investing money in the development of Chinese resources they were expected to do so through Japanese intermediaries. The concerns to be financed, it turned out, are Japanese companies throughout. The baron desired American financial coöperation on this basis. Investment of American capital, he informed the financiers, on any other basis in the Chinese market "might lead to hostile competition, mutual distrust, and bitter animosity which may be mutually disastrous."

Chinese agents at once waited upon the American financiers who had conferred with Baron Shibusawa. They asserted that the baron had delivered to the financiers a covert threat that they would meet with difficulty if they attempted to finance enterprises in China except through the medium of Japanese concerns.

PLOT AGAINST OPEN DOOR.

They also charged that the baron was seeking to involve American capitalists in a plot to undermine the open door doctrine, American treaties with China, and the preservation of the independence and territorial integrity of the great Asiatic empire.

The Chinese agents finally obtained from the principal group of New York bankers consulted by Baron Shibusawa the following statement:

"No pledge of any character has been given to Japanese financiers in regard to the financing of enterprises in China. No arrangement will be entered into which impairs the rights of the Japanese government, ignores the rights of the Chinese to participate in the development of their own country, or which undermines the policy of the American government proclaimed in the note of May 16 last to the governments of China and Japan. The only coöperation that will be approved is some form of international combination that will give practical effect to the open door doctrine and the many treaties safeguarding China's independence."

BARON'S TRIP FAILS?

This statement was cabled to the Chinese government, and thereupon Chinese officials in this country asserted that the mission of Baron Shibusawa to popularize Japanese control of China in the United States had proved a failure.

The note of May 16, to which this statement refers, is the expression of the attitude of the United Statae toward the process by which Japan obtained commercial ascendency in China. When the Japanese demands upon China were under consideration last spring Secretary of State Bryan, at the instance of President Wilson, sent the following note to the Chinese government:

"In view of the circumstances of the negotiations which have taken place or which are now pending between the government of China and the government of Japan and the agreements which have been reached as a result thereof, the government of the United States has the honor to notify the government of the Chinese republic that it cannot recognize any agreement or undertaking which has been entered into or which may be entered into, between the governments of China ad Japan impairing the treaty rights of the United States and its citizens in China, the political or territorial integrity of the republic of China, or the international policy, commonly known as the open door policy."

An identical note was also sent to the Japanese government. The replies to this note have been suppressed.

GIRL ASKS $25,000

Brings Breach of Promise Action on Eve of Man's Wedding.

Miss Sarah Friedman.

Today, according to an announcement, is to be the wedding day of Abe Lipschultz, a capmaker and cutter of 652 Maxwell street. But the bride to be is not Miss Sarah Friedman of 553 East Forty-fifth street, and so yesterday Miss Friedman filed a suit in the Circuit court against Lipschultz for $25,000 damages for alleged breach of promise.

Both Lipschultz and Miss Friedman came to the United States from Russia. He has been here ten years. Miss Friedman came six years ago and went to live with her married brother. She sets forth that she met Lipschultz two years ago and that he had paid her constant attention until recently.

"The defendant has taken the plaintiff to all his relatives," the bill recites, "and has introduced her as his intended wife and made statements in their presence that he soon would be married to her."

AVIATOR BURNED TO A CRISP AFTER 13,000 FOOT FALL

William Robinson of Grinnell Victim of Accident—Once "Tribune" Pilot.

Ewart, Ia., March 11.—William Robinson, Grinnell aviator, was burned to death after his aeroplane had overturned and dropped 13,000 feet near here at 4:20 this afternoon.

The gasoline tank on his machine exploded as the biplane hit the ground, throwing the burning liquid over the machine and Robinson, enveloping them in flames.

Limbs Burned Off.

Robinson's hands and feet were burned off and his body was a charred mass of burned flesh. He was dead when William Clelland and William Cline, who saw the machine fall and heard the explosion, reached the scene a few minutes later.

The machine was entirely destroyed, and the cause of the accident probably never will be known.

Robinson was 32 years old, and is survived by a widow and four children. He had lived at Grinnell practically all his life.

The aviator's body was taken to Grinnell late tonight by relatives.

ONCE "TRIBUNE" FLIER.

William C. Robinson achieved his first note as an aviator when he broke the record for continuous flight by flying from Grinnell, Ia., to Kentland, Ind., a distance of 375 miles, in 4 hours and 44 minutes.

In this flight he acted under the dispensation of the Aero Club of America. His trip was sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and the Des Moines Capital. It had been his intention to fly straight to Chicago, but a storm caused him to take refuge at a great height, where he remained, losing his way.

Robinson built his own aeroplane and insisted in attending to all details, feeling that he could not depend upon the efforts of others where his life was at stake.

Convicted Under Mann Act.

Philip Hoffberg, charged with violating the Mann act in transporting his wife for immoral purposes, was fined $50 and sentenced to three months in the penitentiary by Judge Anderson in the United States District court yesterday.

Art Collectors Vie at Sale of Paintings

Treasures Offered at Unique Sale Attract Bids from All Parts of the United States.

Full Statement of Effects of This Unusual Experiment in Selling Pictures for What They Will Bring.

BY J. W. YOUNG.

When this sale opened last Monday morning hundreds of people came to my galleries, literally hundreds: Bankers and capitalists, preachers and teachers, lawyers and doctors, merchants and their clerks, and in the evening working people, who were employed and could not come down in the daytime. All of them were interested in pictures. Some were collectors who had been picture buyers for years; others had never bought pictures from any art dealer, as they thought prices were so enormous at art stores that they could not afford to buy good pictures. That nearly all of them found pictures in the collection they wanted to buy is proven by the fact that on the first day I received one hundred and ninety-nine bids.

Bidding Spirited From Start.

Naturally everyone wanted to get the picture he liked as low as possible, and most of the first bids were made for five per cent of the catalogue price. Other bidders began raising these bids and at close of business on Monday some pictures had fifty per cent bids registered. On Tuesday the crowd was only a little smaller and two pictures had been bid up until they were sold at the catalogue price. On Wednesday the bidding still continued, with big crowds, and another picture had been sold at the catalogue price. On Thursday and Friday many women who had visited the sale and left low bids earlier in the week returned with their husbands, or men brought their wives, or some friend whose judgment they thought was better than their own in regard to pictures. If a favorite picture had already been bid higher than the price they wanted to pay, they studied the collection closely in order to find other pictures which they liked and which still had bids so low that they could afford to raise them.

Many came who had not attended my previous sales of this character, and evidently had not studied my Plan of Sale, but came to look the collection over, expecting to return near the close of the sale and pick up a fine picture at a bargain. They learned, however, that the best way to get a bargain in this sale is to select a picture early and leave the lowest bid on it that a buyer feels like making, with the hope that no one will raise this bid.

Public Confidence Established.

Two years ago I conducted my first sale by this plan. I lost thousands of dollars. One year ago I held another. Old patrons came again and brought their friends. I lost money on this second sale, but not nearly so much. The reason I lost so much money the first time I tried this plan was that the public did not believe I would sell pictures unless I got a fair price. But every one who has ever made a bid on any picture in my sales knows that he got the picture at the price he bid for it unless some bona fide buyer raised his bid; and that always when the price of a picture reduced itself by my daily reduction plan to the amount some patron had bid, that patron got his picture.

Best Pictures Still Low.

So that all may have a chance to know just how each picture stood at close of business Friday night, I am including in this notice a table showing the catalogue price of each picture and the amount bid on same; also the percentage of catalogue price that is bid on each work.

By looking over the table you will see that every picture now has a bid. Any of you who expect to get pictures at 5% of catalogue price need not come, as all such bids are covered. Five pictures now have 5% bids; one of them is by a prominent artist. There are 23 pictures with 10% bids. It will require only a 15% bid to get these away from present bidders.

$75 Bid On $500 Picture.

Twenty-one works have 15% bids, and among them are several very fine paintings. No. 16 by Karl Buehr is a lovely work that should bring the catalogue price of $500.00 and has only $75.00 bid. Monday bidders should consider this work, which anyone can hang in his home with pride. A fine Bicknell, a Bundy and two very choice water colors by Charles L. A. Smith are surely worth many times the prices bid at present.

20% Bids On These.

Among the pictures in the 20% list there are many works that should not be held so lightly. Matilda Browne's "Baby Bossy," Bryant's "Hollyhocks," and the two fine Bundys—one of them his best work in the sale—are worth many bids in advance. The two lovely moonlights by Edgar S. Cameron and Frank De Haven, as well as Paul Cornoyer's "Haymaking," have been bid on by young collectors who show good judgment.

No. 61 by Gilchrist is so quiet that it has escaped the attention of many, but its refinement will win it more bids. Wilson Irvine's "Summer Days" is worth five times the amount now bid for it. The two fine Kitchells in the 20% list are sure to have bids from some one who lost out in the low bids of some of his other works.

I thought Peyraud's "May Morning" would bring very close to the catalogue price, and am sure that the three by the talented Percy Schneller, the young Wisconsin artist, will go higher, as he is rapidly finding favor among those who buy good pictures.

Rivalry Among Big Collectors.

Alten's "At the Trough," Waugh's "Sunset, Monhegan Island," and Marian Blakelock's "Sunset on the Rapids" deserve to have passed the 25% mark long before this. Every bid on Emil Carlsen's "Ripe and Ready" has been made by bidders who know they could not buy a work like this at his studio at even the full price stated in the catalogue.

The richness and fine quality of Jas. H. Beard's "Stalking the Coon" should soon advance it beyond the 30% class.

"The New Gown" by Mr. Gilchrist is so attractive that there should be keen rivalry for it before the sale goes much further. The works by Waugh and Potthast now standing at 40% are fine and will advance. Alten's "Autumn Oaks" is so fine in color it will win higher bids, too.

Alfred Jansson's "Early Snow" has won its way 5% at a time up to 45%, and I do not think its admirers will let it remain there long. Chase's "The Old Black Pot" is growing in favor. Every bid on it has been by some of the most prominent collectors in the city. Whoever buys this work will own a very fine painting that I think is worth above the price quoted in the catalogue. The same is true of Alice Schille's "Little Nurse."

"Pines at Sunset" by Eaton so improves each time it is viewed that it is certain to have more than 35% bid soon.

Pictures Are Worthy.

I wish to say—and I mean every word of this—that I believe every picture in this sale is well worth the price in the catalogue. This is the second time that I have published these prices in "The Tribune," and I have published them also in my catalogue, with the full knowledge that these publications come to the hands of every art dealer in the city, and are carefully read by nearly every art collector. Naturally I am not stating anything in these puublications that will impair my reputation for fairness and a good general knowledge of picture values.

You Should Act at Once.

Each day from now on picture buyers will watch this sale closely. Bids on some of the very choicest pictures in the sale are so low that they are certain to advance. If they do not, some one is going to get the greatest picture bargain ever found in Chicago, and this bargain will go to the one who is fortunate enough to have a bid on the picture he likes at the time it has reduced itself in price to the level of his bid.

Blakelock Exhibition Coming.

Already during this sale I have found new patrons who wish to buy from me some of the fine works that I own by Inness, Wyant, Homer, Davis, Ranger, Bundy and other famous artists whose pictures are not included in this sale, and I have had a great many inquiries for the works of Blakelock. It is well known that I have been a persistent buyer of this artist's pictures for years and I own, at present, quite a large number of very fine examples by Blakelock. These I will probably show quite soon in a special Blakelock Exhibition, and I contemplate preparing an illustrated catalogue of the Blakelocks that I own. Any out-of-town patrons who read this can have this catalogue furnished to them upon application by mail or otherwise.

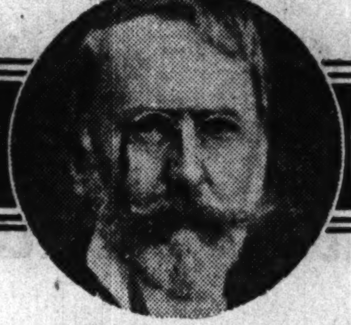
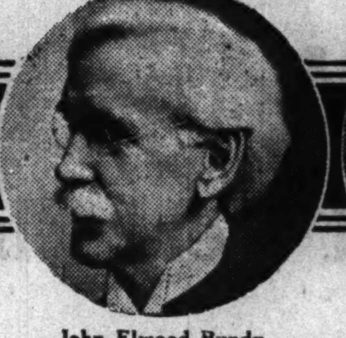
Paintings of Real Merit at Any Price the Public Offers



William M. Chase, N. A.



John Elwood Bundy

Edward H. Potthast, N. A.

One week ago I devoted an entire page in The Sunday Tribune to an announcement of this unique sale of 125 paintings by leading American artists. The complete catalog, printed below, shows the response in dollars and cents. It shows the amount bid on each picture during the past week.

Prices Drop 5% Tomorrow

Tomorrow all those pictures which were not sold at full catalog price will be reduced to 95% of catalog price. Tuesday any picture not sold on Monday may be bought for 90% of catalog price. Wednesday all that are left will be on sale at 85%, and so on until all are sold.

You can offer now to buy any one of these paintings at the price it will be on any particular date. If no one else makes a better offer it will be yours on that day, even though your bid is only 5% of its catalog price.

Everything Open and Above Board

The name and address of every bidder on any painting is open to all other bidders on that painting, so that they may assure themselves that all bids are sincere—genuine—bona fide.

Any One Who Knows Paintings Can Assure You That Those Listed Below Are Worth Far More Than Has Been Bid on Them.

PREPARE! THAT'S MATTHEWS' CRY; HE SELLS COWS

State Food and Dairy Chief Comes Out of Egypt to Lead Farmers to Light.

MAKES BANKERS ASSIST.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Preparedness!

State as well as national; preparedness in the barn as well as on the battleship; plenty of butter as well as plenty of bullets; more money as well as munitions; organization and efficiency for business as well as for battles.

That's the doctrine which Scott Matthews is preaching up and down the state. Matthews is an old time Democratic politician. He has a round, red, smooth shaven face, and he smokes a corncob pipe. He sells real estate for a living down somewhere towards Egypt. Just now he is state food and dairy commissioner.

He does more than preach. Since he began he has led a procession of more than 500 big black and white and fawn colored thoroughbred milk cows into Illinois, and he has set his mark at adding no less than 100,000 Holsteins and Guernseys to the bovine population of the state.

Example of Co-operation.

He sells the blooded cows to farmers who don't want to buy them, and he makes hardshell country bankers advance all the money necessary to finance the purchase. His work is the best possible example of the preparedness which results when all kinds of people unite—for purely selfish reasons—to help each other get things running in efficient and profitable style.

Never did an advocate of the biggest army in the world emit louder and more terrifying shrieks of warning than did Matthews when he started to stir up the farmers and the dairy interests of the state.

"Since 1900 we have added 2,000,000 people to the population of the state," screamed Matthews. "And there were actually 275,000 more milk cows in Illinois in 1900 than there were in 1915. Help! Help!"

Matthews called all the big firms who make farm machinery, silos, stock feed and dairy tools into conference. He laid the facts before them.

He Gets the Coin.

"As a state official," he said, "I am not allowed to solicit funds for any purpose. But it will take a lot more money than the state has allowed me to do the necessary educational work among the farmers and business men of the state. If you men have any money you would like to invest in the promotion of future dividends, I can show you how to spend it."

A fund of $10,000 was promptly raised. Then Matthews tackled the bankers of the state. He told them that if the farmers made more money it would increase the profits of the bankers. He pointed out that dairy farming was one of the few branches of agriculture which adds to the fertility of the soil as well as to the profits of the farmer. He said that as the result of his investigations he was ready to prove that not more than half the few dairy cows in the state earned their keep.

"Now, gentlemen," he urged, "I want you bankers to advance enough money to finance the purchase of a lot of thoroughbred cows. I will send expert dairymen to select the cattle. I will bring a carload of those selected cows to your town, and my experts will feed and milk them for a couple of weeks, keeping every day a record of the milk and butter fat production of each animal. Then we will sell them to the farmers about your town at prices which will just cover the cost.

Bankers Agree.

"No doubt you will have to carry the purchase price of many of the cows on notes given by the individual farmers. But my experts will go right out into the country with each of these farmers and will stay there long enough to show him how to feed and handle the new cows in the most profitable way. I am sure it will prove a most profitable investment."

The bankers agreed. George Woodruff of Joliet, president of the State Bankers' association, offered to lend $250,000 to the bankers of the state, to be used as "cow money." Many of the individual bankers in various towns also took the matter up.

In half a dozen cities and towns Matthews called the surrounding farmers to talk the plan over. They were at first a little suspicious. The idea of paying $100 or more for a mere cow was startling.

"If you buy one of my cows," declared Matthews, "I'll guarantee that she will earn her feed the first year and pay interest in addition on $1,000. Half the cheap cows you are milking cost more for feed than you get for their milk."

Many Carloads Distributed.

Last year, as a result of Matthews' work, five carloads of thoroughbred dairy cows were distributed among the farmers from Centralia as a center. Irvington took three carloads, Carbondale two carloads, Murphysboro one carload, and Carmi two carloads.

Within the last month farmers around Vienna, Ill., have bought four carloads, Morris City three carloads, Grayville two, Shawneetown two, Carmi two more, Olney one, and Pinckneyville two carloads.

Scott Matthews is an enthusiast. He says the invasion of Illinois by full blooded dairy cows has only begun. He's got men out now buying the best he can find in Wisconsin, Michigan, and New York.

Also, he has interested the railroads. The Big Four system has agreed to furnish fifteen thoroughbred bulls to be distributed along the line of its road from Paris to Cairo. The Illinois Central starts with ten registered bulls, which will go to the farming communities in southern Illinois.

Matthews is, incidentally, something of a show man. When a carload of his thoroughbred dairy cows or bulls arrives in a downstate town it is met by the town band and escorted in procession to the courthouse square. The farmers come in from miles around, and the whole town gives itself up to a celebration.

"Preparedness?" asks Matthews. "Wait till you taste some of the milk and butter from our new stock."

MAYOR SIGNS THE BUDGET AS PASSED BY COUNCIL.

Morals Inspection Division Saved by Action—Changes to Be Recommended Later.

Mayor Thompson yesterday signed the city's 1916 budget in the form that it passed the city council a week ago. The appropriation for morals inspection in Second Deputy Funkhouser's office stands at $36,000, the amount allotted by the finance committee.

In announcing to the council that he had approved the appropriation bill the mayor said at a subsequent meeting he would recommend certain changes covering "omitted items."

DELAY POISON SOUP CASE.

Judge Arnold Heap at the request of the police, yesterday postponed until March 16 hearing of the two charges of assault to kill against John Allegrini, 2408 Calumet avenue, arrested as a suspect in the poisoning of more than a hundred guests at the Archbishop George W. Fall of 16 Stories Fails to Kill Girl, So It's Back to Job

Minnie Werner Who Tumbled from Skyscraper Ready for Work.

SHE HAD A 'FINE REST'

Miss Minnie Werner, who has had the unique experience of falling sixteen stories out of a skyscraper, is practically ready to resume her work. She expects, in the course of a week or two, to go back to her typewriter in the office of the Railway Age Gazette on the seventeenth floor of the Transportation building.

The case of Miss Werner has been unusual not only from a standpoint of general interest but from a scientific standpoint. There was a popular theory that a person was dead after falling eight stories. Miss Werner disproved conclusively that theory.

Arm Still Hurts a Little.

She not only was alive after the fall, but now, less than ten weeks after the accident, she is ready to renew the activities incident to earning her living. She is waiting a little while longer for her fractured arm to get back into working shape. That is the only injury of a permanent nature, and according to her physicians, Dr. W. M. Harsha and Dr. W. T. Harsha, that will not incapacitate her.

There was probably only one spot in the several hundred square miles within Chicago's boundaries on which Miss Werner could have fallen and lived. She found that spot. It was a truck of paper boxes, which stood 200 feet below her when, in a spell of dizziness, she dropped from a window high up in the Transportation building.

Miss Werner has been out of St. Luke's hospital, where she was taken, for the last two weeks. Even her nervous system is so well recovered she is able to talk about her narrow escape from death.

Has a "Fine Rest."

"I have had a fine rest," said Miss Werner, "and I should like nothing so well as to get back to work. I feel perfectly well. If you have ever had a dream in which you fell off a mountain, you have had an experience like mine.

"I could think all the time I was dropping, although I could not seem to catch my breath. I could even see and move my arms until the wind rushed past me with such velocity that I was almost blinded. I could not see where I was falling. By the time I got close to the earth everything was a muddy blur. I lost consciousness until some men lifted me from the truck."

Doctor Tells of Recovery.

Miss Werner has been so well that the elder Dr. Harsha has not visited her during the last two weeks.

"Her arm had a shattered fracture," said Dr. Harsha, "and it is getting well. There may be a permanent injury to the arm, but it will not be of such a nature as to incapacitate her from work or hinder her to any extent in her ordinary activities.

"It is hard to tell about her nervous system as yet. She never talked much to me, but she always seemed perfectly rational and seemed so to her relatives, to whom she naturally talked more freely."

Never Knew Case Like It.

The younger Dr. Harsha has been visiting her at intervals since she returned to her home.

"She is getting along fine," he said. "She is in good health and spirits. Her arm is healing up and will be, I believe, in excellent shape.

"I have never heard of another case where a person remained alive after falling from such a height. There is a popular idea that a fall of 100 feet, or approximately eight stories, would kill a person before he touched the earth—that the act of flying through the air would exterminate the life. That was certainly disproved in Miss Werner's case."

UNIVERSITY WILL START INTERNATIONAL LAW CLASS.

Charles Cheney Hyde Will Deliver Twenty Lectures at Northwestern Beginning March 20.

Northwestern university has announced a course of twenty lectures by Charles Cheney Hyde on international law, the first of which will be given March 20 in Assembly hall. Mr. Hyde is considered one of the best experts on international law in the country.

The course is intended to appeal to thinking men and women who are earnestly interested in the new position which the United States has assumed among the nations through its diplomacy in the present war.

Among the topics to be discussed are: "What Is International Law?" "The Story of the Monroe Doctrine," "Our Dealings with Mexico Since 1913," "Neutrality: Nature of the Obligation," "Duties of the United States as a Neutral," "Peace Negotiations," "Roosevelt's Mediation in the Russo-Japanese War—How Far Can We Go Today?" "War: Its Effects Upon Belligerents," and "The Supremacy of the United States Over Its Own Territory."

The registration fee for the entire course will be $10. Senator James Hamilton Lewis and other Illinois representatives at congress have been invited to attend the lectures.

MRS. LANGTRY HURTS ARM.

Lily Fell While on Way to Theater Last Night and Couldn't Appear.

Mrs. Langtry, playing at the Majestic theater, dislocated her arm when she slipped and fell on the sidewalk at Monroe and Wabash avenue last night. She was assisted to the theater by her maid, but was unable to go on the stage with her act. Dr. Max Thorek was summoned. He bound her arm in splints. She was then removed to her room at the Blackstone.

REINBERG CALLS HOSPITAL QUIZ ON BOY'S DEATH

Wardens and Nurses Must Explain Cross Infection Before County Board.

SMITH ISSUES STATEMENT.

An investigation into the death of Edward Hyman, the 6 year old boy who died yesterday at the county hospital the victim of a cross infection, will be made by the county board. Peter Reinberg, president of the county board, said yesterday that Warden Clayton T. Smith, Dr. R. T. Vaughan, night warden, and possibly some of the nurses in the contagious ward of the hospital will be summoned before the board at its regular meeting tomorrow.

"We have had no report regarding the death of the Hyman boy," said Mr. Reinberg, "but we intend to make a thorough investigation. All who know anything about the matter will be asked to appear before the county commissioners on Monday and tell what they know."

Mother in Medicated Gown.

The boy died while his parents watched him from outside the ward, protected by a glass door. His mother, Mrs. G. S. Hyman, clad in a medicated gown and mask, was permitted to be with her son for a few moments before his death.

The boy was taken to the hospital Feb. 15, a scarlet fever patient. Several days ago he contracted measles and then diphtheria. He was vaccinated under a rule of the hospital after Miss Martha Grotrain, a nurse, had contracted smallpox from a patient. Antitoxin was administered to the child after he had contracted diphtheria, but he failed rapidly.

Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, head of the Illinois Training School for Nurses, and Warden Smith held a conference concerning the case after the boy's death.

Statement by Warden.

As a result, Warden Smith issued the following statement:

"There is no possible connection between the contagious department and any other department of the general hospital," he said. "Physicians, internes nurses, and servants do not come in contact in any way with any one serving in the general hospital.

"The impression seems to be general that cases of contagious diseases are indiscriminately mixed. This is not true The various contagious cases are carefully segregated.

"Of course it is true that many a patient coming in, for instance with a case diagnosed as scarlet fever, has also been exposed to measles before entrance. No amount of precaution can prevent that child from developing measles while in the scarlet fever ward, thus exposing others to that infection.

Infected Twelve Others.

"Such a case of measles developed in the scarlet fever ward some two weeks ago. This child was promptly isolated, but too late to prevent other children from being exposed. Twelve contracted this disease. There is a standing order with the health department not to recommend any child for admission to the contagious hospital with scarlet fever, unless such child already has had measles. When this case of measles was discovered the health department was urged under no conditions to permit a child to be sent to the hospital who had not had measles.

"The hospital is overcrowded. This is due to the tremendous pressure brought to bear upon the hospital to admit cases rather than infect whole families, and, indirectly, communities.

"It is manifestly absurd that there are available for contagious cases in the city only 150 beds at the county contagious hospital and fifty at the Durand Memorial institute."

35,000 MOTHERS VIEWED BABY EXHIBIT IN WEEK.

Reports Throughout Illinois Indicate Successful Spreading of Welfare Propaganda.

Baby week closed yesterday. The sponsors for the observance of it in Chicago and Illinois were optimistic concerning the results. Many thousands of mothers were introduced to scientific methods of caring for their offspring. It was estimated that at the Boston Store alone, where the Chicago exhibit took place, 35,000 mothers listened to lectures on the care of babies or viewed the baby welfare exhibits.

Correspondingly good results were recorded in other cities of the state where exhibits and lectures were held.

"Our exhibit," said Miss Harriet Vittum, civic director of the Woman's City club, "has brought together thousands of women who never before knew anything about the scientific care of the infant. The educational value of the exhibit and the lectures in making better mothers in Chicago is incalculable."

YOUNG WIFE ENDS LIFE; PARENTS' PICTURES AT SIDE.

Photographs of Family in Austria Found on Bed of Young Woman After Quarrel with Husband.

With photographs of her father and mother in Austria-Hungary lying beside her on the bed, Mrs. Elizabeth Schillo of 1923 Burling street, was found dead in her home last night with the end of a gas tube in her mouth.

Mrs. Schillo, who was 21 years old, had been worrying over the safety of her parents and had told neighbors of her fears. In the morning she had a trivial quarrel with her husband, and this is believed to have been partly the cause of her act.

The body was found by her husband.

COUNCIL VOTES FOR SALE OF "AUTO" PHONE

Ballots, 46 to 22, to Let Bell Corporation Buy for $6,300,000.

$500,000 FOR THE CITY

The Automatic Telephone company yesterday won its two year fight to obtain permission from the city council to sell out to the Chicago Telephone company for $6,300,000.

By a decisive vote—forty-six yeas to twenty-two nays—the council passed the ordinance authorizing the merger. It only remains for the automatic company to obtain the approval of the state utilities commission and the attorney general of the United States to complete the deal.

Officials of the Bell company have indicated their intention of dismantling the automatic plant when it comes into their possession. With the sale of the automatic property will be written the last chapter of the eventful history of the expenditure of millions of dollars to establish telephone competition in Chicago.

Bitter Attacks by Minority.

The supporters of the ordinance, who included administration aldermen, at all times maintained an overwhelming majority in spite of bitter attacks from the minority. An amendment to increase the city's compensation from $500,000 to $4,000,000 was badly beaten, as was also an amendment providing for submitting the ordinance to a referendum vote.

Ald. Charles E. Merriam, leader of the opposition and author of the gas-oil committee's minority report, declared the ordinance would defraud the city out of "our property."

Ald. John C. Kennedy referred in guarded terms to "talk all around town" of graft in connection with the passage of the ordinance. He made no accusations, but admonished his colleagues to "be careful."

Sitts Leads Sale Move

On the other hand, Ald. Lewis D. Sitts, chairman of the gas-oil committee, with the support of other influential council members, asserted the ordinance was the most equitable measure that could be drafted. "We have driven a good bargain," he said.

The roll call on the passage of the ordinance follows:

Curb on Rate Advance.

In outlining the ordinance, Ald. Sitts called attention to the provision that permits the Chicago Telephone company to add only $1,532,058 to its capitalization, thus protecting the city from higher telephone rates, he said. It is understood the parent Bell company, the American Telephone and Telegraph companies, will assume the burden of the remainder of the purchase price.

Ald. Sitts also asserted that by obtaining $500,000 from the automatic company the city will profit more than if it attempted to forfeit the property as urged by the so-called radicals. Years of litigation, even if ultimately successful, he argued, would mean the depreciation of the plant below $500,000.

Kempster B. Miller, telephone engineer for the gas-oil committee, estimated the value of the automatic plant to the Chicago Telephone company at $1,532,058. Its scrap value he placed at about $1,000,000.

Gives Minority Arguments.

In presenting the minority report recommending that the ordinance be placed on file Ald. Merriam said:

"The minority recommended that the ordinance be placed on file for a variety of reasons.

"First, we recommended that the ordinance be placed on file because whatever the value of the Automatic Telephone company, it belongs to the city of Chicago. This is true because the property of the company, under the franchise, was to revert to the city if 20,000 bona fide subscribers were not maintained.

"On the express admission of counsel for the company it has not 20,000 subscribers. The property should therefore revert.

"This is our property. We as seventy trustees are holding it in trust for the 2,500,000 citizens of Chicago. We have no right to authorize its sale.

Why $6,300,000?

"Now this property is to be sold for $6,300,000. How is that figure arrived at? No one knows. Mr. Kingsbury, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, was asked for the reason behind the figure. He could not or would not tell the committee.

"The only theory under which I can account for this stupendous figure is that those who have lost money on the project are to be allowed to recoup. This is indeed unusual. The value of the property is about $2,000,000. Now, why are they paying $4,000,000 more than the property is worth? How is the $4,000,000 worth of hot air turned into gold? Well, one answer is that the large capitalization of the American Telephone and Telegraph company will allow it to tuck away somewhere this $4,000,000 and charge it up for an increase in toll rates.

"In conclusion, the minority believes that the matter should go either to a judicial tribunal or to the people. I move that the ordinance be placed on file."

Ald. Sitts said he had little or no doubt that a part of the $6,300,000 was being paid for the elimination of competition. He said that $500,000 of the amount to be added to capital account will be wiped out at the rate of one-thirteenth a year by an amortization process.

Merriam Motions Lost.

Ald. Merriam's first motion to file the ordinance in accordance with the recommendation of the minority of the gas-oil committee was tabled, 46 yeas to 22 nays. His next motion, to increase the city's compensation to $4,000,000, lost, 48 to 20. His final motion, to insert a referendum provision, was tabled, 43 yeas to 25 nays. Ald. Merriam also made a motion to take a recess to prevent immediate action, and this also was snowed under.

Those who voted for a referendum were:

Werner,

People Should Have Voice.

The minority declared that in a matter of such importance the people should be given an opportunity to vote on the measure.

"That is especially true," said Ald. Kennedy, "because there is talk all around town: 'What is the price for an automatic telephone vote?' Half a dozen men have asked me that. I don't want to question any motives, but we should be very careful."

"If we pass it without a referendum the general effect will be bad," said Ald. Merriam. "It should go on the ballot at the June election."

"That is not fair," replied Ald. Sitts. "The Chicago Telephone company's offer expires July 1. Before that time the automatic company must obtain the approval of the utilities commission and the attorney general. Any delay will make the deal fall flat. The people of Chicago will never again have an opportunity to get as much money out of the sale as they have today."

Mentions "Subway Steal."

"It is only a question of making the company live up to its contract," said Ald. A. A. McCormick. "The company was organized to steal the future subways of the city."

"Let's be fair about these things," exclaimed Ald. W. F. Lipps. "Why hide the facts? Why ask where that $4,000,000 is going to? It's going to the bondholders who invested more than $6,000,000 in this property. I think this is too technical for a referendum, and I have heard no expression of the people against it."

Ald. Frank Ray said the ordinance was open to the same objections as the old Yerkes ordinances.

"There is only one question," declared Ald. Buck, "and that is whether we are going to let one corporation sell to another the property of the people of Chicago."

Ald. Block and Kjellander spoke against the ordinance, while Ald. Lawley and Bergen were among those who advocated its adoption.

ASKS CONGRESS TO TAKE A HAND IN ROCK ISLAND

House Member Urges Inquiry Into Receivership—Would Prevent Foreclosure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—A demand that congress investigate the present receivership of the Rock Island railroad and take action to prevent the road from being returned to the Moore-Reid syndicate under foreclosure proceedings was made in the house late today by Representative Oglesby of New York.

Mr. Oglesby said the road was thrown into a receivership through improper methods and that the present receiver, former Secretary of War Dickinson, has improperly used funds of the road for improvements and betterments. He introduced a resolution directing the committee on interstate commerce or one of its subcommittees to carry on an investigation of the affairs of the road.

Sees Collusion in Receivership.

In his resolution Mr. Oglesby states that Judge Carpenter, before whom the receivership proceedings took place, has said the road is solvent and that the interstate commerce commission has reported that the receivership was obtained by collusion and without action by the board of directors or the consent of the stockholders.

The resolution also recites that Receiver Dickinson defaulted interest payment on the debenture bonds on Jan. 15 last, although "the earnings of the property fully warranted this interest payment."

Mr. Oglesby further states that this default has necessitated "a reorganization whereby it is threatened that the property will be reorganized in the interest of the persons who are set out in the report of the interstate commerce commission as responsible for the mismanagement and losses that brought about its present condition and would eliminate the property of the minority stockholders."

Cites Increase in Earnings.

Mr. Oglesby points out that the company's gross and net earnings during the last few months have exceeded all records, and he insists it would be a crime to permit it to be returned to the control of the Moore-Reid syndicate.

He also asks that the committee in making its investigation report upon the desirability of having congress legislate to provide for personal liability on the part of directors who loot common carriers.

LID TILTING MAY FREE HIM OF MURDER CHARGES.

Frank Martin, Accused of Killing Festy Devine, Says He Was in Cafe in Alibi Defense.

Sunday "lid tilting" may be the means of saving Frank Martin of 639 Wells street from trial as a murderer. Martin is held for the killing of Festy Devine, 212 Hill street. The shooting took place early last Sunday morning.

At the inquest yesterday Martin said that he with four other men and a girl left Fleming's saloon in Wells street at 12:10 o'clock Sunday morning and drove to the Elite café at Thirty-first and State streets, but finding it closed drove to the Panama café, at Thirty-fifth and State streets. Here, he said, they remained until after 1 o'clock.

The chauffer's time card agreed with th's, except that it was dated March 4, while the shooting took place on March 5. To explain this the inquest was continued.

SOFT COAL MAY GO UP 10 CENTS; DENY A TRUST

Dealers Say Boost Is Result of Wage and Railroad Expenses; Statistics Being Tabulated.

The price of bituminous coal will be raised on April 1. It might go up as much as 10 cents per ton.

This fact was the cause of a host of rumors yesterday. The Illinois coal mine owners, it was said, were just about to forge an iron ring to maintain prices and choke competition. Prices were to be lifted 35 cents on the ton. Twenty-three wagon dealers in Chicago had already signed the agreement and only three of the selling organizations were standing by the people and refusing to join in the movement.

A dealer who was represented as one of those who had his back to the wall in the fight against a monopoly scheme said:

"The miners in the bituminous fields have received an increase in wages that will total $15,000,000 annually. The railroads have raised their freight rates 25 per cent. Naturally we have been figuring on whether we will be able to sell coal at the same prices. If we do we will cut in on our margin, because we will have to pay the operators more.

No Price Agreement.

"There is no suggestion of an organization among Chicago dealers looking toward a price agreement in any way. The organization proposed might or might not be adopted by the local men, but it will have nothing to do with establishing prices."

H. H. Taylor, president of the Taylor Coal company, doing business in the Old Colony building, was represented as the ring leader of the new combination who had brought it just about to the point of success. Mr. Taylor said:

"It's great to be a ring leader. But the only thing I have been leading in is the encouragement of an organized study of statistics and costs among the coal dealers.

Some Cut Weights.

"When a man engages in cut-throat competition he does it because he doesn't know his costs or because he can cut his weights. We are only working out the suggestions that have been made from Washington. We are only organizing a statistical bureau."

HOYNE DENIES MACK GAVE CLEW TO ADDISON SLAYING.

Asserts Tip That Led to Arrest of Melville Reeves Came from Elsewhere—$3,500 Reward Involved.

State's Attorney Hoyne spoiled all ambitions that may be nourished by "Eddie" Mack that he is going to get any part of the $3,500 reward for the arrest of the Addison bank slayer when he said yesterday that Mack had nothing to do with the arrest of Melville Reeves.

Reeves, "the skyscraper burglar," is now in the Wheaton jail on a charge of having robbed the Addison bank of $100 and of having killed Assistant Cashier Peter Ruterman. A reporter credited to State's Attorney Hadley of Wheaton county said that the reward would go to Mack, who had given the information that led to the arrest of Reeves.

"Mack had nothing to do with the arrest," said Mr. Hoyne yesterday. "The search for the robber who committed the murder in October, 1913, was made from an entirely different source. If Mack has made such an application I will see that it is withdrawn."

PROJECT ALIEN BANK BRANCHES

Financiers Plan $20,000,000 Institution to Aid Overseas Trade.

HEAD OFFICE HERE.

A group of middle western bankers are working on plans to finance middle western manufacturers who are pushing out in the overseas trade. Extended conferences have already been held and arrangements practically completed for establishing branch banks in South America and ultimately in the orient to give the business men of this section direct financing with their constantly increasing customers in China.

John J. Arnold, vice president of the First National bank and chairman of the foreign trade committee of the Illinois Bankers' association, has taken a leading part in the discussions, both of his connections being understood to be in favor of the proposals. The complete arrangements, it is said, will be ready for announcement within the next ten days.

The parent bank of the branch institutions that are to be established as the volume of the American trade warrants will be located in Chicago, if the present suggestions hold, Chicago being the natural key to the financial and industrial interests of the middle west.

St. Louis, New Orleans, Minneapolis, and some eastern capital will subscribe to the institution, but Illinois capital will be interested heavily. The capitalization will not be less than $20,000,000.

Announcement of the project has been withheld awaiting favorable action by congress amending the federal reserve act so as to permit member banks of the federal reserve system to subscribe for and hold stock in banks organized for the special purpose of doing a banking business in foreign countries.

The federal reserve board already has recommended that such extensions be encouraged, and the backers of the present movement have been assured that the bill that has been prepared to be introduced in congress will pass easily.

The Standard of Value and Quality

Now is the Time to Buy Your "Six-46"

Let us again urge you to place your order for a Fairfield "Six-46" as soon as you possibly can.

Don't wait too long—don't be too sure that you can buy to just as good advantage thirty or sixty days from now.

For—remember—there were three purchasers for each "Six-46" that we could turn out last year. And, up to the present time, there is every indication that this "sold out" condition will be repeated.

Then, also remember that the cost of manufacturing materials and labor is still soaring.

Already, several manufacturers have found it necessary to increase the list price of their cars, and more announcements of this kind are undoubtedly coming.

By early buying, we have done everything that we possibly could to protect ourselves and you. But in the face of a constantly rising market, we may be forced to increase prices proportionately.

From the present outlook there is no other alternative for we flatly refuse to compromise on the quality of our cars. We shall continue to use only the best materials—no matter how far the commodity prices may advance.

Of one thing you can be certain—the Paige "Six-46" will never cost less than $1295 this year. We absolutely guarantee this, but we can't undertake to guarantee against an advance.

Above all, please understand that this advertisement is written in a sincerely helpful spirit. It is by no means our purpose to "stampede" motor car buyers into early or ill-advised purchases.

We are merely telling you the facts—facts that can be readily substantiated by your banker or any man who is well informed in regard to industrial conditions.

We want you to drive a Paige, of course, but we have never found it necessary to resort to "expedients" in order to sell a single car of our production.

The "Six-46" now costs $1295. At that price, we honestly believe that it represents more actual dollar-for-dollar value than any other motor car on the market.

Wait too long—and you run the risk of paying more.

Place your order now, and you can rest assured that you will never regret the decision.

WHY NOT MAN FROM ARMY AS WAR SECRETARY?

Wilson Would Have Had Old World Precedent in Appointing Soldier to Cabinet.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]

It is to be regretted that the president in selecting a successor for Lindley M. Garrison as secretary of war should have chosen for the post a civilian, such as the Hon. Newton Diehl Baker, instead of a professional soldier of tried experience, taking him either from the active service, such as, for instance, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood and Hugh Scott, or, if that were impracticable, from among the tried and capable veterans of the retired list.

Leaving aside the fact that Mr. Baker has been the leader of the pacifist movement in Cleveland and an active member of many peace societies, and that with his bare 130 pounds of weight and 5 foot 4 of slight stature, he is about the least military figure that it is possible to conceive, the main point is that when discussing his acceptance of the secretaryship of war on Monday last he made for publication the remark to the press, "Of course I know nothing whatever of the duties of the office and shall have all to learn." To intrust the administration of the army and of the defense of the country at a moment so critical in its history to a pacifist of such avowed inexperience seems like tempting fate.

Experience of Other Nations.

War, which is the supreme test of everything connected with the army, and with the fleet, has shown abroad the necessity of having a soldier instead of a civilian at the head of the department of war, and of sailors in control of that of the navy.

When the present great international conflagration suddenly broke out the English people, disgusted with the ignorant meddling of a long series of civilian secretaries of state for war, who had reduced the military forces of the vast British empire to the lowest ebb, depleting the ranks of the army, and the contents of the arsenals, for the sake of short sightel economy, arose in their wrath and insisted upon the appointment of a professional soldier in the person of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener. As everybody is aware, he only consented to accept the herculean task on the understanding that he would be considered as belonging to no political party or faction, and as entering the cabinet for the sole purpose of administering and directing the military affairs of the nation and of organizing, somewhat late in the day, its defenses.

No civilian, without a professional experience of military matters, could have undertaken with any chance of success the task which he has accomplished in evolving order out of the chaos which prevailed in the war department, and in not only filling the empty arsenals and military supply stores, but in creating a huge army of over 3,000,000 men. What rendered the labors of Lord Kitchener all the more difficult was that he had to depend, at any rate during the initial months of his secretaryship, upon the civilian employés of the one department of the British government that has from time immemorial been distinguished for its lack of business methods, for its red tape, and its glaring abuses.

France Deposes Civilian Leader.

France, whose determination to win at all costs, and the courage and unselfish patriotism of whose people has excited the admiration of the entire world, has found it necessary to follow the example of England, and last year dispensed with the services of her civilian minister of war and confided the department to a professional soldier, in the person of the veteran Gen. Gallieni, who had been retired on the score of age shortly before the outbreak of hostilities. Both of the general's civilian predecessors at the war department in Paris were men of great ability, Alexander Millerand in particular being one of the most brilliant members of the French bar. But he suffered from the fact that he was not a professional soldier. Millerand was shrewd enough to realize this.

In France the appointment of a soldier as minister of war was not such a complete innovation as the gazetting of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener to the war department in England. There have been a few—very few—generals who have been entrusted with the administration of the French army since the inauguration of the present republican form of government in Paris, forty-six years ago, and with the exception of the late Marquis de Gallifet they did not prove a success, owing to their having been selected with regard to their political rather than to their military qualifications. Some of them were so utterly insignificant from a military point of view as to excite the ridicule of the army. Others, such as, for instance, the notorious André, aroused contempt. De Gallifet alone, the celebrated cavalry commander, flourished as minister of war, and the army was happy under his too brief rule. But he was so much of a national hero that the senate and the chamber of deputies became alarmed lest his countrymen should force him into the assumption of supreme power. And so, having restored discipline and order, following the disorganization and chaos resulting from the Dreyfus scandal, he retired into private life in order to relieve the anxiety of those who had the maintenance and welfare of the republic at heart.

Advantage of U. S. Laws.

In France the problem has always been complicated by the fact that the president does not enjoy supreme command of the army and of the navy, as in the United States. Supreme power is vested, theoretically, in the hands of what is known as the superior council of war, but in reality in the hands of the chairman of that body, who is, ex-officio, the minister of war. As long as the minister was a member of the senate, or of the chamber of deputies—that is to say, a civilian—parliament always felt that it retained control of the armed forces of the nation. But war and national danger have impressed upon the French people the necessity of having a man in supreme control of the army who is a soldier by profession and an expert in matters military.

In England the inauguration of the practice of having civilian ministers of war was brought about by the continuous and always more or less latent conflict between crown and parliament for the control of the army during the last 100 years.

Always Soldier in Germany.

In Germany, in Austria, in Italy, in Spain, and in Russia the minister of war has always been a military man, professional experience as a soldier being considered as an indispensable qualification for the office in time of peace and, of course, more so in times of war. And yet these old world powers are confronted by a difficulty in connection with the choice of military men for the post, which would not occur in this country. For their ministers of war are required to have gifts of parliamentary oratory in order to represent the war department and the affairs of the army in the national legislature. On the continent of Europe it is thoroughly understood that they occupy seats in parliament, not as political partisans, but as professional military men.

Here in the United States the secretary of war occupies as such no seat in either house of congress. He is not responsible to the federal parliament, and although he is likely to be called upon for information by the army committees of either house, yet he is accountable solely and entirely to the president. The latter could, therefore, choose a soldier, without any regard for his oratorical gifts, and solely by reason of his expert knowledge of military matters, for the post of secretary of war.

WOMEN ASK CIVIL SERVICE FOR MRS. ROWE'S BUREAU.

Woman's City Club Proposes Reorganization of City Welfare Department.

The Woman's City club yesterday asked the city council to reorganize the city welfare department and place all its officers under civil service. Resolutions adopted by the club assert the department "has been at the mercy of the spoils system and has been noneffective in accomplishing its purpose."

The suggested reorganization would mean the elimination of Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, commissioner appointed by Mayor Thompson, unless she passed an examination. While the position of superintendent of social surveys is nominally under civil service, Mrs. Page Waller Eaton was holding the place under temporary appointment.

The civil service commission will give its decision in the Eaton-Rowe "split salary" scandal early this week, according to President Percy B. Coffin.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO.

If intervention in Nicaragua and in Haiti is not contrary to American policy, intervention in Mexico is not.

And the need for it is greater; our interests, immediate and remote, are more weighty; the opportunity to serve both ourselves and the cause of human progress is much greater than in either of the lesser republics in which we have established our control.

It was in the fall of 1909 that two Americans, Grace and Cannon, were executed by Zelaya, president of Nicaragua. They had taken part, it was charged, in a revolution against that tyrant, and, it would seem, might be held to have forfeited their right to our protection. Certainly under the present administration their deaths would have aroused no interest in Washington.

Nevertheless, because of conditions in the pretended republic, our government broke off diplomatic relations. The cruiser Des Moines prevented a battle at Bluefields Dec. 18, and since that day a force of United States marines or soldiers has remained to discourage further ebullitions of revolutionary enthusiasm.

An unspeakable tyranny was thus destroyed and continuous peace insured for the first time in the history of the "independent" state of Nicaragua.

Six years later, that is, on Feb. 18 of this year, the senate ratified a treaty with the government of Nicaragua by which a canal route is guaranteed to the United States and two islands made over to us for a consideration of $3,000,000. Thus Nicaragua is brought effectually, though indirectly, within our surveillance. A protectorate would be of more benefit to the Nicaraguan people, and that is likely to come in due time.

Our dealing with Haiti has been more thorough. It offers a striking contrast with the administration's Mexican policy. Last year a revolution broke out, and in an attempt to protect Americans and other foreigners three marines were killed. A French cruiser was ready to act, but affairs were taken in charge by Rear Admiral Caperton, U. S. N., and active operations to bring the island to order were carried out with vigor. As a result, Haiti escaped anarchy, and subsequently a treaty establishing a protectorate was negotiated with the new government.

This treaty provides for American supervision of the Haitian finances and the collection of customs; American supervision of the payment of the public debt, inquiry into the validity of existing debts, and regulation of the contracting of future obligations; policing of the island by a constabulary under American officers; further intervention if necessary to preserve order or to protect the integrity and independence of Haiti; and development of Haitian resources under American auspices.

This prompt and conclusive treatment of the Haitian problem evidently was induced by the determination of the French to act if we did not and by the knowledge of German ambitions as to this island. The fact that a fiscal control arrangement with the neighboring state of Santo Domingo had helped that country materially doubtless had convinced the best elements in Haiti of the advantages of American assistance and control.

In fact, the United States has proved in Cuba, in the Philippines, and wherever it has acted with decision in Latin America, that our intervention is a blessing to the people of these countries, however it may be resented by would-be dictators and exploiters, native or foreign.

Mexico had three centuries of Spanish colonialism. A hundred years ago, in 1810, the revolution of Hidalgo began the era of independence. Political independence was achieved by 1821. In the next two years government took the form of two regencies, one emperor, and a provisional government. From 1824 to 1837—thirteen years—there were ten presidents and acting presidents and one executive council. From 1837 to 1876—forty years, up to the first presidency of Diaz—there were fifty-eight presidents, acting presidents, provisional presidents, substitute presidents, depositaries of executive power, etc.

The régime of Diaz was finally established in 1884 and lasted till 1911, twenty-seven years. Up to this period independence meant perpetual political presidents who hardly slept over night in the executive palace, unending dissensions, petty wars, and revolutions. During this period no middle class developed, no real sense of what republican government means was discovered; the country, with its wonderful resources, was left in the condition of a primitive agricultural state, and no processes of democratic progress were set in motion. Diaz brought the fundamental basis of progress—peace. A school system was given some support and foreign enterprise was welcomed. Railroads were built by British and American capital, mines were opened, public utilities were created, and the economic organization and development of the country on modern lines began.

On the other hand, the feudal land system not only remained but a great deal of injustice was permitted by the transfer of small holdings by the most ruthless methods to the large landholders. The middle class was small and did not gain in strength. The political-military type of leader, which we thought was passing, survived, and when Madero was dragged down it revived, to repeat the history of the years before Diaz.

The last five years have forced upon every observer the truth that the elements of Mexican life are profoundly unstable after 300 years of Spain and 100 years of political independence expressed in perpetual ferment. This will not be transformed overnight. It may come in another century by way of the slow processes of infiltration and economic change. It will not come through the spontaneous self-development of the Indian. It must come from without, and the only choice is between the slow course of peaceful penetration or some such definite step as American intervention.

That the United States can afford to permit a repetition of the pro-Diaz period or that Europe will permit it is not in common sense to be expected. Intervention means that the United States will very greatly accelerate the progress of the Mexican people. It means, also—and this we have a right to make our chief consideration—greater tranquillity in our own country, justice to our citizens, and a removal of the danger of international war over Mexican dereliction.

AN EXPERIMENT WITH YOUTH.

Five years ago Lieut. Edgar Steever went to Wyoming. He found that the national guard of the state had a strength, according to the records, of 600 men.

At the first drill called half a dozen men appeared. At the second none.

Then he began the splendid work whose results have filled Wyoming with justifiable pride, and given that state the sound foundations of a citizenry in arms, or, what Lieut. Steever is even more interested in, a youth "clean in mind and clean in body," the substance of good citizenship in peace as well as war.

He has done this through developing a system of training in the high schools and his experience goes deep into the American character of our generation and points some significant lessons.

Lieut. Steever at first proposed compulsory training, but he found that impossible of acceptance. Steever faced his conditions and began to develop another plan. The community could not conceive of training for defense as a duty which we have a right to require of a citizen as truly as obedience to the law, the maintenance of government, jury duty or the payment of taxes. America then believed war only a dim memory of the past, an impossibility for these United States. So Steever adopted persuasion. He organised his training as sport. He appealed to the interest of boys in games and competitions, and year by year more boys were drawn in until now there are from 90 to 98 per cent under training in the high schools of Wyoming. Undoubtedly this high rate is made possible by the fact that the state supplies the uniform, which is not military, but this is a minor factor. The system has won.

But most significant is the fact that a compulsory system is now favored. Wyoming has been watching and thinking. The civic duty of this training is appearing.

Lieut. Steever's experience, so creditable to himself, is not so creditable to America of today. We ought not to have to coax the performance of duty. Yet we are always doing it. The fiber of our youth has been weakened by the mistaken and fallacious theory that youth must be flattered into doing right or rewarded for not doing wrong. From the primary school through the university we let youth legislate for itself, conceding everywhere to its ignorance and its impulses.

We have adopted compulsory education. We declare that the state has a right to require that youth shall spend a certain number of years in a schoolroom. We ought also to require that youth shall fit itself for citizenship, the basis of which is respect for the common duties of organised society. To serve, to obey is honorable, and the spirit of self-respecting obedience is the most necessary element in true democracy.

A PEACE CONSTABULARY.

Whenever reflection reduces a pacifist to anything like distrust of his theories—as reflection is likely to do occasionally—he takes refuge in a doctrine of internationalism. In that refuge he may concede that force, whether it is benevolent and called creative energy or malevolent and called destructive violence, governs the world. He may also concede that persons or powers may arise from time to time to try to accomplish their purposes by force, by violence, by imposing their wishes upon people unable to resist them.

When these concessions have been made the pacifist, demanding that nationalism be submerged in internationalism, sets up an international army to keep the peace. It shall pounce instantly upon any disturber, be it person or nation. As a condition necessary to maintaining the ascendency of this world constabulary, all other peoples must be disarmed.

If, for instance, California by restrictive legislation against the Japanese hurts the pride and involves the honor of that not particularly meek people and makes them restless for retaliation, the international constabulary must be strong enough to take not only California but the United States by the scruff of the neck with one hand and Japan by the neck with the other and reduce the two dissimilar and provoked peoples to reason and brotherly love.

If this were an easy task, if it were a possible task, it would be made so by the overpowering force of the international army and navy or by the defenseless condition of all nations or by both. A force fit to undertake the correction of all the possibly pugnacious peoples of the world would be considerable. We have an idea that the American contingent contributed to it would be considerably larger than the force needed by us if the United States will attend strictly to its own business.

Will the reflecting pacifist, taking refuge in internationalism, explain whether the theory that the profession of arms in itself provokes the use of arms would apply to this international armed force? If it would not, why would it not?

The Latins, who themselves policed the world, had a saying for it—"Quis custodiet ipsos custodes?" Who will guard the guardians? What force would restrain ambition and love of violence from using the weapons to impose on helpless people? If no man arms but to attack something, what would the armed international force attack?

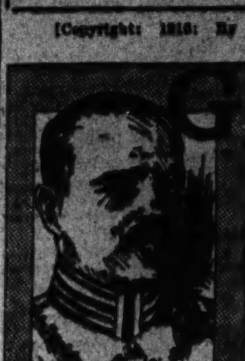
ENGLAND TO GIVE UP FREE TRADE.

[From the New Republic.]

Evidence is accumulating that the close of the war will be marked by a thoroughgoing reorganization of the commercial policy of he chief European countries. British free trade will hardly survive the war. Indicative of present British public opinion are the resolutions recently adopted by the British Association of Chambers of Commerce. One resolution, unanimously adopted by this representative body, adheres to the ideal of national self-sufficiency. "The strength and safety of the British nation in time of national peril lie in the possession of power to produce its requirements from its own soil and its own factories." Resolutions favoring colonial preference and reciprocal trading relations with allies and finally with neutrals were also carried almost unanimously. For tactical reasons he word "protection" was avoided, but the protectionistic implications of these resolutions are obvious. British agriculture and British industry are now in a position to demand more sympathetic attention from the government than at any time since Cobden. American export industries will find it worth while to take into account this nationalistic trend in commercial policy and adjust their calculations accordingly.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]



GRAND DUKE ERNEST LOUIS of Hesse, who enters tomorrow on the twenty-fifth year of his reign without any of the festivities usual on the occasions of such silver jubilees, is, of all the German sovereigns, the one assuredly most hard hit by the present war. For his favorite sister is the empress of Russia. Another sister is also Muscovite, as widow of the Grand Duke Sergius of Russia, while his eldest sister makes her home in England as wife of Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg.

Although Prince Louis was forced to resign his position as first sea lord of the British admiralty, owing to the violent prejudice in the British isles against every English citizen of German birth, yet there are few who are more cordially detested in Germany, and especially at the court of Berlin and in German naval circles, than this prince, whose foresight prevented Germany from catching the English navy napping.

The Grand Duke of Hesse's most intimate friend and crony from his boyhood until the beginning of the present war was Emperor Nicholas of Russia. The relations between them were in the nature of those of Damon and Pythias, and it may be recalled that whenever the present czar sought rest and relaxation abroad he invariably betook himself, with his wife and children, to Darmstadt.

During the last fifteen years every move made by Russia that was of a nature to displease the kaiser was credited by him to Darmstadt, and the result was that when the present war broke out Grand Duke Ernest Louis found himself to such an extent an object of suspicion at Berlin that he was compelled, in order to preserve his throne, to renounce all his foreign relationships and friendships and to take an active part in assailing both Russia and Great Britain.

What must have cost him more than anything else was the feeling that he had to sacrifice all this for the sake of the kaiser, whom he had never made any pretense of admiring.

In a word, his throne is a bed of thorns.

George V. has just bestowed the office of lord lieutenant of Wiltshire upon the Earl of Shaftesbury, who is particularly well qualified to act as the chief representative of his sovereign in that county, sharing with Lord Derby and the Duke of Devonshire the distinction of being among the few intimate personal friends of both the king and his consort.

Lord Shaftesbury has for many years been lord chamberlain to the queen, both prior and subsequent to her husband's accession to the throne, while Lady Shaftesbury, whose close ties with the queen date from their respective early childhood, still continues to form part of her household as lady in waiting. This, too, in spite of her sympathies with the woman suffrage cause, to which the queen has all along been strongly opposed.

Lady Shaftesbury is a sister of the present Duke of Westminster, has the peculiarly charming voice of the Grosvenors, and is a niece, therefore, through marriage, of Queen Mary's eldest brother, the Duke of Teck, who married Lady Margaret Grosvenor.

Neither Lord Shaftesbury nor his wife are strangers to America, which they have frequently visited, on the last occasion to witness America's cup races, when both underwent a serious illness through ptomaine poisoning.

In his bachelor days the earl displayed strong leanings for the stage and achieved some distinction as an amateur actor, being noted for his extensive knowledge of comic ditties, his unlimited amount of assurance, and his fine tenor voice.

It was the latter which led to his receiving in 1909 an offer from a firm of American impresarios for a tour in the United States as a vocalist for $150,000 and all expenses. The earl declined.

He is a great-grandson, through his mother, of Lady Palmerston, and a grandson, on his father's side, of that seventh Lord Shaftesbury popularly known as the "lay bishop" on account of the extraordinary influence which throughout his long career he exercised in ecclesiastical matters. That peer likewise did much to improve the welfare of the donkeys in the employ of the London costermongers by offering prizes for their good treatment.

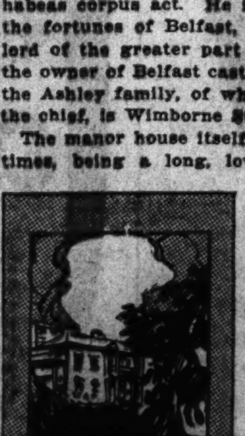
The present Earl of Shaftesbury is the ninth of his line, the first having been the author of the habeas corpus act. He is closely identified with the fortunes of Belfast, being the ground landlord of the greater part of that city, as well as the owner of Belfast castle. The ancient home of the Ashley family, of which Lord Shaftesbury is the chief, is Wimborne St. Giles, near Cranborne.



The manor house itself dates from Elizabethan times, being a long, low, battlemented edifice, built round a quadrangle. But the property has been in the Ashley family for a much longer time—namely: since the wars of the roses. The river Allen waters the fine park, which is celebrated for its magnificent cedars many hundreds of years old.

Lord Shaftesbury, who is tall, burly, and good tempered looking, is indebted for his Belfast property, which is the principal source of his wealth, to his mother, who was the only daughter of the third Marquis of Donegal.

Having quarreled with his brother and successor, the third Marquis of Donegal bequeathed all his Belfast property, along with the new castle, which he had built for himself, to his only daughter, married to Anthony, eighth and late Earl of Shaftesbury.

The present Earl of Shaftesbury has put in several terms as lord mayor of Belfast and served with distinction in the South African war, where he had his hands full looking after his wife's brother, the somewhat rapid young Duke of Westminster.

Lord Shaftesbury had an American aunt, through the marriage of his granduncle, the Hon. Charles Cowper, to Jessie, daughter of Col. Clinton McLean of Newburg-on-the-Hudson. Miss McLean before becoming Mrs. Charles Cowper achieved considerable success on the stage in this country in "Colleen Bawn" and similar plays.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

THE object in writing about locomotor ataxia is threefold. To give the public some general information about the disease. To let the people know that a great many neuralgias, rheumatisms, and other painful disorders are really cases of locomotor ataxia in the early stages. And, finally, to let tabetics know that most cases can become fairly efficient.

No census of people suffering from locomotor ataxia has ever been made. Taking the number of deaths from the disease per year in the registration area and from this calculating the number of deaths per year in the entire country, and then multiplying by twenty on account of the long continuance of the disease, we estimate that there are 75,000 people in the United States afflicted with locomotor ataxia.

Fifty per cent of the cases develop between 40 and 50; 75 per cent between 30 and 50. The men involved are therefore in the prime of life. "It prevails among the higher classes." It is essentially a disabling disease. A disease which is preventable, with which 75,000 of our "people of the higher classes" are affected, which affects people between 30 and 50 years of age, which causes great pain, later disables and finally kills, is a matter of great importance.

The most important cause of locomotor ataxia is syphilis. Edwards says: "Syphilis is the sole cause." Anders says: "Syphilis precedes such a large proportion of all the cases (60 to 90 per cent) that it is reasonable to assume that it is the commonest and perhaps the exclusive cause."

It is not always possible to prove that syphilis is the cause. In some cases syphilis has been inherited and the disease in the parent for one reason or another cannot be proven. In other cases the acute stages of syphilis, having occurred years before, have been overlooked, diagnosed as something else, and forgotten.

Wasserman and other tests for syphilis are not always dependable in locomotor ataxia.

Dr. William Krauss of Memphis, in an excellent study of the reliability of the diagnostic tests for syphilis, quotes a large number of authorities on their experiences with the Wasserman test in locomotor ataxia. Generally speaking, they found the test positive in 60 per cent of cases. He quotes authorities who give certain other tests for syphilis as positive in 95 per cent of cases.

There may be cases of locomotor ataxia due to causes other than syphilis, but the tendency is toward the opinion that syphilis is the sole cause.

The disease process starts around the posterior roots of the spinal nerves. It extends to the posterior part of the spinal cord. The posterior nerve roots carry sensation. The nerve cells in the spinal cord are in the gray matter. This gray matter is arranged like a letter H laid flat. On each side there is an anterior horn governing the muscles and a posterior horn having to do with sensation. Surrounding the gray horns is the white matter of the cord. In this white matter are columns of fibers running up to the brain and bands of fibers running from the outside to the horns and between the different parts of the cord.

Locomotor ataxia affects the posterior columns and the posterior nerve roots. It is characterized by an overgrowth of scar tissue, which squeezes and finally destroys the nerve fibers.

Locomotor ataxia usually begins with violent neuralgic paroxysms or rheumatism-like pains. This pain or paroxysm stage lasts anywhere from six to twenty years. For some years there may be no other symptom which an ordinary person would notice. A close observer might notice that when the person looked at a bright spot his pupils failed to contract, but the probability is that this symptom would be overlooked.

After the lapse of some years the patient notices that his gait is peculiar. He seems to have plenty of power in his leg muscles, but they cannot be controlled as they should be. In walking he carries his foot too far forward and then jerks it down to the ground heel first. He notices that he has no "feeling" in the soles of his feet. When he tries to stand with his eyes closed he reels. This, the second or ataxic stage, lasts from five to thirty years.

Then follows the third or terminal stage. This rarely lasts longer than a year or two.

Such, in brief, is the general course of locomotor ataxia.

Locomotor ataxia is important enough of itself to be worthy of attention, but it gains in importance from the fact that it so frequently is erroneously diagnosed. Anybody can recognise the disease after the ataxic gait develops, but mistakes are frequent in the early stage—before the walk is changed. Dr Nusnm has made a study of 1,000 cases of locomotor ataxia treated in Cook county hospital in the last five years. Ninety-seven of them were operated on for diseases which did not exist. Nineteen were operated on for ulcer of the stomach when no ulcer of the stomach existed. In one out of every twenty cases locomotor ataxia starts with symptoms of stomach trouble. There are severe paroxysms of pain in the pit of the stomach, shooting into the back. There is vomiting of food, bile, and sometimes blood. For years there is no other symptom. In nineteen such cases surgeons opened the abdomen expecting to find ulcer of the stomach. In nineteen the surgeons operated on the gall bladder for gall stones or infection of the gall bladder.

A sample case had the following history: For years a man had suffered from paroxysms of pain in his stomach and vomiting. These attacks were not due to eating. They lasted two or three days and then got well. Eight years ago a surgeon operated for ulcer of the stomach. No ulcer was found. Four years ago another surgeon operated on the gall bladder. No trouble was found and no relief followed. Within a year other symptoms of locomotor ataxia have developed.

In eighteen cases surgeons operated for appendicitis. A sample case is as follows: A woman had intense paroxysms of abdominal pain: vomiting and diarrhoea for twenty years. Twenty years ago she had an ovary removed. Nineteen years ago her appendix was removed. During the next ten years she had three operations for adhesions. Her symptoms kept up. When she came into Cook county hospital they examined some fluid from her spine, and by that and other examinations they proved she had locomotor ataxia. The physicians were not certain about the first operation, that on her ovary, but as to the other operations they feel that they were unnecessary. She never had appendicitis. The pain in the appendix was a locomotor ataxia pain.

Thirteen of the women had their tubes removed on the supposition that their pains were due to infection of the tubes—salpingitis. In nine the surgeons did not know what caused the pain, but they thought something was wrong in the abdomen. They did exploratory operations, only to find that everything in the abdomen was as it should be. Years afterward it was found that the trouble was in the spinal cord.

In seven cases it was thought that pain was due to stone in the kidney. Operation showed that no stone was present. Seven cases were operated on for adhesions. In these the supposed adhesion pains were due to tabes. The remaining five cases were operated on for various disorders. One of the five was supposed to be an obstinate case of sciatica. The nerve was stretched.

Pain is the first symptom, and for a time the only symptom in about 80 per cent of the cases of locomotor ataxia. Sometimes the pain is sharp and shooting. Sometimes it is like a muscular rheumatism and gets worse in damp weather. In one case out of three the pain runs around the body like a girdle or band. Sometimes the sensation is one of pins and needles, or a creeping sensation. This type of pain is especially apt to appear in the legs. In one case out of every five [22 per cent], the early symptoms are referred to some internal organ, such as the stomach, gall bladder, appendix, tubes, kidney, or larynx, according to Dr. Nusnm.

Of these ninety-seven patients only five had been operated on in Cook county hospital. The report does not reflect on the surgeons of Cook county hospital. The other ninety-two had been operated on in all sorts of hospitals in different cities. The report does not reflect on anybody. It is difficult to diagnose locomotor ataxia in the early stage. Anybody is liable to be mistaken. By examination of the spinal fluid chemically, microscopically, and by the Wasserman method, it is possible to discover some cases which a few years ago anybody would have overlooked. Every suspicious case should have a spinal fluid test. But it is found that some object to this, thinking it too much of a procedure. Others do not think it necessary. "Why have a spinal puncture in my case? I have nothing more than a sciatica."

It would be wise to have an examination of the spinal fluid in every case of prolonged sciatica, girdle pains, paroxysms of pain in the stomach, gall bladder, appendix, or kidney, unless other tests show the nature of the disease with reasonable certainty.

The usual statement is that locomotor ataxia is an incurable disease. That is true when the word cure is used in the usual and proper sense. But out of that truth there grows a great deal of unnecessary hardship and suffering. It is customary to read into the word incurable a great deal of meaning that does not belong there. Tabetics, having been told the nature of their disease and that it is incurable, settle down into a relative condition of helplessness. They are without ambition, listless, without initiative, hopeless. They neglect themselves. The family neglects them. Their physicians neglect them. Presently they have gotten into a state of chronic neglect. In view of the fact that the great importance of locomotor ataxia is due to the fact that it disables this neglect is of great importance.

A large part of the condition of the tabetic is due to neglect, and that part can be cured. There are many so-called cures for locomotor ataxia. I have talked with people who have taken these cures. Some of these people have been positive that they were being cured. I never talked with one who had been wholly cured or who claimed that he had been. I have talked with some who denounced the cures which they had taken. If these "cures" were not cures, why the faith of some of these people?

The explanation is partly psychological and partly physical. These subjects were neglected and hopeless. First, the promise of cure stimulated hope. Then came faith. Suggestion was made to add its help. The patients were buoyed up mentally while they were being educated.

The education was of several kinds. Their weak, unused, flabby muscles were exercised. Seldom used nerves were put in service. New muscles and new nerves were trained to do the work formerly done by the diseased nerves and the muscles which the nerve disease threw out of commission. All the while the body was under the drive of the brain, something which had not been much in evidence in recent years. These patients demonstrate that so much of the ordinary picture of locomotor ataxia as is the result of neglect can be cured.

There is even more to the possibility of cure than appears in the above paragraph. The changes in the spinal cord in locomotor ataxia are, in part, progressive. Most of them are the result of old processes. But along with the old processes there are in most cases some which are due to active syphilitic process.

In recent years physicians have followed the plan of injecting proper drugs into the spinal canal. These anti-syphilitic remedies stop the active process, though they have little or no effect on the old ones. It has been found that such injections into the spinal canal are useless in some cases, moderately helpful in others, and in still others very helpful. Thus we see that the dictum—locomotor ataxia is incurable—is being narrowed in its meaning.

SLEEPS ON HIS FACE.

R. T. writes: "1. What, in your opinion, causes a healthy 16 months baby to sleep almost always on his face, with his knees drawn up under him? I have read that this habit is an indication of diseased adenoids. I have not observed any other symptoms.

"2. Would you consider it advisable for a woman who is pregnant (two months) to continue the practice of a cold shower in the morning?"

REPLY.

1. If the child is healthy and is not a mouth breather you need not worry. The sleeping posture is not significant in this case.

2. Yes.

MUST HAVE BROKER'S LICENSE.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise the writer whether it is necessary to have a license or permit to transact real estate business or brokerage, and whether spare time work of that character affects same.

H. M. FINK, 2160 Giddings street.

Any person or corporation who engages in the business or acts in the capacity of a broker within the city of Chicago is required to obtain a license therefor. The fee for a broker's license is $25. The requirements are the same whether the business is engaged in during "spare time" only or whether it is the principal occupation of a person.

NO EXTENSION TO OAKLAWN.

Chicago, March 1.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I should be obliged if you would tell me when they are going to run electric cars to Oaklawn, Ill.

ANNIE BARBER,

Oaklawn is situated south of Argo, west of Seventy-ninth street; and out of the city limits. I was unable to learn of any of the present interurban electric or surface lines connected with Chicago considering or contemplating any extension of their lines in that locality, or of any companies formed to build a line in the near future to reach Oaklawn.

DEPENDS UPON TERMS OF LEASE.

Chicago, March 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. My lease expires April 31. Must I renew it before March 31?

2. Has the landlord any right to [illegible] the apartment to another party before the date the law allows me to renew my lease?

3. If I renew my lease and [illegible] have to leave Chicago, will I be able to break the lease without any special clause to that effect in the contract?

G. L. C.

[1] The time for the renewal of the lease depends entirely upon the terms and [illegible] of the lease itself, there being no [illegible] upon that subject.

[2] There being no law to the contrary, as stated above, the landlord's right to [illegible] ing of the premises to a third party [illegible] upon the terms of the lease itself.

[3] A special clause will be necessary in order to allow you to break your lease, as long as the landlord keeps his part of the agreement.

Chicago, March 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me whether or not it is necessary for a power of attorney given another person to be sworn to before a notary public?

[illegible]

While it is not legally essential that the power of attorney in your case be sworn to before a notary public, yet it is by far the safer practice and is almost universally adhered to among lawyers. It should be borne in mind that, under the present federal internal revenue law, all powers of attorney must bear a 25 cent revenue stamp.

ENLISTMENT OF CORPORATIONS

Chicago, March 9.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—While preparing for defense through the building of ships and through the enlistment of men, let us not overlook the most important thing, viz., the enlistment of corporations.

E. J. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. should be invited to enlist, this enlistment to take the form of an irrevocable agreement with our government to give government orders precedence over all other business in time of war and to execute such orders upon a net profit basis not exceeding 5 per cent.

The United States Steel corporation should be invited to enlist. The Bethlehem steel company should be invited and the list should be extended to include all corporations whose service would be useful to the government in time of war. The needs of the government would include transportation, vehicles, guns, ammunition, gasoline, clothing, food, drugs, an endless variety of equipment, and much machinery, and these things are quite as important as knowing how to shoot or the manual of arms.

We look with complacency upon a profit made by an American powder company in 1915 of 94 per cent, or $55,542,275 upon a capital of $58,854,200. Our sons were not fighting and our flag was not involved. Now, suppose it were our fight and suppose that company made the profit out of Uncle Sam. How would you feel then?

Public welfare should regulate private profit in time of war! Corporations should not be permitted to fatten at the public crib in time of war!

It is certain that the regulation of corporate profits in time of war will react upon the people, reducing discontent, desertion, strikes, and bringing together a united people with one loyal purpose, and with united front, without which we fail.

I urged one of my sons last summer to go to Plattsburg, N. Y., and take military training, but as he is yet in college he was not able to bear the expense of the trip. But now, since there is no hurry, [illegible] may finish their college work, get established in business, and perhaps, [illegible] 1924-'25, take a year's military [illegible] and then still have one year left before war begins.

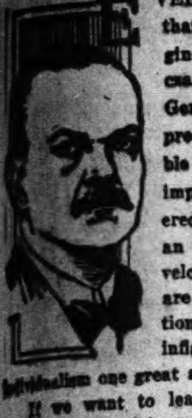
THE GERMAN MACHINE

By Edward Goldbeck



EVERY American is a born mechanician, so it is natural that he should like similes taken from the art of engineering. William's army he calls a "machine," the czar's hosts a "steam roller." The meaning is that the German army works with almost infallible and stunning precision and that the Russian force is, almost, irresistible in its brutal strength. But the German resents the implication that the army of the kaiser should be considered nothing but an immense and elaborate engine, because an engine has no soul and it seems to him just the marvelous quality of the German army that all its members are human beings with thousand-fold individual differentiation, full of enthusiasm, striving after spiritual aims, inflamed by ideals of their own, and in spite of all this individualism one great and indivisible unit.

If we want to learn something about the spirit of an institution, we must study its originators. These originators were the men around Frederick William III., the defeated of Jena, the victors of Waterloo. Up to then the army was indeed nothing but a machine, a perfect, but soulless instrument in the masterly hands of Frederick the Great. But the army which fought against Napoleon was the national army, the volksheer. Militarism at that time was great idealism and all the men who organized and educated the new army were thinkers, dreamers, and poets. A little of this spirit was even to be found in the king himself, the modest and sober Frederick William, and unforgettable is his word after the crushing defeats of the year 1807: "Prussia must make up in mental power for what she has lost in physical strength." The generals who surrounded him felt the same way.

THERE was Scharnhorst, the scion of a family of poor peasants, the man who has done most for the organization of the army. Treitschke gives the following picture of him: "He lacked the correct soldier-like carriage of the Prussian officer. His uniform was neglected, his head bent, the dreaming eyes seemed to look inwardly. His hair fell disorderly on his forehead. One often saw him rapping at the baker's shop and eating his bread with his wife and his children under the trees in the outskirts of the town. All his life he remained plain and natural. The matter was everything to him, the form nothing. But the superiority of his mind, the sincerity of his piety, and the flawlessness of his morals gave the homely man a loftiness which repulsed mean characters and attracted high minded people slowly but irresistibly."

Of a very different stamp was Gneisenau, the chief of the general staff of Blücher's army. An extremely handsome man of overflowing spirits and splendid gifts, he conquered everybody by the power and charm of his chivalrous and brilliant personality. His diction is oratorical and emphatic: "Infinite powers are slumbering undeveloped and unused in the bosom of a nation. In the mind of thousands and thousands of men there is genius hidden which is trying vainly to soar because poverty and lowliness paralyze it. While an empire is waning in weakness and shame, perhaps in a miserable hamlet a Caesar follows the plow and an Epaminondas lives scantily on the labor of his hands." Gneisenau's own childhood had been spent in bitterest penury and probably this was the reason why he believed in the force of the "lower classes." Without this confidence which at that time smacked not a little of revolutionary tendencies, it would not have been possible to break Napoleon's yoke. Gneisenau was the organizer of the general staff, and his activity prepared the wonderful successes of 1866 and 1870.

CLAUSEWITZ, the great theorist, whose book, "About the War," is still today considered a standard work, declared that "every method must be unconditionally rejected by which plans of wars and campaigns could be furnished in a machine-like way." Such attempts at a theory of war, he says, "count with definite factors, while in war everything is indefinite and the calculation must be made with nothing but changeable factors. These theories only look at the material forces while the whole action of war is permeated by spiritual causes and effects." I wonder what Napoleon would have said had he read these sentences. He certainly would never have believed that an army educated on such doctrines could be a dangerous foe. But the ideologues whom he so heartily despised proved stronger than his belief in matter and in facts.

Hermann von Boyen, later minister of war, entered the army at the tender age of 12. In one of his earliest essays he wrote the remarkable words: "That army will have the best discipline which has the most complete and the most humane laws. One battalion of morally good men is better than a regiment of Falstaffian recruits." Boyen was for a time the adjutant of Gen. von Günther, one of the finest characters of the Prussian army. It reminds us of Cromwell when the general says to his adjutant: "Believe me, when you mount your horse you must have only soldierly or pious ideas in your head." Boyen studied Kant intensely and he applied Kant's teachings to his vocation. He writes: "He who has educated himself so that he blushes when he has not done his duty may quietly look forward to the thunder of the guns." It was only natural that a man like this should become a member of the so-called Tugendbund, that moral and scientific "corporation which later on fell a victim" to the reactionary Austrian and Prussian governments.

Goethe mentions in his autobiography a Prussian captain whom he pictures as enthusiastic, tender hearted, and inclined to charity, and he adds that such characters were not rare in the Prussian army of the time. And Lessing has in his "Minna von Barnhelm" portrayed just such a knightly and noble minded officer.

NOW, of course, detractors may say that even if all this be true, the German army may have deteriorated and coarsened in the last century. This can neither be proved nor contradicted. One can only judge by personal study and experience. It may be admitted that a long period of peace has a bad effect on the moral standing of an army, but from 1871 up to the present war the army has worked incessantly with an intensity which would astonish even the Americans who consider themselves the hardest workers on earth. And constant work does not allow people to deteriorate: it keeps them at a certain level of efficiency and even of virtue.

Military service does not break the will power of a man, it strengthens it. The strongest characters I have met in Germany were officers. Men who knew how to command and to obey, but would not have allowed their superiors to overstep by a hair's breadth the line which is drawn by military law and usage. At the time when William II.'s autocratic tendencies were the most impetuous, it was a minister of war, Bronsart von Schellendorf, who opposed him with the fearlessness of an old soldier. Initiative was always appreciated in the Prussian army and how could the Germans have won their stunning successes if the spirit of initiative was not highly developed in the fatherland! At the eve of "preparedness" it may be useful to state the fact that individual development may go hand in hand with the necessary subordination in the pursuing of great common aims, just as idealism and militarism are not opposite poles, but cause and effect. An idealistic nation will sooner or later come to "militarism," and I cannot imagine a more glorious spectable than an army of men who all of them are individuals of more or less human value and who are willing to sacrifice their lives for their country. It is all right to live for one's country, as Henry Ford recommends in his first educational advertisement, but the test of any conviction whatsoever has always been and will always be to be ready to die for it, to put down life for the sake of a great idea, magnæ animæ prodigus.

MARRIAGE AFTER THE WAR.

The following satiric article signed "A Hope-[illegible] Husband" appeared in a recent issue of the London Daily Mail:

ONE of the few redeeming aspects of the great war is that it will entirely reform the status and [illegible] bondage of husbands. Pessimists often ask what scrap of [illegible] good will come out of this upheaval. Sociologists and statisticians picture a tragedy of perhaps two women of marriageable age to one man of marriageable age. Optimists, of whom I am one, look impatiently into the husband's [illegible].

The war has finally unmasked the [illegible] of woman's age-long deceptions [illegible]. Ever since the first cave woman [illegible] the first cave man out into the cold [illegible] the woolly rhinoceros while [illegible] by the fire woman has de[illegible] man that she is his inferior in [illegible] endurance, courage, and [illegible].

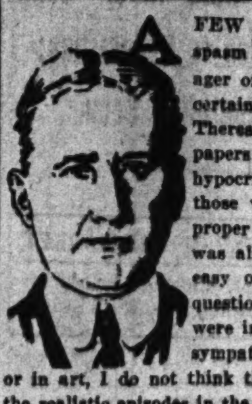
[illegible] came this mighty upheaval. [illegible] forgetting in its stress all the [illegible] is giving away, has buckled-to [illegible] and shown that there is [illegible] work of man that she cannot [illegible]. She is driving motor lorries, she is [illegible] into guards' vans while [illegible] men their faces in amaze[illegible] records in bang and speed, [illegible] the postman's round, the lift-[illegible], the ploughman's [illegible], the lamp lighter's circuit, the [illegible] chimney, the window cleaner's [illegible], the carman's deliveries. [illegible] there is promise of man com[illegible] his real kingdom. The curtains [illegible] side of that repose which [illegible] by right, but which has always been usurped by woman. Woman has always been credited with being the tender sex, the imaginative sex, the romantic sex. Woman has always been shielded from the world because of her sensitive delicacy. But she has disproved all that in these days.

Man is the romantic sex, the sensitive sex, the imaginative sex. There is no woman in whose whole body there is as much romance as in man's little finger. Woman is the directing sex, the hard, practical sex, the sex that cannot be "blarneyed" or deceived. George Meredith (who knew more about woman than any man who ever wrote on that difficult and thorny problem) said that "the friendship of most men is purchaseable with an air of good fellowship and a cigar." But woman is immovable, for hers is the practical sex, the sex with ten acute common senses that we weak men possess not. It is the strangest o' paradoxes that man has always ridiculously attributed all these softnesses and sensibilities to his beloved, that, in truth, his beloved would scorn to possess. What married woman will not contend that her husband is less worldly wise than herself? What husband has not suffered this intolerable wrong of being treated like an infant by his wife and yet compelled to go forth and work for her?

But now comes man's emancipation, his halcyon era. He can settle down now to his romances, his visions, his arts. He can cultivate his tender emotions sheltered from the rough world and unspotted from its traffic. He can dream dreams—a futility that has ever been repugnant to the common sense of woman.

WHAT IS DECENT?

By Robert Herrick



A FEW weeks ago the New York police authorities had a spasm of propriety and, summoning before them the manager of the Russian ballet, compelled him to "tone down" certain passages in a couple of the pieces he was offering. Thereat, of course, he set up an injured howl in the newspapers about the "purity of art," with sneers at American hypocrisy, and of course reaped a rich harvest from all those who were curious to see if by chance anything improper had escaped the hand of the censor. The incident was also improved by superior journalists who found it an easy occasion for fun. I happen to have witnessed the questionable pieces before the police discovered that they were indecent, and must confess that while I have no great sympathy for police standards of purity, either in morals or in art, I do not think that "art" suffered anything from the elimination of the realistic episodes in the "Aprés midi d'un Faun" and the "Scheherazade."

These episodes were not rhythmic, neither beautiful in themselves as action nor poetically suggestive; they were merely literally imitative of animal actions that are not always lovely, and in one instance the action represented was abnormal in its suggestion. It was crude realism injected into an art that demands above all poetic suggestion rather than literalness. The music and the dancing were not one whit abridged by the excisions, which proves that the objectionable symbolism was quite extraneous. Yet after the censoring the pieces were no more moral or decent than before; in my opinion they were more beautiful because less literal in their interpretation of sex attraction. For once the New York police assisted art! (I am told that in Boston, where a stricter tradition of morality still lingers, the police made the management of the Russian ballet "tone down" the color of the licentious Ethiopians from glossy black to a faint cream complexion. Was this due to public morals or race prejudice?)

I remember that something like the same question came up in regard to Miss Mary Garden's interpretation of the final scene in "Salome," although I do not recollect that the matter got as far as police interference with her animated treatment of the head of John the Baptist. But here again, if they forced a curtailment of the scene, they would have done no great injury to art. Indeed, they would have reduced it to its original intention, where the author left it, and as other artists quite as competent as Miss Garden have been content to render it. They would have merely expurgated Miss Garden's suggestive embroidery upon the text.

NEVERTHELESS, why is it that our efforts at moral censorship are so often ridiculous and apparently insincere? Why could the manager of the Russian ballet say with a certain amount of truth that Americans are hypocrites in such matters? Perhaps because we are both inconsistent and uncertain of our grounds when we censure improprieties. For example, one evening I happened in by chance at a popular Broadway house where quite mechanical vaudeville is offered at high prices to large audiences. There was much dancing of all sorts, of course, and a chorus of fifty dubiously attractive females progressively denuded themselves of clothes as the evening dragged wearisomely on. The climax—as it was meant—was a costume of pink underclothes, scant above and below, as underclothes should be. (We had already had them as "the pajama girls," but this exceeded in suggestiveness that quite decent costume.) This pink underwear act, I judged, made the reputation of the show. It went as far as the New York police would permit. It was not lovely; it was not even "luscious." It was mere sex appeal presented crudely—an opportunity to see fifty rather homely women as nearly naked as the New York police would allow them to appear in public. It was, of course, much more debasing to the mind that either the "Aprés midi d'un Faun" or the "Scheherazade" at their fullest, because there was only one interest possible in the antics of the pink underwear chorus, and that neither a beautiful nor an elevating one. Yet this "show" has been running all the winter on Broadway to crowded houses. It makes one wonder where the New York police line begins and ends. Just how much female anatomy can be legally displayed in New York to public view?

BUT what was worse, to my thinking, than either the Russian ballet or the negligé chorus was a certain farce that has been playing to uproarious houses since September and that no doubt half Chicago has already seen. This "show" was our old friend, slap-stick farce, in modern dress. The situations are evolved out of the desire of a young married woman and the husband of a friend to discipline their respective partners by pretending to have been guilty of adultery with each other.

While the errant couple are abroad for an evening the more domestic mates proceed to get beastly drunk—the entire second act is a picture of this premeditated hilarity. Being innocent novices to "wine,' woman, and song," they are supposed to be funny in their imitation of license. Fuddled, they finally partly undress and make their bed side by side, one on a lounge, the other on the floor, where they are, of course, discovered later by their horrified mates. The audience howled with delight when the flat door opened and revealed to the sober two the supposed predicament of the others. The fun consists, I suppose, in the conviction the sober man and woman have that their respective wife and husband have been "too intimate" and incidentally got drunk. It was repulsive.

I thought the thin material had become exhausted with this drunken scene, but the authors got a third act out of the same motive by picturing the morning after. In this scene occurs the old fashioned alcove business, using the bathroom and underneath the bed for the alcove where the wrong woman is to be discovered. The supposably guilty woman is finally revealed cowering under the supposably guilty man's bed when the latter's irate wife orders the moving man to remove the bed from her desecrated bridal chamber. Suddenly all this preposterous vulgarity was happily settled—as the clock approaches 11 p. m. and the audience, chuckling and snorting with delight, drifted out into the frosty street. They had evidently had their bellyful of enjoyment and went home to tell all their neighbors not to miss that play.

This farce has been a "big money maker"; it has been almost impossible to get seats from the speculators except long in advance. And I can testify that the management has amply satisfied the public, for I do not remember when I have heard more genuinely ecstatic roars of laughter than those that met the ancient jokes in "Fair and Warmer" that greeted the supposed delinquencies of the two couples.

HERE, it seems to me, was a case for police censorship, if it is ever advisable to set up police standards of decency, and yet there has never been a suggestion that the farce was not both perfectly decent and entirely proper for public consumption. This fact has given me food for thought. What is decent?

I wonder whether the audience would have chuckled with the same liquorish satisfaction if the tipsy man and woman had actually gotten in the same bed before their eyes and proceeded to adultery? I suppose not. The men and women about me laughed freely because they knew all the time there was "nothing wrong"—just the appearance of wrong between the two married people. While they had no appetite for real vice, they had a fondness for it in implication. It is the same instinct which makes the merely dull dirty story so popular with both sexes.

These same men and women probably would not sit through a serious presentation of sex intrigue with serious motives and intentions. There would be talk about "certain things are not fitted for public representation." Yes, I believe that the manager of the Russian ballet was right in his peevish remarks about American hypocrisy! The police are no more queer in their standards of what is decent than the public itself.

THE best way, I believe, would be to give up trying to censor the stage at all, certainly from the moral point of view, about which no considerable number of people ever agree. Possibly something might be done from the point of view of taste, by which standard not only would the objectionable passages in the Russian ballets have been eliminated but also the pink negligé ladies and "Fair and Warmer," as well as a good half of the plays offered along Broadway. But as the great American public would never "stand for" a censorship based on taste, which suppresses all their vulgar farces and dirty vaudevilles, why, we had better frankly abandon the whole censor business.

PREPAREDNESS

By Charles N. Wheeler

PORTUGAL has plunged into the war. Greece is in against her will. Roumania is impatient. Spain is restless. Holland and Scandinavia are prepared. Everywhere on God's footstool, except in this blessed country of ours, and a few South American republics, the sword already is dripping blood, or is being taken from its sheath.

It is no rejoinder worth while that for the past five decades we have been engaged in the pursuits of happiness and peace, in expanding commerce and industry, in developing education, in building playgrounds, and renovating tenement buildings; in making men rather than soldiers, and, therefore, should have nothing to do with military and naval problems.

It transpires that during these fifty years of character building for humanity's sake in this country the other nations have expended their best energies in perfecting the implements of human slaughter. It is no longer a question of whether we want war; it is a question of whether they want to make war on us. And if they do all our platitudes, all our smug aphorisms, all our postulates as to Christian philosophy, and turning the other cheek avail not so much as the chirp of a sparrow in a tornado.

The truth is we are opposing a whole angry world that may suddenly turn at any moment and vomit its hell fire on us.

It is not desiring war; it is defending our firesides against the enemies who covet what we have, and who are not restrained by the cry of humanity or religion.

It is defending our homes against the stupidity of men we have elected to govern us.

We are not preparing for the mere sake of using the implements after we have assembled them; but to insure us the more against the encroachments of the avaricious and the insane of whatever nation.

THE time for soft speaking is past—for soft speaking appeals alone to reason, and reason is gone from Europe. The time has come for shouldering the big stick—for going to prayer meeting with a gun over our shoulder, even as did the forefathers, not to invite trouble, but to defend women, and children, and firesides, and institutions, and customs, and laws from the savage.

What would you have said of John Alden or Capt. John Smith if, upon meeting up with a red man intent on scalping them, they had proffered him the Sermon on the Mount instead of sending a bullet to his heart?

What do thinking men now say of China—the home nest of pacifism?

What may history not say of us, the best, the richest, the noblest of all, the place of the last stand of the races who are trying out the grand experiment of a representative form of government—what will history say if we, supinely, and stupidly, and cowardly thrust our heads into the sand, and cast out into the sea a homily on international law instead of an impregnable line of submarines, intent on slaughter if necessary to preserve this nation?

Are we men or are we the consorts of squaws?

We, finally, touch the fundamental trouble—the hyphen! We have not a united people at home in the districts, and, therefore, we have not a united mouthpiece at Washington. Selfishness, prejudice, a desire to be reëlected—these are some of the contributing causes of our domestic tomfoolery.

Men seldom rise above the plane of prejudice and selfishness, even in a nation's crisis. Western congressmen have not the moral courage to return to their constituents and tell them they are wrong—tell them there is grave danger, tell them their country might become the fief of a "divine right" master unless we immediately provide a strong defense, the strongest we are capable of, against the angry and the covetous.

WE come to the Great Spirit—Lincoln—in this time of perplexity. With prophetic vision, looking into the future farther than ordinary human eyes could see, he announced this postulate:

This nation cannot endure half slave and half free.

Let me paraphrase it, and apply it to this troubled hour: This nation cannot endure and fulfill its high purpose among the races of mankind with a divided allegiance.

I have seen many of the beauty spots of this world. I have stood on the tops of our mountains. I have wandered through the green valleys. I have gazed on the palaces of art of the two hemispheres, on the things of this world, both of God's and man's making, that please the eye, thrill the heart, and lift up the soul.

But there is one spot more beautiful, more sweet, more lovely, more thrilling than all else beside. It is the little clay knoll down in northern Ohio where my mother opened my eyes on this world. The place of my birth! The place of my mother! The place of the boy days! In times of joy or trouble, in times of success or failures, in times of bewilderment or loftiest aspirations, in storm or sun—this is the place that approaches nearest the divine in my breast.

The man of German extraction, of English, Russian, French, Belgian, Turkish, Servian, or any foreign strain—such a man who does not feel that same love of the birthplace would not make a good citizen of any country.

Every such man would not be a true man who didn't feel that thrill today in Chicago, whether his naturalization papers are a day or a decade old.

But today in Chicago, today in these United States, there is but one side of the line—the side of this flag. Our sympathies may go back to the homeplace in these nations caught up in the conflagration of primitive passions. It may go out even to those of our kin who have poured out their life blood as a sacrifice for their nation's glory. But neither kin nor national sympathy should intervene now when the question concerns the permanence of the United States of America.

WE still may sympathize with this side or that over yonder. We still may meet and condemn this nation or that nation. We still may denounce in our societies and our newspapers this government or that government. But this blessed country of ours should have none other than the solid loyalty of every man, woman, and child. When it comes to a question of preparing to defend this nation, what shall we say if sympathy for Europe should overcome loyalty to this flag?

The hearts of the masses of every nationality in this nation are right; a few windy spokesmen misrepresent and dishonor them.

Our melting pot, as some would have you believe, has become a sophism, and our assimilation a jest. It is not so. They utter falsehood and blasphemy who suggest it, and defamation who reiterate it.

Our troubles we have made for ourselves.

For twenty years I have been writing politics in Illinois. For twenty years I have witnessed the naming of "slates." I have seen a German, a Pole, a Swede, an Irishman, an Italian, a Bohemian put on the slate, not in the first instance because he was a good citizen or would make a good public servant, but because he was of a certain nationality. Happily most of them made good public servants. But after they were put on the slate the political chieftains went back to their respective nationalities, and urged the people of these nationalities to vote for them, primarily because they were German, or Polish, or Swedish, or Irish, or Italian, etc.

For twenty years I have observed men who were leaders of men, and our political rulers attempting, not to assimilate the newcomer, and to eradicate ethnological distinctions, but by every adroit device endeavoring to perpetuate these nationalities for the primary purpose of perfecting strong political organizations.

WHAT stares us in the face today? Not merely political organizations built on European habits, but the hyphen in our literature, in our drama, in the law enforcing branch of our government.

Let us reverse it.

How far, think you, would an American-German parade to protest against some edict of the reichstag get in Berlin?

How far, think you, would an American-British parade to protest against the orders in council against American shipping get in Piccadilly?

You can't film the "Merchant of Venice" in Chicago today. If ever there was a virile, red blooded, splendid type of the Jew it is Shylock. He was not a hypocrite. He had the courage to tell us Christians and Pharisees where we got off at. He admitted that we would spurn him over our doorstep, and would void our rheum on his gaberdine, but when we were broke we didn't hesitate to go to him, get down on our knees, even in a bondsman key, and plead for money. That same masterpiece that tells us the quality of mercy is not strained, that all that glitters is not gold, that the world still is deceived with mockery—that joy of the heart and nourishment of the soul cannot be filmed in Chicago because the Jewish-American organization is potent enough to stop it at the city hall. Somehow they hold Shylock to be a reflection on the race. Splendid Shylock, thus to be so defamed!

You can't film the "Ordeal" in Chicago because the villain happens to be a Prussian, because the dramatic vision is woven about incidents of the Franco-Prussian war. The German-American strength, politically, is strong enough to stop it at the city hall.

You can't film the "Birth of a Nation" in Chicago without the protection of the courts because the villain happens to be a Negro, and because the Afro-American is strong enough, politically, to stop it at the city hall.

THE trouble is that these several nationalities hold these dramatic and artistic creations to be indictments of their respective nationalities, and are, thereby, affronted. When did genius and art ever before encounter such ingratitude?

But I'll tell you what you can do. You can take all the geniuses of the world, and from their composite brains you can create the masterpiece of dramatic art. You can put into that masterpiece a villain of the darkest and nastiest type, infinitely more abominable and revolting than anything ever before conceived by the human brain, and you can incorporate such a villain into your plays, into your literature, into your films, and you will not provoke a single protest from the 100,000,000 of our people, provided you label him or her an—AMERICAN!

I, for one, protest against this discrimination. In the name of art, in the name of literature, in the name of the drama, in the name of genius wherever it be discovered or whatever form, I protest against the carrying of the hyphen beyond the fireside of the owners.

I do not say this in a mean spirit.

But I have a right to demand at least equal protection for the American. My great-great-great-grandfather enlisted at Lexington. My great-grandfather served throughout the entire war of 1812. Two of my uncles served with the Union armies in the civil war.

And I say to you it is now time, when this nation is threatened, from whatever cause, to remove the cause if possible; if not, to prepare with all the resources at our disposal, and for all citizens of this nation to help to that end—for all citizens, native or assimilated, to demand of our American congress that it live up to the traditions of the congresses of America whenever this nation's existence was placed in jeopardy heretofore.

"America Ueber Alles" is good enough for me. "My country, 'tis of thee!" "O, say, can you see by the dawn's early light?" These are good enough for the whole human race. They ought to be good enough for a congress of the United States in the twentieth century.

They ought to thrill the heart of every red blooded man in a country where the humblest child may become its president; in a country where there opens wide an asylum for the peoples of the whole world, without regard to creed, race, color or previous condition of servitude—in a country in which all are equal under the law, a country in which liberty goes further than in any other civilized nation, a country in which the liberty to think as one pleases, to speak as one pleases, and to hold peaceful assembly is not abridged, and in a country where remonstrance is not opposed short of the line of incendiarism.

WHAT a splendid, what a glorious, what an imperial country this—our own dear United States! Let's stop abusing it. Let's stop befouling our own nest. Let's stop insulting it, and belittling it, and treating it contemptuously. Let's be big men and noble women. Let's get ready to defend it against the world.

Let's highly resolve to cease referring to this good citizen as a German, or a Swede, or a Pole, or some other nation's offspring. Let's refer to him as a stable, unswerving, noble hearted citizen of the United States. Let's appeal to him from now on as Citizen Reinberg, Citizen Smulski, and Citizen Olson, and when we go back to their constituents with these men as candidates in the future let's ask our political leaders to present them as good citizens of the republic, and honest servants of the people and the community, and not as some appeal to an ethnological prejudice.

Let's all get together, and stick together, and pull together for a country that's worth every man's life blood if necessary in its saving. Let's not be swayed from this high purpose by the dictum of a United States senator from Illinois, betimes referred to flippantly as that "apotheosis of sartorial pulchritude," that only a German can be postmaster of Chicago. But let's unite in saying that many of our best citizens, our noblest and biggest, are of German descent, and if the president does pick this man or that, he has selected A MAN—not an ethnological exclamation point.

Let's try out the issue of Americanism without any frills, and try it on the present congress of the United States. I for one would like to see it tried out in Illinois. I'd like to see some candidate with the courage to stand before the electorate as did Lincoln, and Trumbull, and Davis, and Logan, and Grant—stand out boldly on the simple but mighty issue: "My country." Not some one's else country—but MY COUNTRY: THE LAND OF THE FREE, AND THE HOME OF THE BRAVE!

If he did you would see, not mere Yankees, but great souls of every nationality, who have adopted this as their beloved country, rallying splendidly and without blatant pretenses to that issue and under that banner.

We would learn again that Lexington, Ticonderoga, Valley Forge, and Yorktown were not in vain; that John Paul Jones and Farragut were not accidents; that the brave men whose life blood crimsoned the cotton bales at New Orleans, and again watered the hill and the valley at Chickamauga, Gettysburg, and the Wilderness did not die in vain, as Lincoln said.

So we would be lifted up with a rebirth of freedom, the inspiration of a history cluttered with noble men's deeds for humanity's sake.

So we would, under God, again clasp the great hand of Lincoln, and highly resolve that this government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

MY EPITAPH

By John Masefield

There has been unearthed in Philadelphia a hitherto unpublished poem by John Masefield, one of the first poems that Masefield wrote. After leaving the employ of Luke O'Connor, where he was porter and emergency bartender in New York, he was a carpet weaver in 1897 in Yonkers. Before leaving Yonkers to ship aboard a sailing vessel he had his photograph taken and presented one of them to a friend in the carpet mill with the following mock epitaph written on the back:

Here lies poor Jack—grave, headstone, all in one,
Entombed within the vault of black and white.
His ghost shows here—a most unholy sight—
And here by me his epitaph's begun.
I knew Jack well—he took the penny bun
For doing most things ill and nothing right.
But now I mourn for Jack through half the night,
And wish indeed this epitaph were done.
And here it ends—and here poor "Masey" lies,
Killed by excess of paper, ink, and pen.
His age, I think, just reached to nine and ten;
His clothes, two suits, four shoes, and seven ties;
And here he's shown, that strange and wondering men
May say "that's Jack before he joined the skies."

The demand for wheat was slow throughout the session yesterday and prices at the close showed declines of 1⅛@2⅝c for the day. The May declined faster than the July. Cables were unchanged and this created an easy tone, as traders believe the foreign buyers are in a position to dictate prices in view of the enormous supplies available in all countries. Reports were given out again of big supplies and the estimates made by Broomhall a few weeks ago that surplus stocks in export countries were sufficient to supply Europe for a year to come have found corroboration in the recent estimates of supplies in this country and Canada.

Less than usual will depend on the outcome of the crops this year and there will be plenty of wheat to market even if the after harvest movement is small. The big stocks, coupled with the lack of tonnage, cause free selling.

Argentine Weather Fine.

Weather conditions in Argentina and Australia are fine and stocks are increasing, the disappointing lack of tonnage being the only thing in the way of a big movement. Liverpool reported buyers reserved, with no anxiety in regard to supplies. France has been obliged to buy American wheat to take the place of Argentine and Australian wheat purchases. Generally foreign crop conditions are favorable. Political developments in the near east show further gains by the Russian armies.

The weather conditions in this country and Canada were favorable and reports from all sections indicate continued heavy receipts provided the supply of cars is available. Duluth reports were bullish, saying only 3,000,000 bu were sold, compared to 10,000,000 bu sold a year ago for opening of navigation shipment.

Cash Demand Is Moderate.

The cash demand was moderate, and it was feared there would be further embargoes. Railroad conditions generally show no improvement, and there is considerable anxiety in regard to the strike developments. Well posted railroad men believe the situation is critical. Receipts were 186 cars, with primary receipts of 1,021,000 bu, against 569,000 bu a year ago. For the week primary receipts were 7,201,000 bu, or more than twice those of a year ago, when they were 3,079,000 bu. This immense movement is having considerable effect on prices.

Clearances were 832,000 bu. Northwest receipts were 361 cars; last year 303 cars. Winnipeg had 419 cars; last year 329 cars. The weather forecast was for generally fair and mild weather. Commission houses, led by Jackson Bros., Kidston, Wagner, and Bartlett-Frazier, were good sellers of wheat.

Corn Has Brisk Rally.

Corn showed a decidedly strong tone early, but later the weakness in wheat caused considerable local pressure, and prices lost practically all of the advance. Commission houses and cash interests were good buyers. Profit taking was in evidence on the advance, although traders showed considerable inclination to disregard the weakness in wheat. Cables were unchanged, but there was a fair demand reported for spot corn abroad.

Weather conditions generally were favorable, and country offerings were moderate. Receipts were 174 cars, and primary receipts for the week were 6,350,000 bu, against 2,753,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were quite liberal at 426,000 bu. Local cash prices were ¼@½c higher. Shipping sales were 55,000 bu. Cutten was credited with buying corn.

July Oats in Good Demand.

Oats were in fair demand early, and prices advanced. Later May sold off sharply, while the July was relatively firm. Prices finished ⅜c off to ⅛c up. Cash prices were ¼@½c up, and the shipping sales were 90,000 bu. Receipts were 86 cars and primary receipts were 579,000 bu, against 658,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts for the week were 3,760,000 bu, against 3,812,000 bu a year ago.

Easier Tone in Products.

Hog products were easier, and there was a weaker tone at the yards, hogs closing 10@15c lower. Profit taking and the late weakness in grains caused a dip in prices. Receipts were 14,000, with 52,000 for Monday and 175,000 for the week. Liverpool prices were strong. Backs were 1s up; cumberlands 1s up; hams 1s up, and lard 6d up. Western hog receipts for the week were 536,700, compared to 540,000 a year ago.

Firm Market for Rye.

Rye was firm, with sales of No. 2 and No. 3 at 92c. Receipts were 6 cars.

Barley was strong, malting selling at 73@78c, and feed, 65c. Receipts, 38 cars.

Timothyseed was steady. March was quoted $8.50 and cash lots, $4.00@7.50 nominally. Cloverseed ruled easy, with cash lots, $10.00@13.75 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 1c lower, with cash on track, May and July, $2.30¼. Receipts, 3 cars. Minneapolis was 1c lower, with cash on track, $2.30½@2.33¼. Receipts were 18 cars. Winnipeg closed 1¼@1½c lower. May, $2.09⅝ and July, $2.11¼. Receipts, 11 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Snow was out yesterday with a bearish array of figures covering the world's supply situation. His argument is in line with that of Broomhall given prominence several weeks ago, in which the statement was made that exporting countries had wheat enough to supply all importing needs for a year. According to Snow, there is 628,000,000 bu wheat available, while the yearly requirements of importing countries outside of Germany and Austria are about 560,000,000 bu. According to latest figures obtainable from all exporting countries, the carry over in all countries into the new crop will be enormous, making the buyers less dependent on the growing crops than for years. From all appearances the oversupply of wheat is likely to be a big price influence. A big export demand is essential to the maintenance of prices, while with present conditions foreign buyers are under no necessity of buying except as prices recede.

The railroad strike situation is likely to become acute this week. It is understood that the members of the unions have voted to stand by their demands for increased pay and shorter hours. The possibility of a strike with the present abnormally congested railroad conditions would have a tremendous influence on prices. The one salvation of wheat bulls as well as holders of other grains is an uninterrupted movement for export. Even at present this movement is not coming up to the exports of last year, while supplies are much larger. The market closed heavy last night. Recent advances appear to have been mainly at the expense of shorts, with big interests taking advantage of all the bulges to sell wheat. The effect of this selling became apparent yesterday, as prices dragged lower with but little support except on the extreme declines.

The cash demand for wheat was about the same as recently, but considerable pressure was reported to sell from the west. Big country stocks in all positions is checking the buying demand, while the railroad conditions do not improve as much as expected. Minneapolis messages yesterday said some grain billed for the east had been accepted by the railroads, but there were rumors that some roads would put further embargoes on domestic as well as export grain. Northwest reports as a rule were bearish, the movement being limited by the amount of rolling stock available. Local sales were 15,000 bu.

"The general world's position in edible fats and oils has created a broader interest in lard and eastern holders are reported to have added to their lines," said W. L. Gregson. "We think these hog levels are dangerous and expect increased receipts of finished hogs later on and readjustments in prices which will materially affect pork and ribs and lard somewhat; but we think lard will eventually give a better account of itself than any other hog product on this crop."

Corn advanced, yesterday, while wheat declined, and bulls in corn were of the opinion that the two grains would definitely part company with wheat from this time, as few of them expected much help from wheat. They are of the opinion that bullish conditions will make for higher prices in corn regardless of what happens in wheat.

Le Count wired Barrell from Enid, Okla., saying wheat conditions generally were fine, with rains the only thing necessary to bring the crop along in splendid shape. So far Le Count has not made any mention in his reports of green bugs, about which so much was heard a few months ago.

Cash corn was in fair demand, with prices ¼@⅜c higher and oats were about ½c up in the sample market. Shipping sales were 55,000 bu corn and 90,000 bu oats. The recent advance in futures has encouraged farmers in a holding attitude.

A Washington message said the various government departments were about to launch a vigorous campaign for the conservation of food supplies in this country. It is said farmers will be urged to limit the raising of cotton and the increasing of the area in food crops.

Australian shipments of wheat continue disappointing. Weather conditions have been favorable. Holders generally were reported firm in their views both in Argentina and in Australia, although stocks in both countries are increasing.

There are no signs of a let up in the receipts of wheat at winter wheat points. St. Louis, Omaha, and Kansas City all had big receipts yesterday, compared to extremely light arrivals a year ago.

Receipts inspected yesterday: Wheat, 136 cars; corn, 174 cars; oats, 86 cars; rye, 6 cars; barley, 38 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 52,000 head, and for all next week 175,000 head.

French wheat reserves are light and there has been buying of American wheat recently to take the place of Argentine and Australian purchases, which have been slow in moving.

Duluth wired: "Country elevators are in a merry scramble for cars as they are anxious to get all they can in here before we are blockaded. Farmers have been selling futures."

Streator, Ill., wired Bennett that corn stocks in that section were light. Oats were said to be plentiful at all stations, with owners asking higher prices.

The consensus of opinion at a recent meeting of 300 grain dealers at Salina, Kas., was that wheat was coming through the winter in good shape.

Duluth dealers claim that only 3,000,000 bu wheat has been sold of the stocks there, compared to 10,000,000 bu that was sold to go out a year ago.

According to some northwest reports it develops that fall plowing in the northwest states had been more extensive than supposed.

According to reports received by Sincere & Co., drought conditions in western Texas are becoming serious.

An Oakland, Ill., message to Ware-Leland said that wheat outlook was the poorest in many years.

Minneapolis stocks increased 30,000 bu for one day and Duluth increased 737,000 bu for the week.

Charles Grimm posted a membership on the board of trade, for transfer.

MARKET EYES WAR CLOUDS.

New York, March 11.—Mexican affairs and reports of further submarine activities in the European war soon clouded today's short session, the trading element evidently viewing these developments with increased misgivings, while investors held altogether aloof. Prices were mainly higher at the opening, but, as usual, gains were almost wholly restricted to specialties, and denoted manipulation rather than actual demand.

Crucible Steel led the list on its brief advance, but fell back later, when the market receded under selling of Reading, New York Central, and Southern Pacific. Metal shares were temporarily lifted to higher levels, with especial activity in American Zinc and Butte and Superior, but these issues also lost ground.

Last Half Apathetic.

The last half of the session was extremely apathetic, with material recoveries from minimum prices of the first hour, chiefly as a result of short covering. United States Industrial Alcohol was prominent among the high priced specialties, gaining 4½ points, but losing more than half of this later.

The partial betterment toward the close was ascribed to an authoritative denial by an international banking house of recent rumors that another large international credit was contemplated.

Steadiness was shown by Americans in the London market, but reports were current of further offerings of these issues for German and Dutch accounts. There was nothing in the rates for exchange, however, to bear out such reports.

Week-End News Hopeful.

Week-end news of a general character included the reviews of the mercantile agencies, which were of the same hopeful tenor as those of recent weeks, showing sustained activity in numerous lines of industry and unabated demand.

Local bank loans showed an actual decrease of $18,464,000, with an increase of about $31,000,000 in demand and time deposits and a slight decrease of reserves. Bonds were steady on light offerings. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Security Holders and Tax Laws.

The most astounding result of the disinclination of security holders to organize and demand fair treatment is to be found in the present tax laws of Illinois and many other states. The laws are freely admitted by every one to be grossly unfair to the owners of bonds and mortgages and of the stocks of corporations domiciled in other states and to give no corresponding advantage to any one, yet they are allowed to stand. Security holders, apparently, fear any change would be for the worse, so they remain silent and make the best they can of a bad situation.

The county borrows money at 4 per cent, well knowing that if it could enforce the law it would have to pay at least 5½ per cent. Then after taking advantage of the rate which known conditions make possible, it uses every opportunity to confiscate nearly half the interest. Opportunities, of course, are comparatively rare, the most common one being when bonds pass under the searchlight of the Probate court.

The ultimate financial results to both the county and the average bondholder are probably just about the same now that they would be under the most perfect law that could be devised, but with the present plan some individuals pay more than their share and others less. The belief that the average person pays his just proportion is small consolation to the widow whose income is cut in two by taxation, nor does it salve the conscience of the man whose holdings go scot free.

If security holders had organized long ago, as real estate owners have done, to get just treatment, they would not now be forced either to evade the law or submit to confiscation.

Brief Answers.

E. J.—One reason that the first and refunding bonds of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois do not advance in price is because there are $3,500,000 of 6 per cent notes outstanding, which are convertible into bonds at 95. These notes mature July 1 next.

The Opportune Time To Buy Copper Stocks

¶ Never in the history of the copper industry has the situation been so full of extraordinary money-making possibilities.

¶ Copper companies are in the midst of an unprecedented era of prosperity, which will prevail long after the war is over, because the metal will then be in great demand for reconstruction purposes.

¶ Analysis of copper stocks shows they are selling on the basis of a 15c to 18c cost for the metal against present price around 28c. A readjustment must come, and the public is beginning to realize what it will mean in the way of investment and market profits.

NEW YORK BANK REPORT SHOWS LARGER DEPOSITS

Deposit and Cash Figures Indicate Sound Basis for a Firmer Money Market.

The New York bank statement showed a relatively large increase in deposits, [illegible] while the net surplus decreased [illegible].

The course of deposits and cash is beginning to indicate some occasion for at least steadiness if not firmness in the money market, according to current developments.

Of the commercial paper market in the middle west it is noted that while the minimum rate to good borrowers remains at 4 per cent, the small borrowers are no longer able to secure that quotation. For months they were granted as good a rate as the better known firms. To the extent of the change noted money is firmer. The weekly bank figures:

Local Curb Fairly Active.

The local unlisted securities market remains fairly active. A number of these issues, such as Kellogg Switchboard and Supply, Inland Steel, Northwestern Yeast, and Butler Brothers, which were formerly quite popular from a trading standpoint, have gradually drifted into such strong investment hands that transactions are now quite limited.

The rights on Linde Air Products has been in good demand around 17, while the stock remains quiet at 180 to 190. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock sold at 99 and closed at 98½ bid, offered at 99½. Chalmers Motor common advanced to sales at 156 and closed in excellent demand at 150, with stock offered at 160. Bucyrus common was wanted at 15, while the preferred remains unchanged at 60 bid. Consumers Company common changed hands at 26 and the preferred at 75.

Continental Motor Active.

Continental Motor common was very active, advancing from 28 to sales as high as 33¾. At the close stock was offered at 34, with buyers at 33. Emerson-Brantingham preferred, after reacting from around 60 to sales as low as 45, is again in very good demand, with buyers at 49, and light offerings at 51. Fisk Tire and Rubber common improved about 2 points to [illegible]. Hart, Schaffner & Marx common changed hands around 63.

A steady demand for Michigan Sugar common advanced the bid price from 100 to 107. Moline Plow preferred remains firm at 97 bid, offered at 98. After the publication of the annual statement of Sulzberger & Sons the preferred stock became quite active, advancing from 88½ to 91½ and closed in demand at 91, with small lot offerings at 92.

National Grocer common changed hands at [illegible]. The preferred is in excellent demand at 98, but few transactions are being made. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company was wanted at 360. Inland Steel changed hands in small lots around [illegible]. Butler Bros. advanced about 3 points to sales at 308, and closed in very good demand at that price.

Public Utilities

Cities Service common has been in good demand, advancing from 117 to sales at 13[illegible]. Ohio Cities Gas common advanced from 150 to sales at 166½, closing 165 bid, [illegible] asked. Cities Service preferred changed hands at 75@78; American Public Utilities common, 45¼@46½; American Public Utilities preferred, 75@76; Illinois Northern Utilities preferred, 86; Middle West Utilities common, 47@48½; Middle West Utilities preferred, 79½; Standard Gas and Electric common, 8¼; Standard Gas and Electric preferred, 31; United Light and Railways common, 51¾@52¾; United Light and Railways preferred, 76.

Bank Shares Quiet.

The bank stock market is without material change. A fair general demand is in evidence, but offerings are comparatively light, and consequently little trading is taking place. Recent reported sales: Continental and Commercial National, [illegible]; National City, 156@158; Merchants Loan and Trust, 440; Capital State, 108½; Central Trust company, 205.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Wall street is predicting an advance in Steel common. It is asserted that interests identified in the movement of the stock are interests which have at times been prominent in previous upward swings in the shares. The basis for bullish sentiment is the present position of the steel industry and the belief that the corporation will pay extra dividends in addition to the regular rate. The talk now is that Steel profits will be $240,000,000 this year, compared with the previous high record of $161,000,000, reached in 1907. However the demand may move, it is argued that the concern, having 8,568,000 tons of unfilled business on its books, is assured of activity for the remainder of the year, and price recessions, it is believed, will be unimportant.

Stockholders of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance company yesterday authorized an increase in the capital stock from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. There will be reserved from the new issue an amount necessary to satisfy the conversion privilege of the bonds, leaving approximately $25,000,000 par value of unissued stock to meet possible future requirements.

It may be significant that Cincinnati machine tool manufacturers have received several cancellations of orders from Great Britain and other of the allies. The cancellations are due, it is said, to inability to make deliveries because of freight congestion at seaboard points. Orders for some 200 lathes have been canceled.

The Chevrolet Motor company has made application to the New York stock exchange to list $80,000,000 of the capital stock, and the Havana and Charlotte Air Line Railway company has applied to list $3,500,000 first mortgage thirty year 4 per cent bonds due in 1934.

The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. issued a statement to the effect it was informed that mobilization of securities was advancing satisfactorily in London. The firm said, however, it was not advised that Great Britain was at this time arranging for a loan in the United States.

The American Sugar Refining company has made an arrangement with the British royal commission, which has charge of all sugars in the United Kingdom, for the refining of 50,000 tons. At current prices the order is worth about $6,000,000.

From Boston comes the report that the United Fruit company in the five months ended Feb. 29 had, from all sources, net earnings of $2,000,000. Net earnings for the year to end next September are estimated at 18 per cent on the stock.

Kean, Taylor & Co. are offering $1,125,000 Oregon-Washington Railway and Navigation company first and refunding 4 per cent bonds, due Jan. 1, 1961, at 86½. The bonds are guaranteed by the Union Pacific Railroad company.

Raymond, Pynchon & Co. announce that all of the Kenefick Zinc corporation stock acquired by them as syndicate managers has been sold. The shares will be offered on the New York curb tomorrow.

The copper market is reported quiet, with a strong undertone. Lead is in good demand from domestic and export consumers. Leading interests quote unchanged prices at 6.6 cents. Certain outside interests report sales at 7.10 cents.

Stockholders of the Savannah Sugar Refining company will meet on March 27 to vote on increasing the capital from $1,600,000 to $2,100,000.

The Atlantic Refining company has advanced the price of gasoline 1c to 25c a gallon, tank wagon basis.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company has advanced the price of crude oil 5c a brl, to $1.45.

WHITE PINE

AMPLE SECURITY LARGE PROFITS

A sound, established Lumber Company, with substantial assets, NO LIABILITIES, and a large earning capacity, requires additional capital for extension of its business.

The Company manufactures WHITE PINE exclusively, and is under direct supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture Forest Service.

Individual investors who are prepared to furnish capital in amounts of $200 and upwards, at 6 per cent per annum, will be afforded the same safe margin of security required by National Banks on Commercial loans. AND, IN ADDITION, WILL RECEIVE A BONUS OF $100 OF FULL PAID COMMON STOCK WITH EACH $200 INVESTED, WHICH SHOULD ASSURE A NET RETURN OF 15 PER CENT A YEAR.

The actual cash investment will be refunded in a few years through the operation of a substantial sinking fund, leaving the investor a valuable permanent interest in the business in the form of common (bonus) stock, without cost.

The hog market at Chicago yesterday opened 5@10c lower than Friday's close and suffered a further loss of 10@15c before the finish. The trade was active early, with shippers and small packers making good purchases, but leading killers had 4,000 hogs direct from an outside point and did scarcely any bidding for offerings here until after shipping requirements had been supplied. By that time, sellers were forced to make concessions to clear their holdings. Top sales were made at $10.00 and the bulk at $9.70@9.95. Late in the session it was practically impossible to get better than $9.90.

Closing quotations still stood largely 75@85c higher than a week ago and this week's average price was placed at $9.50, the highest made since May, 1910, and compared with an average of $8.85 last week. Pigs were mostly 75c higher than a week ago. Total receipts of hogs this week were 153,100 head and showed a decrease of 48,000. Shipments aggregated 40,200 head and were scarcely 5,000 short of last week's total.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 2,800; Swift & Co., 500; Sulzberger & Sons, 700; Morris & Co., 1,600; Anglo-American, 500; Hammond, 300; Western Packing company, 1,100; Miller & Hart, 200; Independent Packing company, 500; Brennan Packing company, 1,000; butchers, 1,500; shippers, 4,000; total, 14,800; left over, 2,500.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle market at Chicago this week closed in a strong position, with prices 25@35c higher than a week ago for the bulk of the steers and 25@40c up for cows and heifers. Moderate receipts in the face of climbing prices were responsible for the firm condition of the market. The quality of the steers offered was about up to the standard for this time of the year, with a marked scarcity of prime fat beeves. The best shown sold at $9.90, the same as last week's best, and as high as ever secured in March at this point. The bulk sold at $8.00@9.25, against $7.50@8.75 last week. The consumptive outlet for dressed beef is said to be in the best condition it has been for some time, and traders look for prime fat cattle to advance to a higher price level. Trade in stock and feeding steers continued on a limited scale and prices closed practically unchanged for the week.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 143,400, against 138,700 the preceding week, 145,000 a year ago, and 122,600 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 1,507,000, against 1,315,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Sheep and yearlings finished the week at an advance of 10@15c, while lambs showed a gain of 15@25c. The market was in a healthy condition, although prices closed at the highest level of the season to date. Final quotations made best yearlings $10.85, the highest on record, lambs $11.55, and prime light wethers $8.75. Two year old sheep were quotable up to $9.25. Receipts for the week showed a little increase, while shipments were reduced. The local demand was fully equal to the occasion, however, and the week closed with values at their best level for the period.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet this morning, the sales amounting to only 6,000 bags. Prices ruled steady, however, on a little scattered buying, which came partly from commission house sources, and this may possibly have been inspired by indications of further good clearances from Rio to Europe. The market opened at an advance of 2 to 4 points with May selling at 8.10 and September at 8.17, or about 4 to 5 points above last night's closing figures during the middle of the morning. Closing prices were within a point of the best, showing a net gain of 2 to 4 points. Carbonizing is the Bugbear of Motoring

A motor is a hot place. Too hot for most oils. They burn—carbonize. The oil film between the moving parts is eaten away; gritty carbon, rough, hard as diamonds, take its place. The parts rub, choke, stick, wear. Your car stops. You have a heavy repair bill.

Viscomotor Oil Stops All That

Viscomotor Oil does not begin to carbonize below a temperature which completely burns average oils. Viscomotor gives you a margin of absolute safety of 60 degrees above the normal temperature of an automobile motor at moderate speed. Many other oils give you a margin of safety of only 15 degrees. Perhaps that is what is the matter with your car. Try Viscomotor Oil next time.

Viscomotor
The Anti-Carbon Oil

There is a Viscomotor Oil for every motor—five different formulas, adapted to all needs. We are lubricating specialists. We have done nothing else for a quarter of a century than study and solve problems of lubrication. Viscomotor is the result of all these years of research and experiment in search of the perfect lubricant. It is laboratory-tested—of known quality—something to depend on.

For cold weather use—Viscomotor Frigid, which does not congeal.

A Motor of Might in a Car of Charm: The New 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers

Anyone with half an eye notes the charm in the new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. To cast one look is to capitulate. It is the kind of a car you would like to have your monogram on.

But the greatest lure is hidden from the eye. It is as invisible as night.

And yet one touch of the foot reveals the secret. Step on the accelerator button, and speed her up and up and up. The faster she runs, the smoother she gets. You will say the "last throb" has been removed.

This is super-engine speed, and why they call her the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers.

For 3400 r. p. m. means 3400 revolutions per minute, and that is the speed with which the engine "turns over." Most cars attain only 2000 r. p. m. Some do 1400 and 1600. One or two reach 2600, and another achieves 3000 r. p. m.

Super-engine speed means super-engine power. This explains the might in the 3400 r. p. m. motor.

For it isn't a big engine. It's a small one, when you think of the big hulks of engines of a year or two ago. Its six cylinders are 3¼ x 4½, and the displacement 224 cubic inches.

But it is a motor of might.

It delivers a horse-power of 45 at 2650 r. p. m.

The Chalmers engineers developed 75, but at the expense of gasoline and acceleration.

So they brought it down to 45 h. p., and translated the extra power for you into longer mileage on gas and roadability.

This is the kind of power you once obtained from the big brute of a car.

Now you receive it in a car that weighs only 2660 pounds, and a car "much faster on its feet."

For she carries no extra burden.

Aluminum pistons and light reciprocating parts remove the last dram of engine weight.

Then, too, with 32-inch wheels she is right down on the road and clings to it the deeper you sink the accelerator button.

That shows excellent balance, and explains how it is possible to build the supreme of riding comfort into a 115-inch wheelbase.

There are other attributes, such as the simple Westinghouse starter, the long-tuft upholstery, that makes the little biscuit kind an antiquity, and the magnificent "lay" of the steering wheel that fortify the little two-word slogan under the Chalmers Monogram.

And the price is only $1050.

Let me introduce you to this 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers, She tells her own story best.

You will find a motor of might in a car of charm.

ADEPT BOXER TO FACE MORAN IN BIG BOUT

Willard Is Much Improved Since He Won Title, Rocap Decides.

BY WILLIAM H. ROCAP.

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—What the sportsmen of America want to know is, can Jess Willard beat Frank Moran? Is the western cowboy in as good physical condition as when he reclaimed the world's heavyweight title for the white race?

Has Willard improved since that memorable April 5, 1915, at Havana, Cuba, when he dethroned the theretofore invincible Jack Johnson? Or has he by a year's ring activity dropped into the rut which is the penalty pugilistic stars pay for defying the inexorable laws of nature?

To answer these questions intelligently and to set the sporting mind straight the writer spent many hours with the world's champion during the last two weeks. He has watched Willard work in the gymnasium and on the road.

Preparations for Johnson Bout.

He has watched the Kansas cowboy go through spirited rounds with Walter Monahan, the 212 pound Los Angeles physical culture exponent; outbox Jack Hemple, the 190 pound heavyweight, as though the latter were a novice. Then as a strength test Willard tossed a big European wrestler about just like a pigmy.

Mental and pencil notes were carefully made of Willard viewed from every conceivable angle, and here are the results:

Jess Willard had practically prepared for eight months to beat Jack Johnson. It was an ambition spurred on by the writer's judgment that he was the lone man in all the world to reclaim the title. That judgment was matched by that of Tom Jones and Jack Curley. Their partnership, backed by the money of Harry Frazee and Lawrence Weber, accomplished the result.

How, day after day, Willard, quietly and unknown to the world at large, started to condition his massive physique, to absorb the finer points of boxing, reads like a romance. The hours, days, and weeks of self-sacrifice to gain the one goal showed that Willard's heart was in the right place. Then came the match, with its incident nerve test. Postponed several times, latterly when Willard was almost ready to step into the ring, it was finally transferred from Juarez, Mexico, to Havana, Cuba.

Foretold Johnson's Defeat.

Training practically began all over again, and one year ago almost to the day the writer stepped off the steamship at Havana, hurried to Willard's training quarters and flashed to the world that his condition was perfect and that he would surely be returned the winner over Jack Johnson.

On the night of June 27, 1914, in Paris, when Frank Moran carried Jack Johnson, the then invincible champion, along for twenty rounds and was on his feet at the finish, with a very tired champion in front of him, the writer cabled to America that the first big, young, strong fellow who faced Johnson would be the next champion. Willard was nominated as that man. He proved that the writer's judgment was correct.

Two Weeks Yet to Train.

Jess Willard's physical condition today does not quite compare with that of one year ago. He has a girth of fat around his midsection. That, however, is not a serious handicap. He has nearly two weeks more of work, and, as he says himself: "I have something to work for. That fat will be supplanted by muscle."

Despite this defect, which is a flaw when one is making comparisons, he has acquired attributes which are wonderful assets to a professional boxer, especially a world's champion.

Today Willard's defense and judgment of distance are 80 per cent better than they were one year ago. These assets are coupled because a defense in boxing is not always blocking the blow with your forearm or slipping it with your head. To let an opponent miss by an inch or by a foot is just as good a defense as blocking, and it indicates the eye is keen for distance.

Compares Moran and Monahan.

Walter Monahan is precisely the same height as Frank Moran—a few pounds heavier. He is just as clever, for he helped to school Jack Johnson in the finer points of the game when the man without a country was training to meet Jeffries. But he cannot hit as hard as Moran, and that angle must be considered when you are comparing Moran and Monahan as the men facing Willard.

In the recent bouts between Monahan and Willard the writer could not help but draw a distinct comparison between those at the Pioneer Athletic club, New York, and the passage at arms they had at the Miramar gardens, Havana. In the latter Monahan could jolt Willard on the jaw with left or right at will. Now the conditions are changed.

Jess Lands Blows at Will.

When Willard exhibited an aversion to blocking, he coolly stepped back, or to one side, let Monahan miss, and before the latter could regain his poise or equilibrium, would stab him with his left or land his now famous right hand uppercut. Both blows were timed to a nicety, and the judgment of distance was well nigh perfect.

It is these assets, coupled with Willard's enormous strength and abnormal height and reach, that have made him a 2 to 1 favorite in the coming battle. With these undeniable improvements in

WILLARD JOLTED BY ULTIMATUM OF FIGHT BODY

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—The feature of Jess Willard's training at the Pioneer Sporting club this afternoon was a heavyweight battle of words between the titleholder and Chairman Fred Wenck of the state boxing commission. Willard lost, but the two expect to take up their disagreement again tomorrow afternoon or Monday. The champion's manager, Tom Jones, was sick today and could not help in the encounter.

The result of the conflict was an announcement that the Pioneer Sporting club, where Jess has been training for his approaching fight with Frank Moran for the heavyweight championship, was suspended for thirty days today by the boxing commission. The charge was that the club had misled the public by advertising a bout between Willard and Al Reich, at which 25 cents admission was charged, and had failed to put on the bout.

Wenck Jars the Champion.

Chairman Wenck, who has been active in Willard's training from the start, opened his attack with an ultimatum after he had decoyed big Jess from the ring between his rounds with Monahan. Wenck hit Jess below the belt while he was breathing hard.

"Are you going to box Reich this afternoon?" was his left lead.

"I am not," Willard blocked.

"Then this is the last time you will appear here in public," Wenck landed low and cuttingly.

"All right, then," Jess shouted over his shoulder as Wenck was counting him out. "I'll quit now. I don't have to box this round. I don't have to fight Moran, either, if it comes to that. If the boxing commission is set on stopping this fight it won't break my heart."

Advertising Draws 2,000.

The altercation was the result of Willard's refusal to box Reich, after the latter had been engaged by Tom Jones to make his first appearance this afternoon as a sparring partner for the champion. The public had been led to believe that big Al was to make his debut, and the crowd was correspondingly large. Two thousand persons were in the house, and the fire department shut the gates on another thousand.

Commissioner Wenck early in the day heard that Willard did not intend to box Reich. He telephoned to certify the rumor, but no one at the club knew anything about it. Wenck ordered that unless Reich was to box a notice to that effect should be posted at the box office. This was not done. When Wenck arrived at the club he found Reich had reported, ready to start work for his $500, guaranteed by Tom Jones. But Jones, who had suffered a relapse after a visit to his bank, was not among those present.

Ultimatum Arouses Jess.

"Willard will have to box Reich," said Wenck. "The public is not to be hoodwinked."

"I don't care if the commission stops the fight," bellowed the headstrong Jess. "I can worry along without the $47,500. I can pitch hay if I have to. But no boxing commissioner is going to dictate to me as to whom I shall box.

"I don't care a rap for training in public. I'd sooner be in private. I'll not be hounded and persecuted and ordered about by Wenck if I have to finish training in Chicago. It looks to me as if the commission—or part of it—is determined to prevent my meeting with Moran. If so, let it just say the word. I have car fare back to Chicago."

Misunderstanding, Jones Says.

Tex Rickard was thrown in a state of confusion when he heard of the rumpus. He called Tom Jones, who said the squall was a misunderstanding.

"Jess is right when he says he knew nothing of any engagement with Reich. It all came about by not being on hand. I contracted for Reich's services, and we were to have Al Reich start in today. But I have been sick, and out of touch with the situation. I did not speak to Jess about Reich because I wished to be there when Al went on. If Wenck had got me on the telephone I should have fixed it in a minute."

Moran Works for Fans.

Frank Moran did not expect to work today, but rather than disappoint some 300 admirers went through a forty-five minute workout. He punched the bag, shadow boxed, and topped off with fifteen minutes of sparring with three burly sparring partners.

Moran is hard as nails and his wind is good, but some fight followers believe the bloodless look in his face at the end of the workout hints of overtraining. There is nothing wrong with his nerve; he poked out his jaw a dozen times and let his sparring partners bang away.

CUB REGULARS DEFEAT COLTS BY LONG HITS

Old Timers Clout Way to 7 to 2 Win Before Chicago Visitors.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Tampa, Fla., March 11.—[Special.]—Florida's weather man tried to play a joke on the Cubs today by sending a couple of showers off Tampa bay just after lunch. It looked like the afternoon of practice was spoiled and Manager Tinker called off the game between the Cubs and colts. A half hour later the sun came out blazing, so Tinker put on the game just the same and the regulars won, 7 to 2, before 300 selected fans.

Maybe Tinker wouldn't have played, but Roger Sullivan and his son, accompanied by former Mayor John P. Hopkins and Samuel Insull, were here from Chicago. They came over from Tarpon Springs just to get advance dope on the north siders.

Some Long Distance Clouts.

Only five and a half rounds were played when the distinguished Chicago visitors had to start back to their resort, so Tinker called the game.

Frank Schulte and Pete Allison starred with two hits apiece, both of Pete's being doubles. Heine Zim clouted one to the fence for three bags and so did Bill Bailey. Bailey and Seaton hurled for the regulars and Wright and Hogg for the Colts. Score:

Colts ....1 0 1 0 0 0—2 5 3
Cubs ....0 1 3 0 3 *—7 7 2
Batteries—Wright, Hogg, and Fischer; Bailey, Seaton, Archer, and Clemens.

After watching Chicago's revised Cubs in the Tampa training camp for five days one feels like daring to predict great things for the baseball season of 1916 in Chicago, but just before he has dared to say anything he thinks of the pitching staff and then stops and reconsiders.

Joe Tinker, boss of the new Cubs, has a lot of swell names on the list of his pitching squad, but some of them have shown inclinations to slip, some are getting well along in years, and others are among those who look promising. Finally one finds it hard to pick out a single name on the list and say, "There is a pitcher who is bound to win a lot of games."

One Real Star Means Much.

One has confidence in speaking about the Washington club, because one knows that Walter Johnson is there and that he will win a lot of games. One can feel safe in counting a lot of victories for the Phillies because Grover Alexander is there. Pittsburgh has its Mammaux, Boston has its Rudolph, and others have reliable men, but Tinker has Claude Hendrix, Mordecai Brown, Tom Seaton, Bill Bailey, Jim Vaughn, Jim Lavender, Gene Packard, George Pierce, George McConnell, Mike Prendergast, Bob Wright, and Bradley Hogg.

There are a lot of names there that have been set in black type in the headlines of newspapers many times, but so far it has not been possible to determine whether there is sufficient stuff behind these names to cause their being set in black type this year.

Hurlers Show Right Spirit.

Tinker himself, after a few days in camp, feels that his success of 1916 depends upon the slabmen, and so far he hasn't been able to pass judgment on that staff. However, he is a lot better satisfied after the first few days of work than he was when he left Chicago, and the reason for his satisfaction lies in the spirit and determination shown by the squad of pitchers.

Every man on the squad knows Tinker intends to carry about eight men. He has a dozen on the list, meaning that four have to go. There isn't one of the dozen still struggling in the camp who can feel positive of a regular place on the staff. Consequently the whole dozen are working, for it might prove disastrous to loaf for even a minute.

Competition May Make Staff.

Because of the condition which prevails regarding the pitching staff, it is quite possible that Tinker's slabmen will hustle and work with such determined efforts that Manager Joe will find himself on April 12 with the finest pitching staff that any one club ever possessed. There is ability and power enough in the dozen men striving for jobs to build just such a pitching staff, and because of the competition, just such a staff may be produced. If such a staff is produced the Cubs are sure to be leaders.

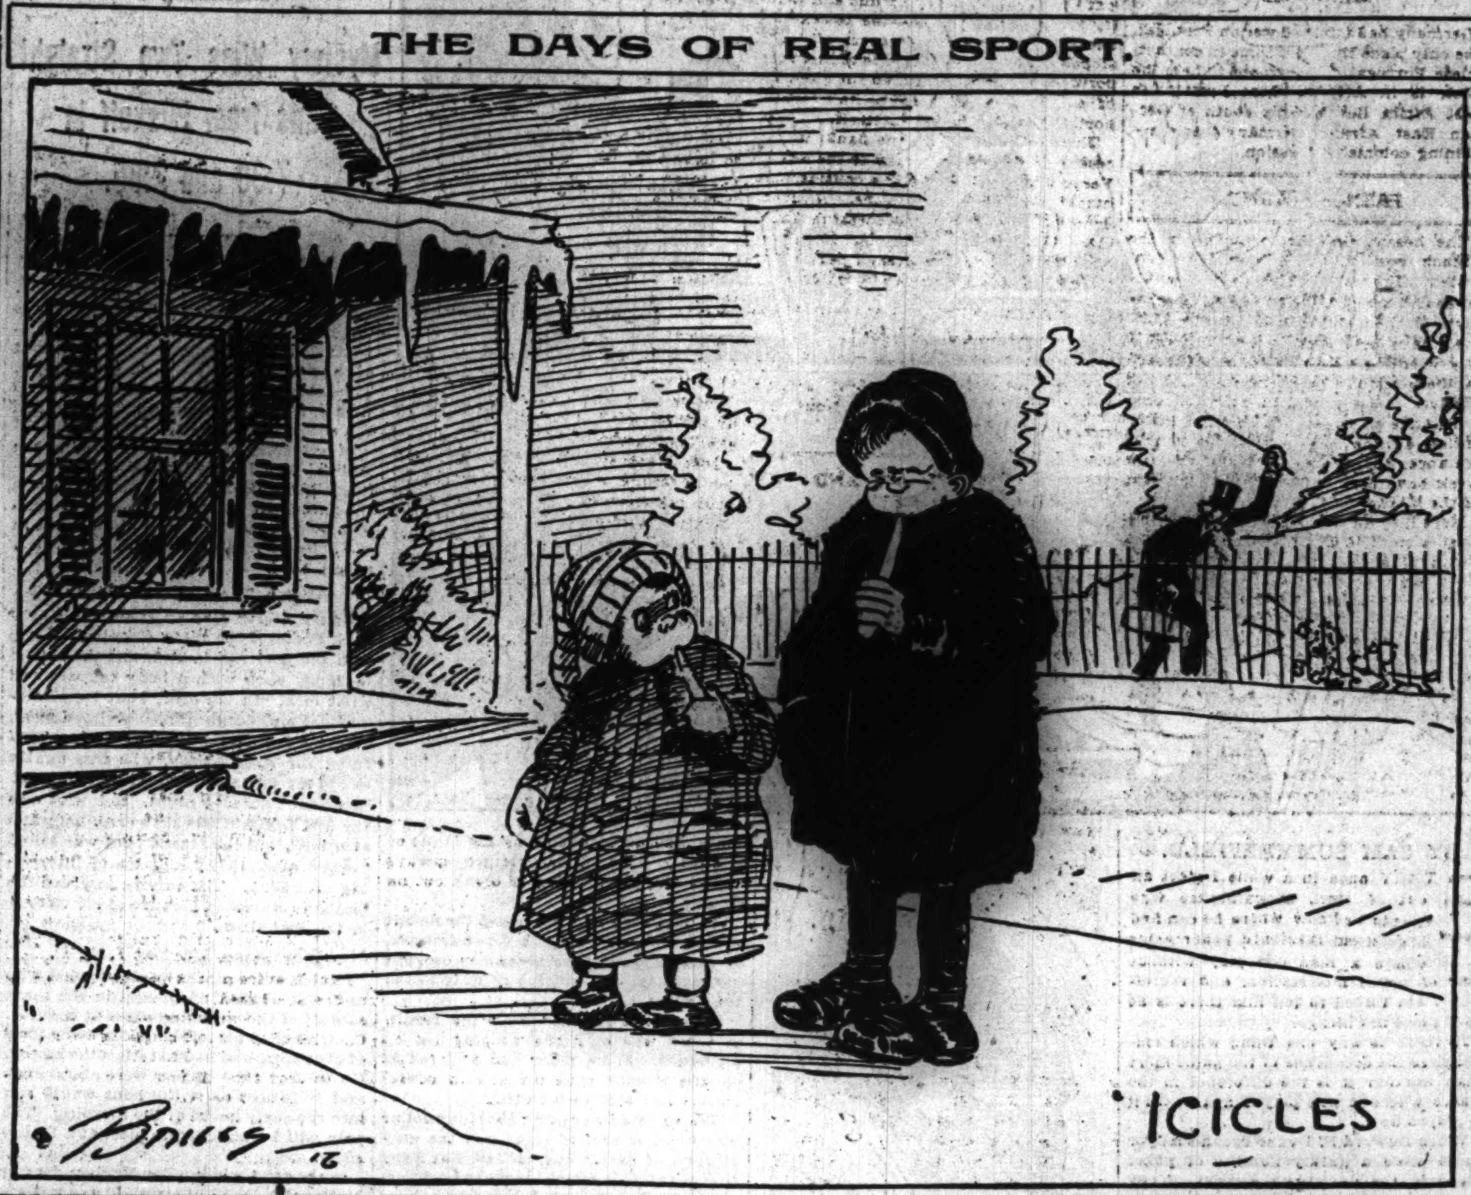
STICK TO OFFER OF GOLF TRAIN

San Francisco, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Vincent Whitney, president of the California Golf association; Jack Neville, secretary of that body, and several prominent San Francisco golfers will meet on Monday afternoon to consider the request received recently from the Western Golf association asking that California withdraw its offer of a special train to Delmonte in July.

While the matter will be discussed at some length, it is the opinion here that the California association will decline to withdraw the offer, which was accepted at the January meeting of the western body by the overwhelming vote of 101 to 15.

California opinion is that the action of the western directors in asking California to withdraw an offer so readily accepted at the January meeting is little short of a breach of etiquette. To withdraw the special train offer would seriously hinder the success of the tournament and probably would restrict the class of the entries. That the question of amateurism is not a serious one and is not affected by the special train offer also is contained in the opinion in local circulation.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT.



YOUNG CATCHER JOINS PIONEERS AT CAMP OF SOX

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Mineral Wells, Tex., March 11.—[Special.]—Scott and Benz were agreeably disappointed when this evening's train brought to camp Catcher Byrd Lynn instead of Dave Danforth, the southpaw pitching recruit, who sent word that he would arrive tonight. As Benz put it, Lynn is just the Byrd they have been out gunning for all the week because he is a real catcher with a big league mitt, while Danforth is only a southpaw pitcher.

Lynn was travel stained and tired when he dumped his suit case into the jitney, for he came all the way from San José, and there are no through trains from that burg to this. He announced that he was ready to catch anything Benz and Scott had in stock because he had been working out of doors for a fortnight or more.

Lynn from Coast League.

Lynn is the backstop who was obtained from the Salt Lake team of the Pacific Coast league last fall because he could hit as well as catch.

The two Sox hurlers made up today for their half day off by putting in double time warming up under the tropical sun. They were helped out by a local dispenser of wholesale groceries by the name of Dayfield, who borrowed a boy's size catcher's mitt from one of the bystanders and offered to handle whatever Benz and Scott had to offer if they did not put much on it.

They soon discovered that in spite of his inadequate equipment Mayfield knew how to catch, and on inquiry it developed that he used to catch for the University of Virginia when it had some team, believe him, although he modestly stated that their pitcher won most of their games.

With Byrd on deck the two Sox hurlers plan to do a little real warming up tomorrow, as their arms are the only parts of their anatomies not already in good shape. A letter from Manager Rowland brought the information that Fournier might be looked for any minute.

KEARNS SIXTH "TRIBUNE" AMATEUR TO GET BERTH.

Proof that THE TRIBUNE's amateur baseball tournament of last season was watched carefully by minor league managers continues to come in every day. Pitcher Nick Kearns, a De Paul university boy who was alternate in case any of the three winners of trips could not go with Sox, Cubs, or Whales, has been signed by the Troy club of the New York State league.

Kearns is the sixth amateur to break into the professional game through THE TRIBUNE tryouts. Charley Pechous, Joe Weiss, John McKittrick, Harry Rasmussen, and Eddie Hanley all have joined teams of organized baseball.

Scouts who looked over the amateurs in the 1915 tryouts rated Kearns as the fourth best amateur player in Chicago. He might have won one of the three trips east but for the fact that he was rather small. The judges who decided the tourney took into consideration every point that a big league scout considers when sent out to line up new talent among the minors.

DOC WHITE QUITS AT DENVER

Denver, Colo., March 11.—Doc White, former White Sox pitcher, from whom much was expected as manager of the Denver Bears this season, today resigned the managership. He accepted a business position in Los Angeles. Who Owner McGill in Indianapolis may have in mind to take the place is not known here.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

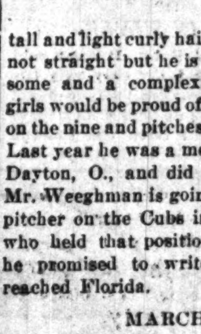
MARCH 6.—Diary I have been trodding on air ever since yesterday morning and I believe love has come to me at last. And how mean a trick Fate played me by seperating the object of my feelings and I hardly before we had time to get acquainted. But I can well afford to wait and dream and the month of our seperation will give me time to study my own heart and learn if what it holds is true love or only a passing fancy. But I cannot believe it is but a fancy even though I was with him only 15 minutes.

His name is Mr. Gates and he is one of the new players on the Cub nine. The hand that rules our destiny must of moved me to get up early yesterday morning and go down to the 12th. St. station to see the team off though when I went it was with the idea that it was a mark of respect to Mr. Weeghman.

The station was crowded with the members of the team and their friends and I was embarrased at 1st. in the presence of so many men though they was a few women present. Mr. Gates must of read my feelings and tried to put me at my ease because he came over to where I was standing and said. "Well girlie don't you wish you was going along." Others have called me girlie but none have put as much feeling into the little word. I said. "I would be embarrased going along with so many men and only a few women." "Oh," said he. "I would take care of you." "I believe I could trust you to." I said and it was impossible for me to keep my admiration for him out of my eyes. "Are you here to say goodbye to some friend." was his next question. "No one in particular." I told him. "Well then," he said. "I wish you would say goodbye to me because I have no friends to see me off."

Diary how could I resist the appeal of this big strong man so alone amongst strangers. My heart swelled with pity which is a kin to love. What we said to one another between then and the time the train was ready to start I cannot recall. I was in a dream and the more he looked at me and talked to me the more dreamy I become.

Finally just as he was going to climb on board the special I held out my hand to him and said. "Mr. Gates I hope you don't think I am in the habit of talking to strange gentlemen and I would not of payed any attention to your advances only that the look of loneliness in your eyes struck the cord of sympathy in my heart. If it will be any comfort to you to know that there is one in Chicago who misses you and thinks of you constantly I am the one Mr. Gates." He gave me the sweetest smile and pressed my hand so hard that it hurt. And as luck would have it Mr. Collins the reporter who I had tired of past us just as we was saying our farewell. I bowed to him for why should I give his heart an extra stab by cutting him dead.



Mr. Gates stood on the back platform of the train as it pulled out and waved his handkerchief to me and I waved mine at him and diary I am glad I had it in my hand to wave because before the train was out of sight I needed it for the tears I could not keep back.

Mr. Gates is well over 6 feet tall and light curly hair. His features are not straight but he is wonderfully handsome and a complexion of which most girls would be proud of it. He is a pitcher on the nine and pitches with his left hand. Last year he was a member of a team in Dayton, O., and did so splendidly that Mr. Weeghman is going to make him the pitcher on the Cubs in place of the man who held that position last year. And he promised to write the minute he reached Florida.

MARCH 10.

How I ever got through these four days I cannot tell and I am glad there has been little work for me in the office for all my thoughts were far away in Florida. But today I heard from him. It was not a letter but a post card picture of oranges and he sent it from Jacksonville. "Don't forget me". was the words he had written. Oh diary.

$510,000 TAX ON HAGGIN ESTATE

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—The executors of the estate of James B. Haggin, mining man and breeder of horses, sent to the state controller today a check for $510,000 to apply to the transfer tax.

Hearings will be begun on Monday at the office of Deputy State Controller Boardman to determine the precise value of the large properties left by Haggin. The payment was made because it insured saving a penalty of $50,000, as the time limit expires tomorrow.

The attorneys will submit a legal appraisal made by the excutors. In round numbers they place the value of the estate at $20,000,000, but say it may be above or below that sum.

HAMMOND TAKES PRIZE AT TRAPS

Sportsman's club shooters were hampered by breezes from the lake at the Lincoln park traps yesterday and few high scores were registered. J. Graham had the best total in the fifty bird event, with 47. Lee Hammond, an amteur, won the prize in this event. W. R. Clifford captured the twenty-five bird shoot with the only perfect score among the amateurs. Events were from sixteen yards' rise. High scores:

Fifty bird event—J. Graham, 47; C. Burmeister, 46; G. P. Renehan, 45; R. C. Millen, 43; E. S. Graham, 42; W. D. Stauffer, 42; Lee Hammond, 42.

Twenty-five bird event—J. Graham, 25; W. Clifford, 25; G. P. Renehan, 24; C. Burmeister, 24; D. Raymond, 24; Dr. Lewis, 23.

ROWLAND LEADS SOX SOUTHWARD ON TRIP TONIGHT

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

This is getaway day for the White Sox. President Comiskey and Manager Rowland will muster their forces today, and at 6 o'clock sharp this evening another of Comiskey's famous baseball specials will steam out of the La Salle street station, headed for Mineral Wells, Tex. If all goes well the White Hose brigade will reach training quarters Tuesday morning.

Rowland will have twenty-two athletes to look after on the trip south. Besides the ball players there will be quite a few of Comiskey's personal friends on board the special, and the party will include between sixty and sixty-five persons. There also will be a moving picture man to take film records of the journey and of the athletes in training, so Sox fans will enjoy some indoor baseball by their favorites before the American league flag race starts on April 12.

"Sane" Training Trip

For the first time in years Comiskey will try a "sane" training trip. Rowland's team is one of the last of the big league squads to start south, whereas in former seasons Comiskey's men usually were the first to leave.

Under the old schedule the squad was booked for a long siege of exhibitions on the way back to major league fields. These actual combats served to put the players in great shape for the opening of the league race, but critics and players have long maintained that the strenuous work told heavily on Comiskey's men in the middle of the campaign.

This time the exhibition schedule will include only about half the number of games played in former years. There will be fewer one night stands and fewer contests on the doubtful diamonds which abound in the bushes. Perhaps the Sox will not be as well conditioned at the start as has been the custom, but Comiskey at least is ready to give the less strenuous system a trial.

Players Arrive for Jaunt.

Walter Mayer, emergency catcher for several years, and Ray Shook, a recruit backstop, were the first of the Sox athletes to appear yesterday primed for the tour. Others drifted in at odd intervals during the afternoon and night and the last batch is due this morning.

Secretary Harry Grabiner's schedule calls for the following assemblage of players when the train starts south at 6 o'clock tonight:

Pitchers—Cicotte, Russell, Walsh, Wolfgang, Eller, Stellars, Galvin, and Clark.
Catchers—Schalk, Mayer, and Shook.
Infielders—Eddie Collins, Buck Weaver, George Moriarty, Fautsch, and Jack Ness.
Outfielders—Jackson, Felsch, Shano Collins, Murphy, and Leibold.

Fautsch is a third baseman dug up from Hibbing, Minn. Malcolm Galvin is the former University of Wisconsin pitcher and football star who quit college athletics when accused of playing summer ball.

Comiskey's personal party will be the following: Gus Fordyce, Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Comiskey, David Van Praag, Mr. and Mrs. Beardsley, Mr. and Mrs. Rubels, Pat Prunty, T. Doran, John Agnew, Mr. and Mrs. M. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Adler, and Mrs. C. A. Comiskey. Manager Rowland, Secretary Harry Grabiner, Road Secretary Joe O'Neill, M. McDonald, the movie man, and Trainer Buckner will complete the party.

Others to Go to Texas.

There will be no rest for the White Sox after reaching Texas. Rowland plans to start work Tuesday afternoon. The initial practice will consist of a long hike about Mineral Wells, and on Wednesday the athletes will advance on the diamond. Next Saturday Sox fans will get their first box scores, for the squad will be split into two divisions and will alternate in games at Dallas and Fort Worth.

BY EVAN STONE.

Wisconsin won the conference basketball championship last night in Patten gymnasium, by defeating Northwestern, 24 to 211, in a game replete with thrills. The Purple led at half time, 15 to 10, and apparently had the edge on the visitors. But the Badgers started the second period with a rush, and beginning with a free throw by Smith soon overtook Murphy's men and gained the lead, 18 to 17.

Northwestern was not outplayed, in fact the Purple continued to slightly show superior teamwork, but the Evanston athletes could not cage the ball. Time after time the home rooters rose with a cheering whoop as the ball went to the basket, only to see it wobble about the ring and drop outside. On the other hand the Badgers had their shooting eyes in fine trim.

Five Baskets by Whittle.

Whittle led in scoring with five baskets, Chandler, his opponent, counted three. Bert Kincaid cast free throws in the first perior, but in the second, when his team sorely needed the points, he could not find the ring.

Picking stars would be difficult. Ten men played in masterly style and the team showed an even brand of work. The Badgers relied on short passes and worked three pretty plays for counts. The Purple broke up most of the short passes. Northwestern pulled several pretty plays for scores, but for the most part the scoring was done on quick chance shots from a furious scramble for the ball.

Badgers First to Score.

Wisconsin led off with a free throw by Smith and Whittle put the Purple in the lead with a basket. Kincaid made it 4 to 1 with two free throws. The Badgers evened up the score and the game seesawed until near the end of the half, when the Purple took a lead on two long shots by Underhill and Driscoll and free throws by Kincaid. Lineup:

CHICAGO SKIERS SEND IN PROTEST

If the National Ski association does not recall the award of the 1917 national tournament to St. Paul, Minn., Chicago followers of the sport will secede in a body. The Norge Ski club of this city, which has a membership roster of fifty, more than any other club in the national body, was a bidder for the big tourney next year, but lost out when the officers awarded the meeting to St. Paul.

The application by St. Paul was entertained illegally, according to local skiers, because St. Paul was hurried into membership two days before the national convention at Glenwood, Minn., in February, without the stipulated formalities of obtaining a mail vote on the bid by all the clubs in the association. Rules in the constitution were cited to show that this mail vote on an application for membership could not be taken after Jan. 30.

The Norge club has a protest lodged with Secretary Aksel Holter of the national association, in Ashland, Wis., and plans already have been formed for a new national body with a group of dissatisfied skiers as the nucleus, in case the officials do not honor the protest. A war report from the pen of Secretary Mike Jensen of the local club speaks menacingly of the national association, and says in case the Chicagoans are turned down neither the St. Paul tournament, the present national officers, nor suspicious records made in recent meets will be recognized.

OLD TIME PLAYERS TO DINE.

Over 100 former baseball players and old time fans have been lined up for the Old Timers' banquet which Lou Gertenrich expects to put on at the Coliseum in the near future. Robert M. Sweitzer has assured Gertenrich he will do his utmost to insure the success of the fete.

DRAW GO MEANS PRESTIGE LOSS FOR J. WILLARD

Fans Expect Him to Beat Moran Because of Superior Weight, Height, Etc.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

If Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, doesn't hand a beating to Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh redhead, when they clash in New York March 25, the chances are many critics who sit at the ringside will hand him a panning.

When he stacks up against Moran he will have an advantge in weight of fifty pounds, and possibly more. In addition, he will have the advantage in nearly every other way, which means bulk and reach and all that sort of stuff which is mentioned in the measurement columns. Then, too, he has that other thing, which cannot be discounted—the title.

It is only natural that ring fans and critics should look to the champion to be returned winner. They always figure that a champion would not be a champion unless he possessed qualities that are supposed to go in the makeup of a titleholder. They figure that he has the class and that means that he also must possess gameness.

Champion Game Fighter.

In the case of Jess Willard there isn't a great deal of doubt as to his gameness. Anybody who stood up and took the lacing that Jack Johnson handed to him for twenty rounds in that memorable bout at Havana which resulted in his annexing the title cannot be accused of lacking a fighting heart. The big Kansan, according to all reports which emanated from the Cuban ringside, would have been declared a loser at the end of twenty rounds and Jack Johnson, the only Negro who ever held the crown, probably would still be the boss of them all if the limit of that contest had been set for twenty sessions.

So in the minds of most followers of pugilism Willard must be given credit of being a game guy. His undersized opponent (by comparison only) of March 25, Frank Moran, probably has just as much claim for being a game fighter as has Willard. But the business of class is another thing. Moran, of course, goes into the fray handicapped physically. Like Willard, he can punch, but it is doubtful if his wallops carry the force behind them that those of his opponent are known to possess.

Speed May Upset Dope.

In many bouts, like the one soon to be staged, between a good big man scrapping a good little man there has been only one thing that could upset the dope—and that is pure speed. If Moran were capable of traveling at faster speed than his opponent he would have a chance to score a victory over Willard in a ten round contest. There is only one way that this can be determined, and that is by actual combat. With speed Moran might be able to break down the defense of the champion, thereby giving him the opportunity to land one of his hard right hand wallops.

But the big thing which concerns Moran more than Willard isn't worrying the champion in the least, according to views expressed only recently by the Kansan and Manager Tom Jones. Willard has made plans of his own for this battle and he is well aware that speed is going to be a factor. He figures that the Pittsburgh redhead will try to outfoot him over the short route and gain the popular verdict on the score of points rung up.

Willard to Reply Similarly.

Willard's answer to this sort of opposition is going to be just what few, except those close to him, would expect. He isn't going to try to slug Moran's head off while the latter is doing the speed work. Willard will simply speed up himself and make an effort to show the Gotham fans that he can step some himself. If he does that and is able to step as fast as his lighter foe, few would give the Pittsburgher even an outside chance to be returned winner.

But one thing is a cinch, and that is if Moran beats the champion over the ten round route Jess will lose a lot of admirers, and some critics are likely to say harsh things about him. They're liable to call him a fluke champion.

Willard hasn't forgotten what happened to him a couple of years ago in a Milwaukee ring when he fought "Boer" Rodel. At the time he fought Rodel the champion of today was considered in many quarters the best man in the so-called white hope class. Willard towered over Rodel and it looked like a shame for big Jess to enter a contest against such a small opponent.

Panning Handed to Jess.

That was the way it looked before they started hostilities, but when the bout had come to a finish Rodel was the chap accorded the honors by most of the critics. Willard's failure to polish off or defeat Rodel resulted in a panning. He was termed a "big no good fighter" who couldn't beat a small opponent who never was considered a classy miller in the heavyweight ranks.

That defeat by Rodel both Willard and his manager, Jones, tried to explain, but there were few who considered the explanation satisfactory. Jones, who always has been the mouthpiece for the present champion, said that Jess was possessed of the fear that is credited to most boxers who have been a principal in a ring fatality. In Willard's previous contest in a Los Angeles ring his opponent, John (Bull) Young, met his death after a right hand punch by Willard had floored him.

BY SAM SUMMERFIELD.

EVERY once in a while I meet an out of town acquaintance who wants to know where he can find a good old fashioned poker game where a man can play without fear of police molestation, and regretfully I am forced to tell him there is no such place in Chicago.

If there is any one thing which emphasizes the decadence of the game more than another it is the difference in the places where it was played and where it is played now.

When Edward F. Dunne became mayor there were a goodly number of poker clubs in the downtown district. They were semi-public in character, strangers not being admitted unless vouched for by some one who was known to the management. Their clientèle consisted not of professional gamblers but of busy men, merchants, doctors, lawyers, etc., who occasionally wished to lay off their daily cares and divert their mind for an hour or two. In equipment they ranged from comfortable to luxurious.

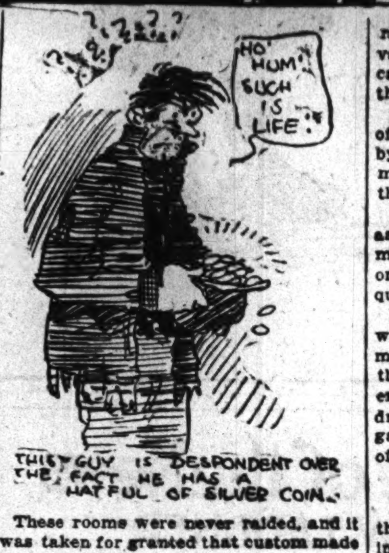
Probably one of the best known was the Hoffman club, which occupied the whole building (four floors) above the ground floor at 114 Monroe street. It had billiard rooms, card rooms, lounging rooms, dining rooms, bath and bed room in plenty for the use of its patrons.

No one was ever urged to play poker. Meals were served free to all within the place and the table was stocked with the best. It was headquarters for a great many men from the country and surrounding towns, some of whom do not visit Chicago at all now, but transact their business in towns where they can mix a little pleasure with it.

Some of the other well known clubs were the Vanderbilt, Marlborough, and Waldorf, on State street; the Owensboro, Blue Pencil, and Minden, on Madison, and the Dearborn on the street of that name. All these places were run in an orderly manner and nothing wrong was tolerated.

Occasionally the authorities desired them to close for a time and these orders were instantly and implicitly obeyed with no attempt made to evade them.



HO' HUM! SUCH IS LIFE!
THIS GUY IS DESPONDENT OVER THE FACT HE HAS A HATFUL OF SILVER COIN.

These rooms were never raided, and it was taken for granted that custom made law and they never would be.

Enters on the scene Chief of Police John Collins. In one night he raided nearly every poker club in the loop and carted a lot of representative good citizens to the bastile as if they had been a horde of malefactors. This marked the passing of the downtown palatial poker clubs.

A short time after these raids poker games were opened in some of the swell hotels. A certain State street saloonkeeper had a large interest in the profits (sometimes as much as 75 per cent) in most of them, and by a peculiar coincidence those in which he was interested were never seriously interfered with, while the others were persistently harassed and raided.

The following were at one time or another interested in the famous Hoffman club:

Jay Scott, once its leading spirit, who died in Los Angeles.

Frankie Lanterman, who became known also as a racetrack plunger, was found drowned in the East river in New York.

Ed Woodhouse, who died of an operation, and his son Cush.

J. K. Sebree, afterwards proprietor of the Saratoga and Morrison hotels.

Toby Imes, who also later was identified with the Owensboro and Marlborough clubs.

Some of the other club owners who have "solved the great mystery" were Charlie Hochkirch, better known as "Pickles," of the Waldorf, who died in Seattle, and whose fame as one of the most sensational poker players of his time has outlived him. Also Ed Springer of the Dearborn and Tom Neeland of the Minden.

Poker of today?

O, yes, there is some poker. A few men gather furtively at some out of the way place, some saloon or cigar store, and sneak away to some private flat or residence. One night here, the next night there, continually dodging. Bah!

A STUDY IN SILVER.

I WAS booking at Roby. It was a cold winter's day, and the only way the book makers managed to keep warm was by conjuring up before their mental vision a visit from the Indiana sheriff, fortified with numberless warrants, and accompanied by his horde of vandals. This mind picture always caused the perspiration to break out on them.

The last race had witnessed the defeat of Dan Honig's Rhono, a 6 to 5 favorite, by some skate whose name has escaped my memory, but which was at 75 to 1 in the betting.

I was well satisfied with the result, as there was only one winning bet on my sheet. Some piker had wagered $2 on the winner with me and in consequence had $152 to his credit.

Now some way or other the silver dollar was the sole unit of trade and the only medium of barter and exchange at Roby that winter. It seemed to make no difference whether a man bet one or a hundred (most of them bet the one), the bargain was always sealed with a cascade of silver.

My cashier had stacks of silver—to the right of him, stacks to the left, stacks in front and stacks behind him. He was seriously and audibly debating with himself whether he had better charter a special train to take it into the city or else stay there all night and guard it, thus obviating the necessity of bringing it out again the following day.

Off to one side he had built a pyramid, mostly of minute and fractional parts of the debased William Jennings Bryan currency, to the amount of $152 to liquidate the winning ticket.

The bell clanged announcing the result of the race as official. A dilapidated human who looked as if he might have been the original inspiration of that beautiful ballad entitled "He Had Seen Better Days" bobbed up to the cashier.

With a negligent air he tossed the winning pasteboard to him. "Give me a $100 bill, a $50 bill, and a $2 bill," he demanded.

The custodian of the silver gazed at him earnestly.

"Is that what you want?" he inquired soberly.

"Yes, sir."

"Well," my faithful watchdog of the treasury commented, "I am sure pleased to learn what you want. However, I am not so certain that you will be equally pleased to learn what you will get. There is your pay," pointing to the pile, reminiscent of a thrice defeated presidential candidate.

"I don't propose to take that," interposed the derelict with vigor.

"Well, well, well," replied the cashier. "I am glad to become the recipient of your confidence. Do you know, I was rather uneasy in my mind for fear you would take it. But I feel better now. Just leave it here, for I am quite sure there will be a few around later who will take it."

Deftly and rapidly reducing the evidence of my indebtedness, the man who pays off twisted himself out of the box, and we proceeded to the train.

A few minutes later, looking out of the window I saw my whilom customer. He was bareheaded, and had his hat full of silver under his arm. His brow was corrugated, and his face wore a frown.

Inscrutable are the workings of providence. Here was a "piker" who probably had not had that much money in ages, who should have been grateful to win in pennies, dissatisfied with his good fortune.

WHITE MAY GET GO WITH WELSH

According to Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, men interested in the promotion of the fifteen round fight between Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh and White have taken under advisement the demands of the titleholder.

Harry Pollok, manager of the champion, has asked a flat guarantee of $10,000 or 60 per cent of the receipts. This demand now is being considered by the men interested in the club. If the bout goes through it will be held in Convention hall, one of the largest arenas in the country.

Tommy Walsh, manager of Joe Mandot, the southern lightweight, left last night for Hot Springs, where Joe is slated to meet Monk Fowler in a ten round bout Wednesday night.

Stockyards Tommy Murphy and Spike Kelly, two Turks, will exchange punches for ten rounds before a suburban club today. They have agreed to make 152 pounds, and there should be plenty of action. Murphy also has been slated to meet Sailor Einert in Miamsburg, O., the latter part of the month and Joe Herrick in Davenport, Ia., the middle of next month.

Mike Hirsch and Eddie Nearing have been matched to box ten rounds before a suburban club next Sunday. They will make 158 pounds at the ringside.

MASKED MARVEL TAKES FEATURE BOUT AT C. A. A.

Mystery Wins Two Straight Falls from Pliskoff in 7:30 and 2:35.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

The "Masked Marvel," whose name is unknown to wrestling fans, defeated Edward Pliskoff of Finland in the main bout of the mat show at the C. A. A. last night. The Marvel won the opening bout in 7:30 with a body scissors and wrist lock, and the second in 2:35 by the same hold.

In the semi-windup Leo Pardello, the Italian, won from Karl Schultz of Germany in straight falls. The Italian won the first bout in 22:30 with a body scissors and wrist lock and the second in 12:17 by the same method. It was a rough bout.

Wirth Pins Foster Twice.

Henry Wirth was an easy victor over Jack Foster in the opening contest. Wirth won the first fall in 14:26 and the second in 16:00, each with a body scissors and wrist lock. In the other bout Tom Rolowicz, the Chicago Polish welterweight, defeated Joe Saunders. The latter substituted for Alex Kazan, who was unable to appear because of an injury sustained in a bout Thursday night. Rolowicz won the first fall in 21:20 with a cross body and arm lock, but the second bout was called a draw after thirty minutes of interesting grappling. The referee awarded the match to Rolowicz because of his victory in the first clash.

Martinson Hurt at I. A. C.

Paul Martinson, the local grappler, who met Bill Hokuff of Omaha in the main contest of the wrestling show at the I. A. C., wrenched his left shoulder after 19:08 of grappling and had to forfeit the match. Up to that time honors were about even and it looked as if the bout would run into the early hours of the morning. The pair will be matched to meet at a future show.

In the semi-windup Ben Reuben, former National A. A. U. lightweight and welterweight champion, won from Jack Harsh of Milwaukee in straight falls. Reuben won the first fall in 14:13 with a combination body and head lock. He took the second in 3:59 with a body scissors and head lock.

Johnny Meyers won the opening bout from Steve Lechki in straight falls. Marty Cutler and Jack Dribbs furnished the burlesque contest.

West secured ten tricks.

The majority of players undoubtedly would have played the strong club suit after winning the first trick, and in so doing would have lost the game.

West realized that he could do nothing with the diamond suit, as he could not afford to lose the lead. Game could be secured only by finding the king of hearts in the south hand, in which case it was necessary to lead hearts from dummy twice, which would be impossible if the clubs were made immediately.

West therefore risked the possible loss of his contract by finessing the heart at once and the rest was easy.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—The score was 0-0, no game. South dealt and had: D.—A, J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 2. H.—9, 2. C.—10. S.—J, 4, 3. He bid two diamonds, west passed, north bid two no-trump, east passed. What should south do? A. M. L.

Answer—South should have bid one diamond originally, but he should take away his partner's no-trump with three diamonds, in the situation given above.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Bridge, score 0-0. Dealer holds a "Yarborough." Should he bridge or declare spades? I supposed it was universally conceded that dealer holding a worthless hand should make it spades, unless score was desperate. I am surprised to find that Elwell [1905 edition] advises bridging in all circumstances. Some other writers class this as suicide, and say chances are 25 to 1 against such play succeeding. Is it open to argument? P. R.

Ans.—The best bridge statistician in a record kept over a term of years found that a safety declaration by dealer was unprofitable in thirteen cases out of fifteen. Extensive experiments at the Chicago Whist club with the following hand, dealer, spades, jack, 4, 3, 2, and 4, 3, 2 of each other suit, proved it to be much better to pass than to declare spades.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In straight bridge on a trump declaration [Hearts]. The leader holds A., K., 3 of spades and plays the K. Third hand drops the J. The leader decides that partner holds either the Q or is out and will use small trump and plays the 3 spot, holding the ace to control the spade suit of which there would be either 6 or 5 remaining in opponents' hands. Is not this an unwise attempt on part of third hand to echo? Would not play of 10, J. [third hand played 10 on second lead] indicate either 2 or lack of suit? Why echo when straight play is sufficient? Under what conditions is an original spade make wise? Does it not show deplorable weakness in one hand? Much more so than a spade make on passed hands, as both hands may be fair and, combined, very strong.

Is an original spade excusable with one leg lost and in first deal of second? JOHN DOE.

Answer.—An echo should never be started with a card higher than the ten. Dealer should never declare spades unless he expects to win game on the declaration.

Tomahawk, Wis.—[To the Editor.]—When a player whose declaration has been doubled wins the required number of tricks and also an additional two, are these two counted in with the contracted number at doubled value, and also at fifty additional? And are these counts both in the honor score? A. B. C.

Ans.—The declarer would score double below the line, 50 for making his contract, and 50 for each additional trick. For full explanation see page four of "Real Auction Bridge."

BETTER WILLARD TO FIGHT MORAN

Willard, even though his physical condition may be lacking, Frank Moran will face a better man on March 25 in the ring at Madison Square garden than did Jack Johnson on April 5 of last year at the Oriental race course at Havana.

To Look Over Moran.

Which will win? you ask.

No sane man would come out flatfooted and say either Willard or Moran, until the condition of the latter is thoroughly gone over. That is precisely what the writer purposes to do. The X-rays of judgment will be trained on the Pittsburgh heavyweight during the hours of his daily work, and you shall have an unbiased comparison of the two men.

Frank Moran has been elected as the logical opponent for Willard. He has done everything that the sportsmen of America have asked of him. That they have confidence in his ability is attested to by the fact that he is being paid the largest sum ever given for a ten round battle in this country.

DEFEAT JOLTS CLARK'S HOPES FOR CUE TITLE

Loses to Taberski in Pocket Tourney, 100 to 39—Layton Trims Petrie.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Playing an almost flawless game, Frank Taberski of Schenectady put a crimp in the championship aspirations of George Clark by defeating the Brooklyn expert, 100 to 39, in the second afternoon game of the world's pocket billiard series at the Inter Ocean building yesterday.

The young Polish player completed his string in seventeen innings. His victory put him in second place and forced Clark to third. He missed only three shots that could be classed as reasonably easy.

Taberski Starts Well.

Clark was anchored for the first few innings and later took one or two risks which did not pan out well. Taberski scratched on the opening shot, but ran ten in his next attempt. In the third inning he ran fourteen, making a clever combination for his fourth count. He pocketed the eleven ball, which was close to the bottom pocket, on a four ball combination from the top of the table.

Clark had to play safe and Taberski then picked up twenty-nine. His position play was not of the best, but he pocketed at least half a dozen hard shots. He failed to break the bunch and played safe.

Clark Runs Off 19 Balls.

Clark on a difficult cut shot made the ball, but scratched into a side pocket. Taberski led, 53 to 4, at the sixth inning and it looked like a runaway match until the Brooklyn player ran nineteen in his seventh inning. He missed a hard corner pocket shot for position.

When Clark missed a two ball combination in the ninth inning, Taberski practically clinched his victory with a run o seventeen, which gave him a lead of 76 to 33. Score:

Layton Trims Petrie.

John Layton of Sedalia won the opening game of the afternoon from Mike Petrie of Chicago, 100 to 47, in fifty-two innings. It was largely a defensive game for the local man, as he was not blessed with many openings. He got so used to playing safety that at the finish he made three scratches in a row, and forfeited enough balls to put Layton out.

They were on even terms at the seventeenth inning, each having 27, but the Sedalia Missourian ran 20 in the twenty-first inning and, following with 12 in the twenty-fifth, took a lead of thirty balls. Petrie's chances after these were scarce as hen's teeth. Score:

Maturo Stops Blankenship.

Jim Maturo brought joy to the men near the top by getting the verdict over Bennie Blankenship of Detroit in the opening game of the night. Staging a brilliant finish after being thirty points in arrears, the Italian player won, 100 to 81, in thirteen innings. The reverse forced the Detroit player back into a tie for first place with Clark.

Maturo missed a bunch combination on his first try, but his opponent miscued after making five, and Maturo counted twenty-one before running into a pocket. A run of thirteen in the seventh inning put him in the lead, 36 to 9. Blankenship ran twenty-seven in the ninth, missing a hard drive and spreading the balls. Maturo then gathered fifteen.

Italian Makes Great Finish.

Blankenship, with runs of twelve and twenty-eight, brought his total to 81, but Maturo in his twelfth inning ran seventeen. Blankenship risked a cinch combination and missed, and Maturo, by a fine display, went out with thirty-two, his best mark of the match. Score:

AMATEUR NINES ORGANIZE NEW NATIONAL BODY

Cincinnati, O., March 11.—The National Baseball federation, an outgrowth of the recent factional split in the National Amateur Baseball association, came into being today when delegates representing twelve cities in seven states formally organized. The federation adopted a constitution at a four hour session and adjourned.

The constitution limits the term of president to two consecutive years and specifies that "no person interested in the manufacture or sale of sporting goods shall be eligible for election to any office in the organization."

Players in Two Classes.

The members of the federation were classified thus:

A player eligible to class A is one who receives no monetary remuneration for his services as a player during the current season. A player eligible to class AA is one who does not earn a livelihood by his services as a player.

It was decided to leave the selection of the next convention city to the executive committee, which will meet when the season is over. Annual meetings must be held on the third Friday in January. Each city is to have two delegates, each delegate having a vote.

Cash from National Commission?

A resolution by Harry Heffiebein of Johnstown, Pa., calling for the appointment of a committee to call on the national commission to ask for a "munificent" donation for amateur ball players was adopted. Heffiebein said the money would be devoted to developing ball players.

W. D. Gresham of Birmingham, Ala.; W. B. Bickford of Chicago, and Sam Karpen of Dayton, O., were elected members at large on the executive committee with the four officers of the federation.

FIFTY-SIX NAGS NOMINATED FOR KENTUCKY DERBY

Whitney Lists Seven in Effort to Break Precedent by Two Straight Wins.

Louisville, Ky., March 11.—Fifty-six nominations to the 1916 Kentucky Derby were announced today by the New Louisville Jockey club. This list, while smaller than last year, comprises the best of the American turf's 3 year olds and includes twelve imported thoroughbreds.

Harry Payne Whitney, the New York sportsman, in a determined effort to land two successive Derby winners, has named seven eligibles, one of which is foreign bred. Turfmen are according him a royal chance for again shattering Derby precedent. His filly Regret, last year's winner, was the first of her sex to finish in front in the forty years' history of the event. No owner ever has sent two successive winners to the post.

The Derby this year assumes a somewhat international phase, with four of Jefferson Livingston's possible starters imported from England and Clarence H. Mackay's two candidates from France.

The Kentucky racing commission has not yet assigned dates for the different tracks, but the Derby will be run at Churchill Downs probably on May 13. It is for 3 year olds at a mile and a quarter. Ten thousand dollars has been added to the purse by the Jockey club, making the stake worth approximately $15,000. Whitney's share last year for Regret's winning effort was $11,400.

Chicago Player Takes Trophy by Beating Mrs. Moore in Close Contest.

Belleair, Fla., March 11.—[Special.]—Miss Marjorie Edwards of Chicago won the finals in the women's golf championship of Belleair today. Miss Edwards, Midlothian, defeated Mrs. J. A. Moore, Sleepy Hollow, 1 up, a large gallery following the last round of play for the orange blossom trophy.

The contenders were on even terms most of the time, but Miss Edwards played a cool, unhurried game, saving her strength for the closing holes. The victory was decided only on the last green. Shots by both players were applauded by the gallery.

Local interest centered around Mrs. A. T. Mollard of Jacksonville, Fla., a newcomer among Belleair women golfers. She played through to the finals, but was defeated by Mrs. R. L. Whitman, Myopia, 3 and 2, in the last match. Mrs. Whitman won the Bigonia cup.

With the exception of Miss Edwards all of the first day's favorites were dropped one by one, and up to the last round no one could pick the cup winners.

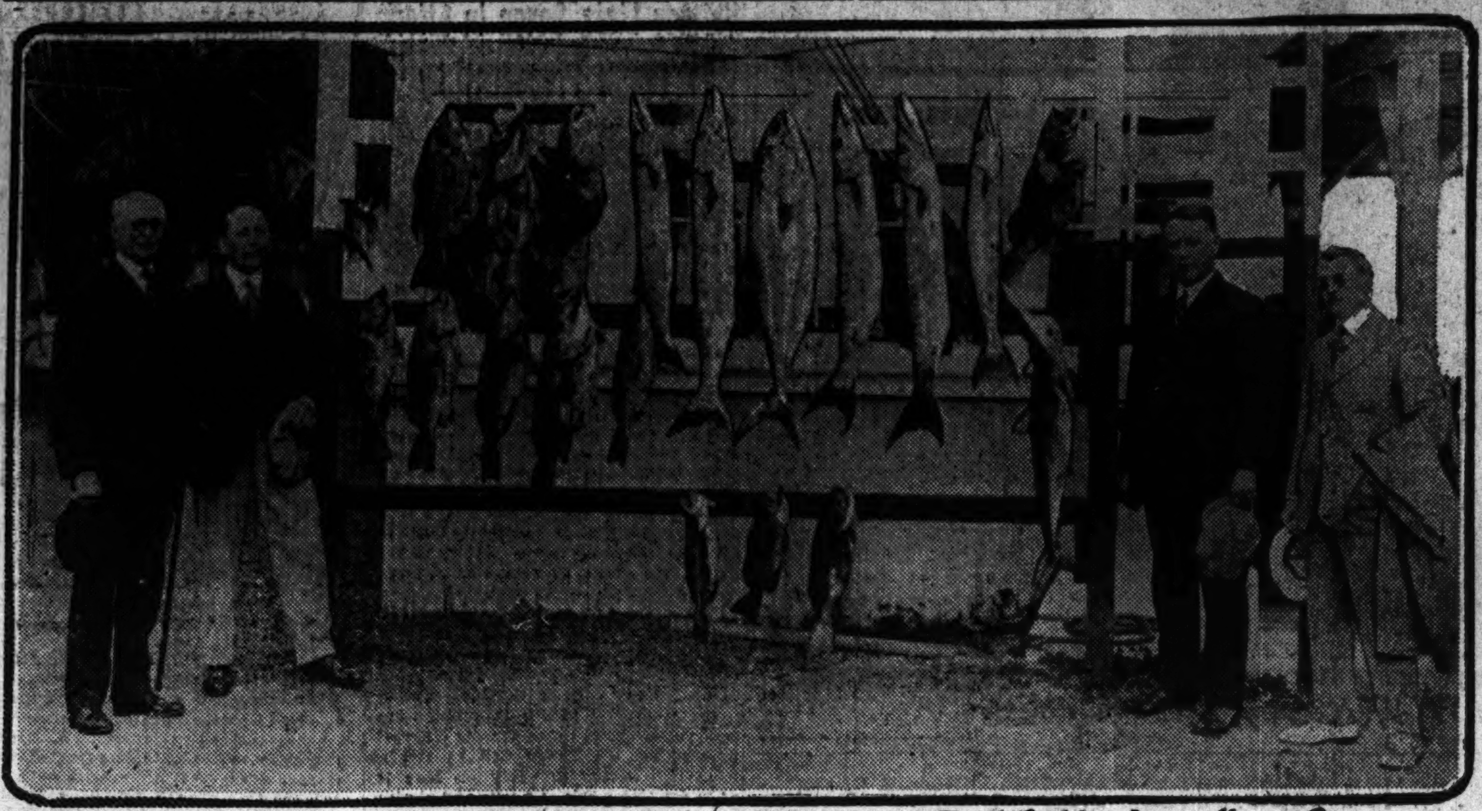
Chicago Bankers Explain "N. S. F."—"No Such Fishing"



A. K. Brown W. H. Henkle L. A. Goddard Almer Coe

WHILE fishing off Cape Florida, near Miami, recently four Chicago bankers made a record catch, consisting of eighteen amberjack, barracuda, and grouper. The largest fish, a fifty pound amberjack, was taken by W. H. Henkle, secretary of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank. Others in the party were Almer Coe, vice president of the Lake and State Savings bank; L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, and A. K. Brown of the Kenwood Trust and Savings bank.

MAROON TEAMS HOPE FOR TITLE IN TWO SPORTS

BY MAROON.

Two Big Nine championships this week is the hope of the Maroons. The conference schools meet at Evanston on Thursday and Friday for the swimming title and on Friday and Saturday for the conference indoor track championship. Chicago is the favorite over Northwestern for tank honors, but few track fans except those living on the Midway expect Stagg's athletes to repeat their 1915 indoor championship, with Wisconsin and Illinois looming up so strong.

Coach Stagg will not discuss the chances of his men, except to say that they will be in the running. He is even more laconic in giving out information than during the gridiron season. The Maroons have defeated Purdue, Northwestern, and Ohio by big scores in dual meets, but it is hard to get any real dope on the merits f different men in dual competition where they are not pressed to the limit and where the home team has a big advantage because of its familiarity with the turns on the customary small gymnasium track.

Stout's Loss Weakens Maroons.

Whether Capt. Joe Stout of the Maroons is eligible for the conference meet will greatly affect the chances of the Chicago squad. The star miler and half miler of Stagg's bunch has not been eligible for the dual meets, and it is not known whether the deans will raise his ban by the end of the week. Midway fans count on Stout for 6 points, probable seconds in both mile and half, with his ability to score a first in either event a question of whether Mason of Illinois and Harvey of Wisconsin conune their efforts to one race.

At an informal caucus around the gymnasium the track fans estimated that Chicago was good for from 25 to 30 points without Stout, which would be sufficient to win the championship in an average year. The strength of Chicago, Wisconsin, and Illinois, and the weakness of the other teams, makes it a problem to estimate the number of points required to win. The result depends on the work of new men, for the loss of Ward, Knight, Barancik, Des Jardien, Campbell, and Gorgas from last year's championship indoor squad has made Stagg work overtime to develop men.

Two Promising Dash Men.

In the sixty yard dash Agar and Pershing are certain to score unless eliminated by a bad start. Both have finished first and second in every dual meet of the year and seldom are less than a couple of feet apart. Each has beaten the other twice. Conservative fans award Chicago six points, allowing Smith of Wisconsin first call to lead the sprinters. As Bradley of Northwestern and Hohman of Illinois are a fast pair, any attempt to judge the finish order in so short a race can be counted futile.

In the hurdles the Maroons are much weaker than last year, but either Pershing or Guerin is a possibility for third or fourth. Ames of Illinois is easily the class of the conference.

Expect Middle Distance Points.

Dismond is conceded first in the quarter, for the big Negro star has not been beaten in two years. Williams of Wisconsin should give him a hard race. Cornwell of Chicago placed fourth in the quarter last year at Northwestern and is expected to do as well next Saturday.

In the half Stagg has a sophomore who has not been pressed this year and what he will do in a real race is not known. The new star is Clark. He is hitting 2:0" consistently on the Bartlett track. If Harvey of Wisconsin runs the mile first and Stout is not in the race it would not surprise south siders to see Clark lead the field. Without Stout the Maroons are weak in the mile unless Swett should grab a fourth place.

Mason May Run Twice.

It is hardly expected that Mike Mason of Illinois will start in the mile because he will have to meet Watson of Minnesota and Hedges of Wisconsin in the two mile, and that will be about all that can be expected in one evening. If Coach Gill figures that his chance of winning depend on Mason's running both long races the Illinois star undoubtedly will start twice, because he is certain to place in the two mile after winning the mile.

Whiting, on his season's form, looks about the best of the conference high jumpers, although he has gone only one inch higher than Fisher, Stagg's other leaper. The Maroons think they will place both these men and seven or eight points should come to Stagg's men in that event. Fisher and Wagner are possible candidates for third or fourth place in the pole vault, but neither is expected to go as high as Culp of Illinois or Husted of the Badgers.

In the shot put the Maroons are woefully weak and no dope of the Broad jump can be obtained because of a lack of practice on a dirt floor. Pete Russell of football fame is a fair broad jumper and may place if entered.

The Maroon relay quartet, Clark, Cornwell, Guerin, and Dismond, should score a victory on past performances.

REMINISCENCES OF THE TRACK BY AN OLD TURF FOLLOWER.

BY RALPH H. TOZER.

MARTY BERGEN, who was America's premier jockey more than one season, was about the dryest wit I ever met, and some of the Bergen tales are good for indigestion. His remarks to Starter Jim Caldwell at the post cost him enough in fines to buy a good sized business block, and one went the rounds of the press at the time.

Caldwell was tongue-lashing Marty, as usual, about trying to "beat the flag," and Marty had said nothing. Finally he got close to the old Kentucky firebrand and yelled out, "Why don't you eat a pie, Mr. Caldwell?"

"What for?" said the starter.

"To sweeten your disposition."

"I'll fine you a thousand, you imp."

"You can buy a lot of vinegar with that thousand," said Bergen, "and I wanted you to buy pie."

Marty was not much of a hand to talk, and was noted for seldom cracking a smile, but he had to laugh heartily one day at Long Branch. An old Irishman owned a notoriously bad racehorse named Duke of Leinster, and he used to put him in against the cracks of the country.

The Celt didn't seem to realize the Duke's all round lack of racing ability and truly thought he had a world beater. He persuaded Marty to ride the horse one day, and the great Tenny was in the race. After saddling the Duke up [he was 200 to 1], and getting everything to his satisfaction, he instructed Bergen as follows: "Lay wid Tinny to de head o' de stretch, and den coom away."

It was reported that this was the first time Marty had smiled in six months, but he was laughing himself into a state of collapse as he went out on the track to finish about a sixteenth of a mile behind "Tinny."

Speaking of Marty Bergen's fines makes me think of one of "Irish Tom" Maguire's stories. He was visiting at White Plains one summer and a "scrub" race meeting was about to begin. The starter, one of the Keeley-cureites, "broke out" the day the meeting was to open, and Tom was implored by the management to do the starting, as he had been around racetracks for many moons and looked the best starting "prospect" there at the time.

A lot of old dead broke, hairy "hasbeen" jocks were there to ride. All knew Tom around the New York tracks, and thinking he was a good natured fellow, would come winging at the gates. Tom stood it a few times from one of his Methusaleh friends and when he tried the "come-a-runnin'" stunt once more Tom said, "Jock, if you try that again I'll fine you a thousand."

"Well, boss," said Noah's chum, "ef you fine me a thousan' you'll fine me broke."

"White Hat" McCarty had a horse named Tiburon, along about 1889, and there was and still is a ferry boat of that name running on San Francisco bay. Before taking the horse east Dan told his brother Jack to mortgage his suspenders to bet on the supposed Hindoo when he wired him from the east, "The boat starts."

The long looked for telegram came about a month after Dan arrived in New York, and Jack got his month's salary advanced at Palo Alto farm, borrowed all he could of his blacksmith and "horsey" friends around the famous farm, and went to Platt's hall in "the city," betting every cent he could lay hands on on "the boat."

Dan listened intently to the description in the poolroom, and Tiburon failed ingloriously to even be "in the money." He borrowed "six bits" of the poolroom proprietor and telegraphed Dan: "The boat sank."

"White Hat's" win of $9,900 on the 50 to 1 shot, Ban Chief, at Washington park is worth retelling, as an absolute fact. McCarty had been betting 'em up in thousands after C. H. Todd won the American Derby and made him a rich man, and most of his wagering was done with the late Marcus Cartwright of Nashville, Tenn., one of the big operators around Chicago.

Mac was going down one of the aisles from a seat near the top of the grandstand and got about four or five steps down on his way to the betting ring, when he heard a sweet voice pipe out, "O. Mr. McCarty, please come here!"

Dan looked around and saw a pretty young woman that he never remembered seeing before, but as the turfman always had a strong leaning toward fair femininity, he went over. The lady said, "O, Mr. Mac, I want to ask a favor of you."

"All right," said the gallant turfman, "always pleased to do a good looking lady a favor. What can I do for you?"

"Please put this $2 on Ban Chief for me."

Dan went up to Marcus and, owing to the small sized wager, whispered in Cartwright's ear: "Two dollars on Ban Chief."

Marcus thought 'twould be a good "josh" on the plunger to tell of the "piking" bet, so he bawled out, "$100 to $2, Ban Chief, for 'White Hat' McCarthy, the great California plunger."

"Who in h—— said anything about $2, you lobster," returned Mac, "$200 was what I said."

"Oh," said Cartwright to the bystander, "pardon me, Mr. McCarthy, make it $10,000 to $200."

When Ban Chief won by a head (as "the dope" will show) it was a fine case of the joker being joked with vengeance.

Tremont was a black horse that never knew defeat, and some folks still think he was America's "best ever." Hindoo was a dark bay horse that was a racing wonder, who met with but few defeats. "He's a Hindoo" is a byword meaning greatness in man or horse.

A northern racetrack "coon" making his first trip to New Orleans went into the white section of a street car, sitting alongside a white lady. The conductor immediately appeared on the scene and said, "Nigger, move back into the 'Jim Crow.' You're not allowed in this part of the car." The darky went back mumbling that "this was sho' a strange place."

The car went a few blocks when a fezzed-up Hindoo came in the white section of the car and sat down alongside the same lady, without any remonstrance from the conductor.

"How come it you don't make dat ah niggah move, same as yo' did me?" he said to the conductor.

"He ain't a nigger. He's a Hindoo."

"Well," said the "coon," "ef he's a Hindoo I's a 'Tremont.'"

SOCCER ELEVENS TO MEET TODAY

With anything like firm footing the Packards of Detroit and the Pullman eleven are expected to produce a fast and close match when they clash this afternoon at Pullman in the third round of the national amateur soccer championship. The automobile men were seen here last winter, when they defeated the McDuffs in the national series, and, although it was a snowy field, they won largely by reason of their speed.

Pullman will present the same lineup as it had two weeks ago against the McDuffs and with Chris Cartwright in his old position at inside left the car builders will have their scoring machine intact. The team is as strong as it has been at any time in recent years. Play will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Several local teams also have matches booked for this afternoon, the Campbell Rovers meeting the Chicago Americans at Fifty-second avenue and Madison street. The Corinthians will play the Caledonians in a league game at Sixty-fourth and Racine avenue, and the Hungarians meet the Mohawks at Forty-second and Chicago avenues.

CHICAGOAN TIES SINGLES LEADER IN PIN TOURNEY

Harry Patterson Bowls 660 in Toledo Meet—Third Place to Phil Wolf.

Toledo, O., March 11.—[Special.]—Harry Patterson of the Ellis alleys of Chicago rolled into a tie for first place in the singles of the American Bowling congress on a late shift today, equaling the 660 mark set by Pete Brunnett of Cleveland two days ago. Patterson's ride to the top was a study exhibition, with 234 his high game. A spare after five strikes in his last game kept him from going into the lead.

Phil Wolf, another Chicago man, tied for third place with 632, while Al Lea landed 623. Lea is [illegible] in the all events to Pete Brunnett. He has 1,811, seven points short of the Cleveland man.

Confident Bowler Meets a Tartar

BILLIE LEE, who still can point with pride to his skill as scatterer of the timber, gained fame years ago as a member of the "Shrimp" bowling team of Lee and Steele. Later he accepted a position at Pittsburgh, where he remained several years. During his absence Joe Chouinard, a young south side player, sprang into prominence, performing great feats on the old America alleys on Thirty-first street, which then were operated by Gus Steele.

Lee was visiting his old home and was watching Steele play billiards when Chouinard blew in, and in his usual breezy manner offered to roll anyone in the house for $10. No response being made, he increased his challenge to $20. Steele was too busy with the ivories to accept the defi, but suggested that his friend might play, no introduction being given.

The principals adjourned to the alley, Chouinard marking J. on the score sheet and Lee signing B. underneath. Lee won the first game and Joe suggested another. In the middle of the second frame P. J. Maddigan, a Thirty-first street merchant, entered and seeing the bantam from Pittsburgh, ejaculated:

"Why, Billie Lee, how are you?"

"What," said Joe, "am I bowling Billie Lee?" "Sure," said Steele. They finished the game and once more Joe encountered a deficit.

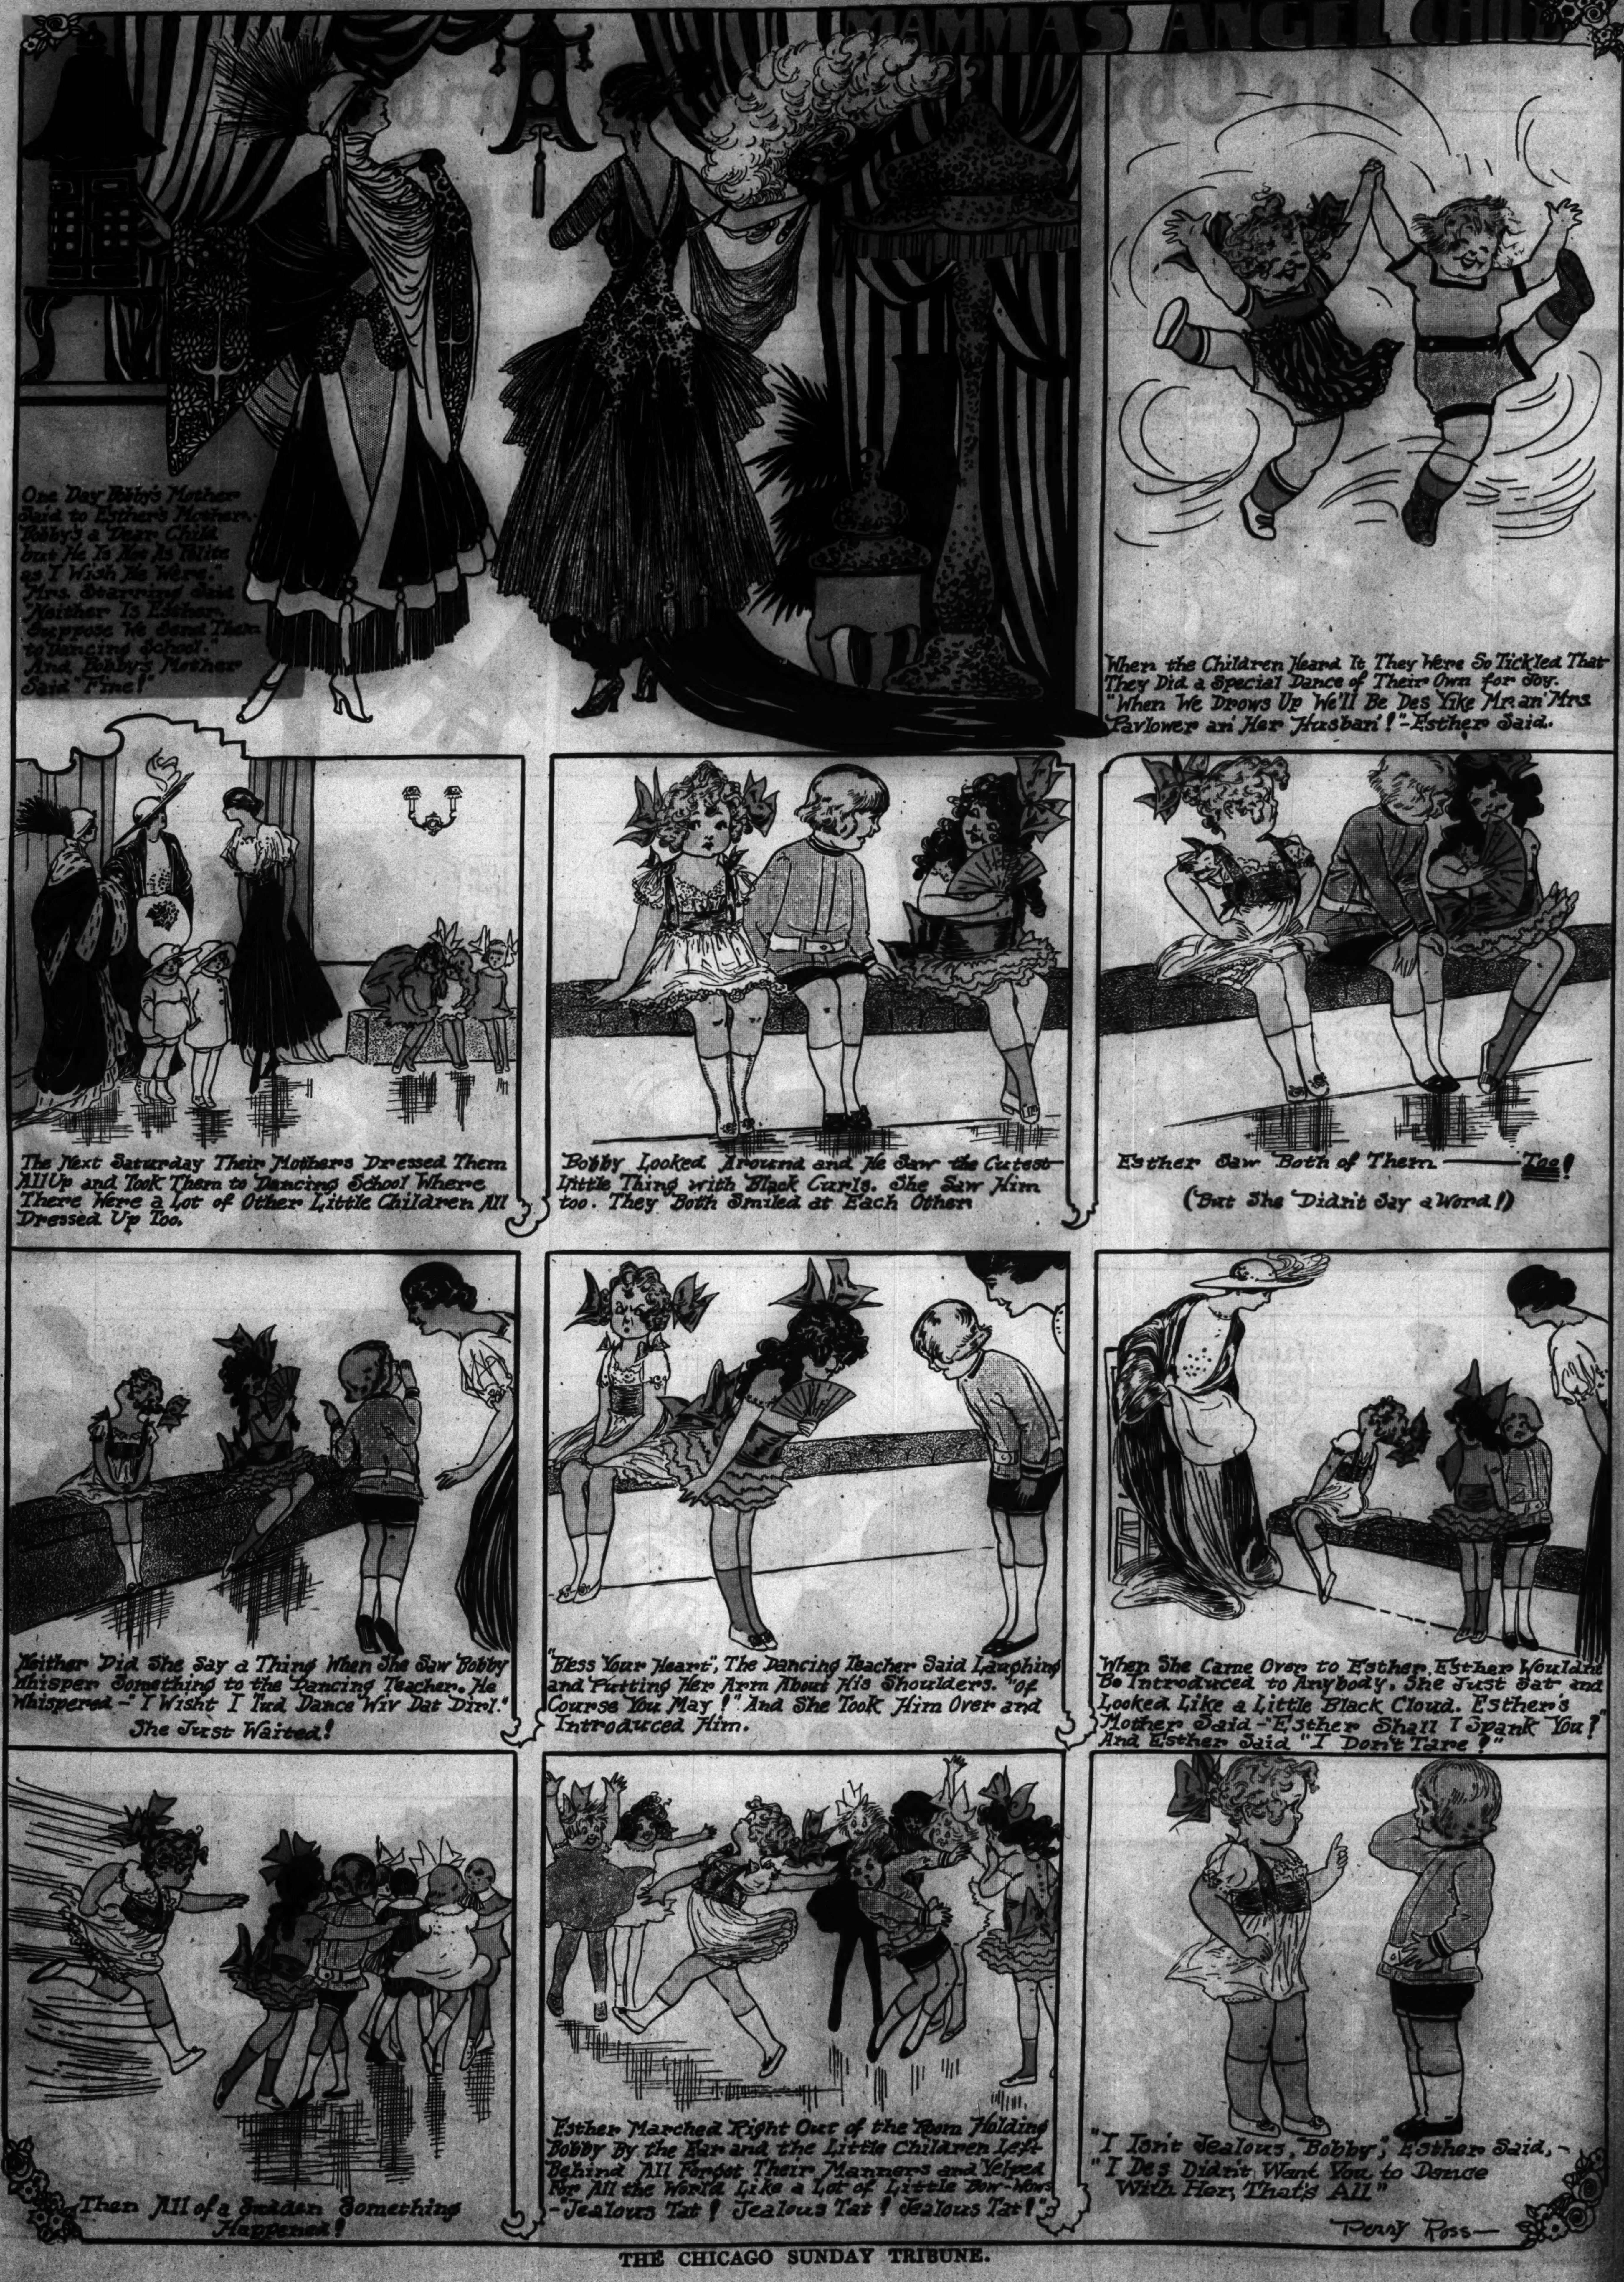
MAMMA'S ANGEL CHILD



One Day Bobby's Mother Said to Esther's Mother, "Bobby's a Dear Child but He Is Not As Polite as I Wish He Were." Mrs. Starring Said "Neither Is Esther. Suppose We Send Them to Dancing School." And Bobby's Mother Said "Fine!"

When the Children Heard It They Were So Tickled That They Did a Special Dance of Their Own for Joy. "When We Drows Up We'll Be Des Yike Mr. an' Mrs Pavlower an' Her Husban'!" - Esther Said.

The Next Saturday Their Mothers Dressed Them All Up and Took Them to Dancing School Where There Were a Lot of Other Little Children All Dressed Up Too.

Bobby Looked Around and He Saw the Cutest Little Thing with Black Curls. She Saw Him too. They Both Smiled at Each Other.

Esther Saw Both of Them —— Too!

(But She Didn't Say a Word!)

Neither Did She Say a Thing When She Saw Bobby Whisper Something to the Dancing Teacher. He Whispered - "I Wisht I Tud Dance Wiv Dat Dirl."

She Just Waited!

"Bless Your Heart", The Dancing Teacher Said Laughing and Putting Her Arm About His Shoulders. "Of Course You May!" And She Took Him Over and Introduced Him.

When She Came Over to Esther, Esther Wouldn't Be Introduced to Anybody. She Just Sat and Looked Like a Little Black Cloud. Esther's Mother Said - "Esther Shall I Spank You?" And Esther Said "I Don't Tare!"

Then All of a Sudden Something Happened!

Esther Marched Right Out of the Room Holding Bobby By the Ear and the Little Children Left Behind All Forgot Their Manners and Yelped For All the World Like a Lot of Little Bow-Wows - "Jealous Tat! Jealous Tat! Jealous Tat!"

"I Isn't Jealous, "Bobby", Esther Said, - "I Des Didn't Want You to Dance With Her, That's All"

Reproduced from a Painting by DUVERGER

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By ANNE ELLIS.

TRAGEDY is no longer the black hooded figure of weeping womanhood. Tragedy is a child, a motherless child. This is the second morning of tragedy; since yesterday the world has been changed. It all began with a noise in the hall that woke him out of his sleep. First there were wheels and the closing of the door, then footsteps and strange voices, and father's voice, excited and quavering. Then hurryings and whisperings and a subdued clatter, and then he cried and cried louder, but nobody came. Usually when he cried in the night there were mother's arms to materialize out of the darkness and then a cookie and more sleep. But now there were only tears and more tears, till from sheer exhaustion he fell asleep.

When he awoke again it was morning and he thought he must have had a bad dream the night before, until he paddled down the hall as usual to mother's door. And there, at the very door sill, he found sitting the stranger lady, and before he could think she took his hand and whisked him into the kitchen and set before him bread and milk and called him "little man" and commanded him to eat. As if a boy could eat in his own kitchen with a stranger lady and no mother about, and so he tells the stranger lady that his name's not "little man." And then his tears begin to fall. In the midst of wiping them the stranger lady is called away and he sits in his kitchen alone and looks through his tears at his little bare toes and remembers that he must never have breakfast before he's all washed and dressed—mother doesn't do it that way.

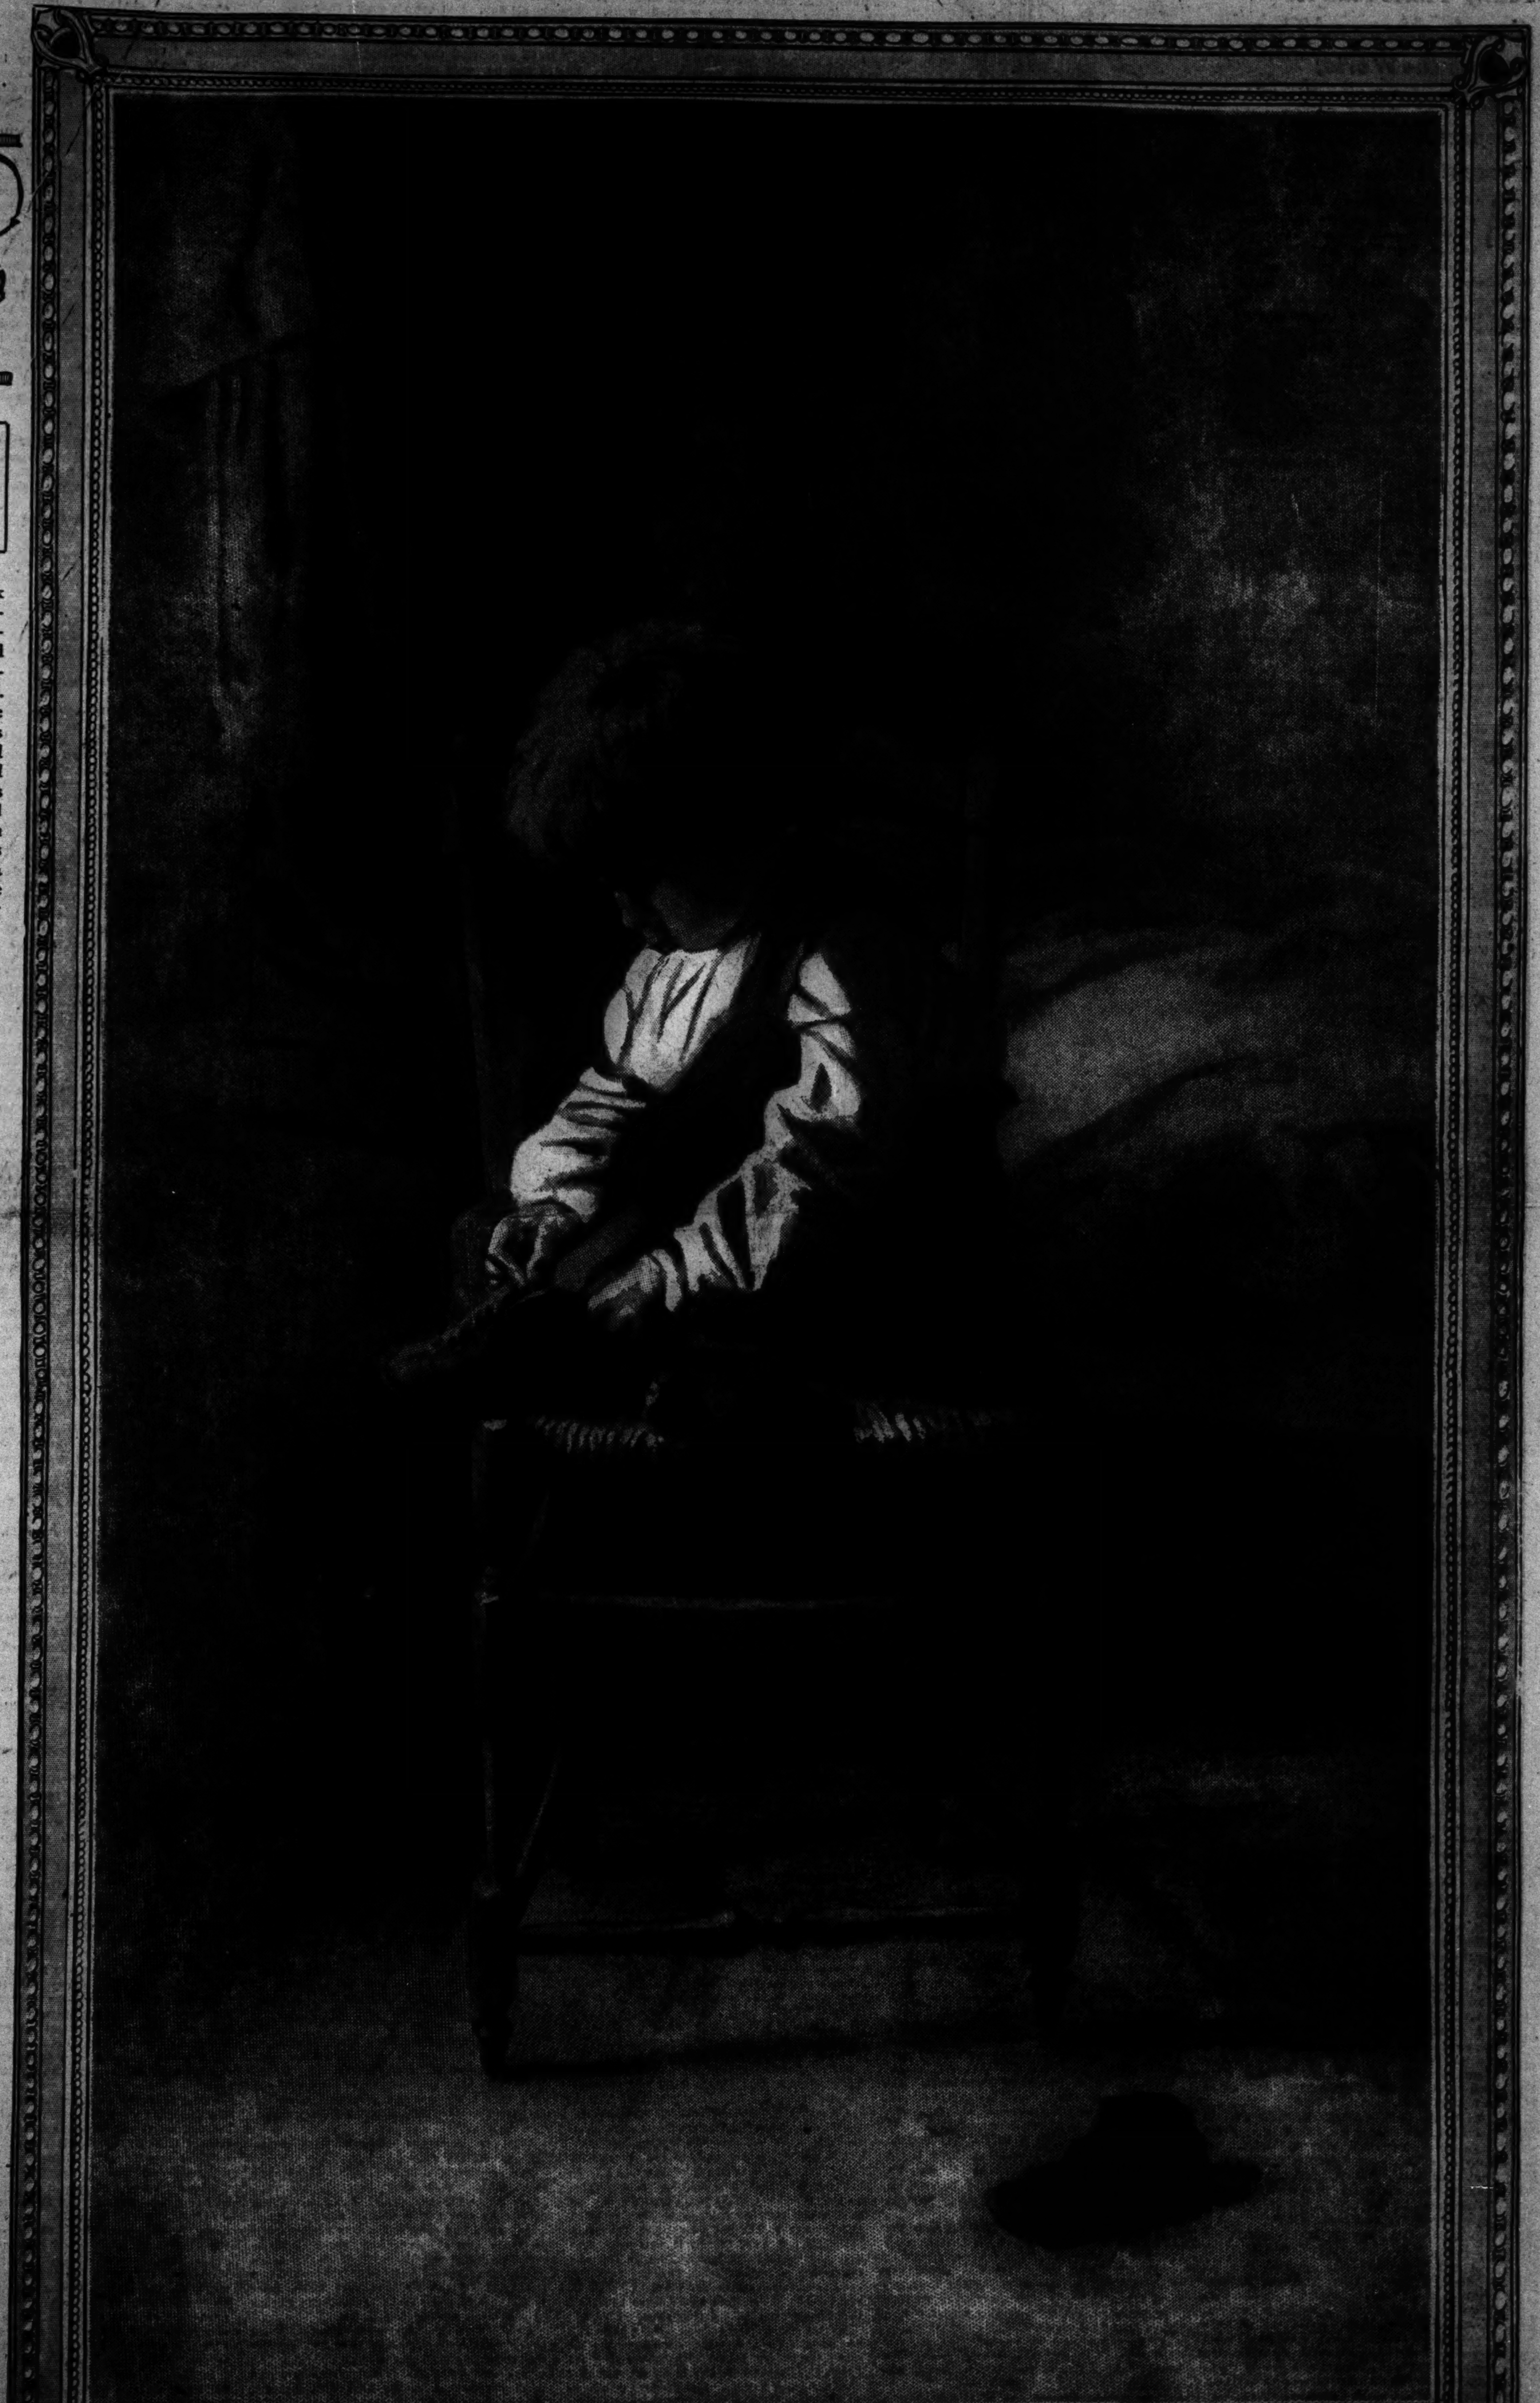
And so the long day wears away. The stranger lady dressed him and sent him out to play, and put her arm around him when he called for mother, and gave him his soup at noon and a cookie, too. And every time he got a chance he ran up the stairs and stood before mother's door, afraid to go in, afraid to stay out, and listened—and heard a subdued fluttering. And the stranger lady found him and took him into her arms and he cried on her breast and so came to know that she was a mother, too. And finally evening came and he was brought into the kitchen again, and there was father, sitting at the table with his head buried in his arms. And he went to father and stood beside him a long time unheeded, and finally pulled at his sleeve. And father looked up—and for a moment he wondered if it was father after all—this man with the stern white face, who crushed him in his arms a moment and then hid his head on the table again.

It was the stranger lady who carried him upstairs and fed him in his bed and put him to sleep and stayed with him long after darkness came. And now it is light again and the stranger lady hasn't appeared, and so he's struggling into his shoes with the wakening memories of yesterday swarming around to fill this new day with terror.

And whether they've taken his mother over the hill where the sun sets, or whether it's only that newer, tinier, frailer little hands have usurped the place of his about her neck—whether it is the angel of death or the angel of life that has crossed his doorsill, they are equally cruel for a time. It's all one to him—and while he's alone he is the figure of tragedy. The playwrights may wander over the world looking for the stuff from which dramas are made, they may touch the triangle, sudden death, poverty, murder, disgrace, suicide, but they will never come closer to real tragedy than when they see a motherless child struggling with his shoe lace, helpless and alone.

This picture by Theophile Duverger, though only about ten by seven inches in the original, has bestowed upon the artist more fame than any other one of his canvases. He was purely a painter of genre pictures, which, in France, if one is skillful, is to be famous. He was a lover of rich color and saw in the simple incidents of home life a never ending store of dramatic interest. He loved to paint small pictures of concentrated strength and pathos. He made his first success at the Paris salon in 1853. His pictures have gained a wide popularity in prints. "The Laborer and His Children" hangs in the Luxembourg, and "A Visit of Charity" is in the Walters Art gallery in Baltimore. "Alone" is in the Guildhall Art gallery, London.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



TAWDRY STREET by Harold MacGrath

"Tawdry Street! How Many Times Had He Seen It, Here and There, Across the World; Localities Once Respectable, Like the Present Inhabitants."

MARLEY'S thirty-five milestones had left upon his face only the imprint of earnestness, accentuated by a leanness which signified endure; sun tanned and wind bitten it would always remain, sailor-wise. During twenty of these milestones he had criss-crossed the globe many times in his pursuit of fortune. The fickle jade (or is she merely capricious?) had led him over seas and deserts, through forests and jungles. He had not seen even a wisp of that veil which men say covers the face. One day, when he had paused panting and dishevelled from the chase, as it were, she had come up from behind and touched him on the shoulder. It is one of her tricks to double on her pursuers.

There lay upon her palm neither gold, nor pearls, nor brilliants. Indeed, it was nothing more valuable than an ink pot. All he had to do, she said, was to take out the cork, and there you were. Pop! Fame and money! Odd, wasn't it, that he who had hunted the sea floors for true orients, the hearts of mountains for bright metals and glittering stones, should find what he sought in a common ink pot!

A playwright, with a dependable bank account as his future buckler, and all of it due to one of those incredible twists of fate which defy analysis! Penniless, half broken in spirit, he had recklessly applied for the position of amanuensis to a politician who was gadding about the country, haranguing the people upon their passivity under the heel of plutocracy; publicly, rather a bombastic individual, but in private a kindly, generous man. Upon a certain day Marley had diffidently announced to his benefactor that he had written a play during his leisure hours. Promptly the orator had taken it to a managerial friend of his, who with equal promptness had returned it, but with a mead of praise and some illuminating advice. The second manager accepted it. It was produced. It ran for a year. The world became a fairyland, a place of unrealities; for he was not blind to the fact that it was all pure luck.

Singularly enough, the play had found no gateway into New York. A Chinese wall of prejudice surrounds that mad city. The countersign is money. If you have none you cannot enter. Success, to be recognized in New York, must be made there; all things from without are considered spurious.

Tomorrow night, Monday, New York was to see what he could do, what he knew about humanity, whether he saw Truth squarely, or obliquely, whether his vehicle of expression was trite or fresh. At the dress rehearsal the night before every one had been letter perfect. But the smoothness of dress rehearsals may deceive the most astute of stage managers. The ease with which the four acts had gone to the climax worried the dramatist. Stage folk have a good many superstitions, among these being this one—that perfect dress rehearsals presage perfect failures. Well, Tuesday morning would tell; the jury of critics would bring in the verdict.

Marley stood irresolutely in the ornate lobby of that palace of the transients, shortly removed from Broadway, and pulled at his crisp mustache. He was fidgety and nervous and lonesome, as lonesome as he had ever been in all his wanderings. He longed for the rhythmic beat of a ten foot propeller under his feet, the cool winds blowing down the deserts, the creak of the punka, the jolly crowd on the veranda, and a Chinese boy to watch and wait upon his slightest wish; anywhere in the wide world but New York. The curtained shop windows, the blank, supercilious faces of the dwellings, the comparatively deserted sidewalks.

Miss Chartres, the star, had left orders not to be disturbed under any circumstances. She needed absolute quiet for the ordeal of the tomorrow. If he could have gone over to her apartment, talked with the charming, intelligent, broad minded young woman, why, his cares would have gone down the northeaster which was making men turn up their coat collars this late October day.

What should he do? Where should he go? He wasn't hungry, but he realized that he was in need of food, having breakfasted on fruit and strong coffee and lunched on the enormous Sunday editions of the newspapers. Resolutely he drew on his gloves, settled his hat, and ran the gamut of the rustling corridor. He would dine at one of the famous restaurants. He would hunt an adventure, knowing well that he would be disillusioned as aforetime.

The one person who could have calmed his adventurous spirit—what a consummate actress she was on the stage, and what a surprisingly human individual off! She never took into consideration that she was one of the most beautiful women on the stage anywhere. Once she had her lines she lived them. And tomorrow night he was to take away her beauty, to give her a part which not one actress in a thousand would have cared to play—a fallen woman, not the silk wrapped and sable shielded, but the after time, the sordid, and the tawdry. And last night he, who knew every line, movement, purpose, forgot that he was in a theater.

A gust of wind, rough and bullyish, swooped round the corner, nearly sweeping his hat from his head. He strode on uptown. How he hated these temperate winters, mild one day, freezing the next, never two days alike.

In compelling, red letters, three feet in height, it ran across the boarding in front of a new excavation over the way. He paused; a tingle of pleasure ran through him. All over town, up and down Broadway, in the suburbs, on barrels, newstands, in windows, he had seen it, never failing to stir his wonder and satisfaction.

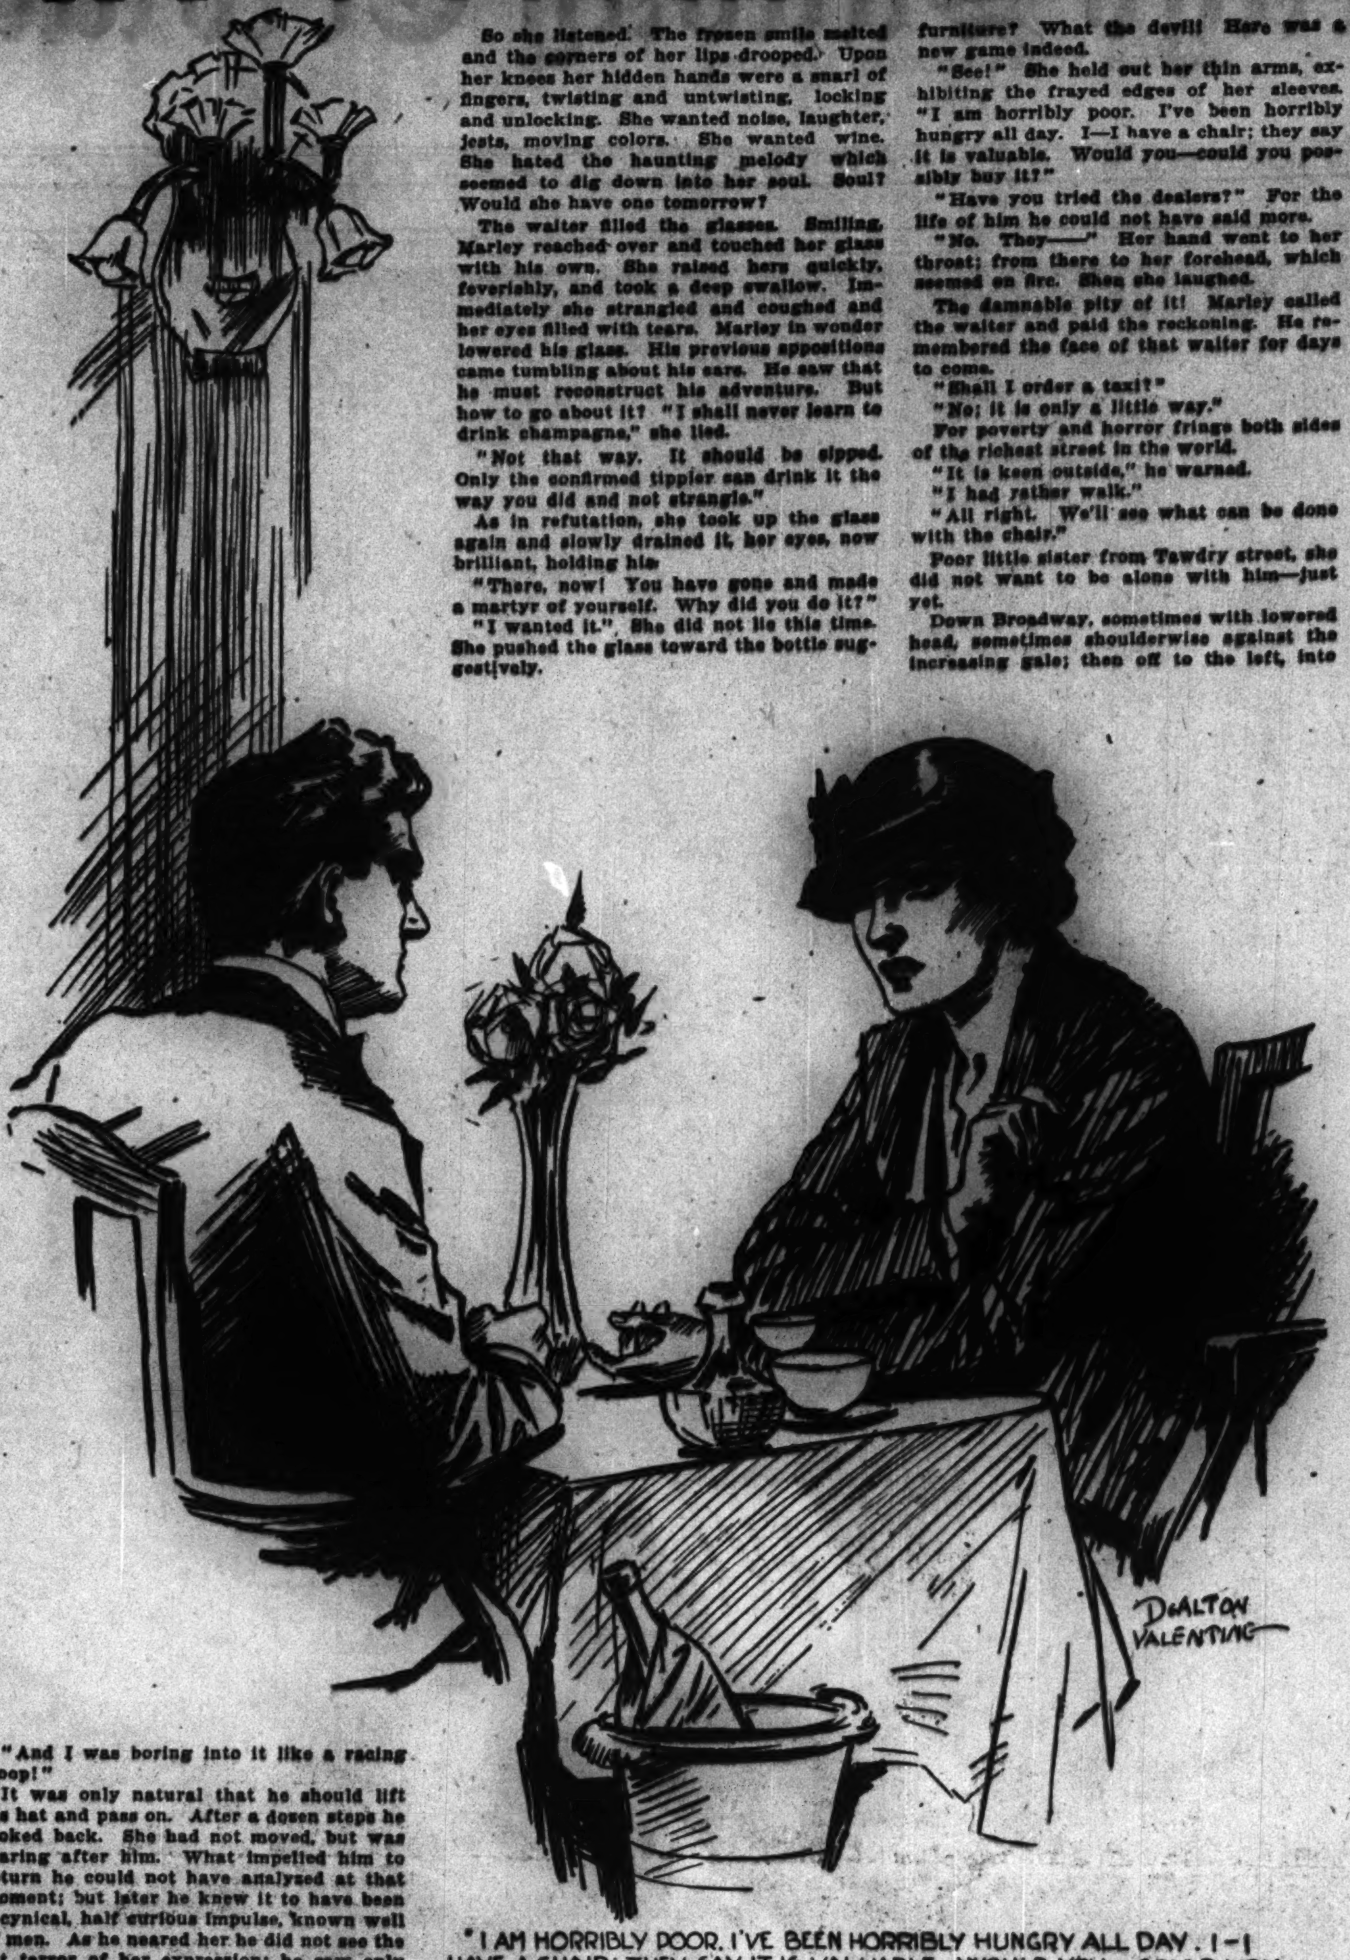
MARY CHARTRES IN "TAWDRY STREET," BY JOHN MARLEY.

And Tuesday morning, what then?

Mary Chartres. It was her own name, no makeshift for the delectation of a public who loved euphonism in surnames on programs and boardings. Mary was not only noble and historic; it was endearing to him because it had been his mother's name. She was six years his junior, and yet he recognised that beside her he was as an awkward, diffident child. Danger? Well, let it be so.

"I beg your pardon!" he cried. He caught the young woman by the arm as she struggled to maintain her balance. "Stupid of me! I hope I haven't hurt you?"

"No." The negative was very faint. "The wind was blowing so hard."



"I AM HORRIBLY POOR. I'VE BEEN HORRIBLY HUNGRY ALL DAY. I—I HAVE A CHAIR; THEY SAY IT IS VALUABLE. WOULD YOU—COULD YOU POSSIBLY BUY IT?"

"And I was boring into it like a racing sloop!"

It was only natural that he should lift his hat and pass on. After a dozen steps he looked back. She had not moved, but was staring after him. What impelled him to return he could not have analyzed at that moment; but later he knew it to have been a cynical, half curious impulse, known well of men. As he neared her he did not see the set terror of her expression; he saw only the smile which broke it, a smile of invitation, and God alone knew how she contrived to bring it there.

"I simply had to come back. You looked so lonely."

"I am," she replied, the smile still on her lips.

"Then there are two of us. I don't know half a dozen souls in New York, and not one to dine with on Sunday night. What's to hinder you from joining me?"

"Nothing in the world."

Rather dazed at his audacity, he failed to note the absence of that bold gayety which is the stock in trade of the women of this quarter. He looked about him. Across the way he saw a Babylonian palace of jaded appetites, warm with shaded lamps and inviting. So he tucked her arm under his and led her across the street.

Well groomed, erect, with an authoritative manner which waiters the world over are quick to detect, he had no difficulty in obtaining a table in the balcony near the orchestra. He ordered dinner without hesitance, without consulting the girl.

"Cocktail?" he said.

"No."

"Burgundy or champagne?"

"Champagne."

Marley shrugged unconsciously. It was impossible to teach women to differentiate the quality in wines. To them champagne was the alpha and omega. He ordered a vintage, to be brought on at once, and dismissed the waiter.

The remarkable thing about the human eye is this: Eye travels to eye instantly, instinctively, without premeditation. It is perhaps, the soul seeking soul through the fog of visual things. His glance, on the way to her eyes, paused and rested at her hands. They hung upon the edge of the table, locked together, white knuckled, tense. Then, into her eyes, large and purple brown, he plunged the search of his own. No bold beauty here; something infinitely pathetic instead. That swift, discerning pity, which is one of the attributes of genius, leaped into his heart, but outwardly he gave no sign. She scarcely was more than 30. Happiness would have made her beautiful. She was thinly and shabbily dressed; her fingers were ringless; there was not even a trinket on her throat. He saw the dingy pawnships. Had he not stolen into them at night, many and many a time? What a devil of a world it was!

Her face was like a mask, but not so her hands. To his keen eyes those ivory knuckles were as eloquent as speech. He had come for a harmless frolic; instead, he found himself sitting opposite the saddest tragedy of the ages.

She on her part sustained the unintentionally brutal appraisement, her lips still twisted in a smile. "Am I agreeable?"

"Eh?" With an effort he thrust the "scene" and the dramatist out of his mind and faced the actualities, mentally reserving, however, the right to play a part. "You have beautiful eyes."

"It's about all I have left."

"Drop your hands from the table," he said, "and listen to the music. It is 'Kamennoi-Ostrow.'"

Her hands slipped out of sight. For a moment the smile wavered. "Why did you ask me to do that?"

"Some day I'll tell you."

"Some day? There isn't any such thing. Nor tomorrow."

"Yes, there is. There are great big tomorrows. But listen!"

So she listened. The frozen smile melted and the corners of her lips drooped. Upon her knees her hidden hands were a snarl of fingers, twisting and untwisting, locking and unlocking. She wanted noise, laughter, jests, moving colors. She wanted wine. She hated the haunting melody which seemed to dig down into her soul. Soul? Would she have one tomorrow?

The waiter filled the glasses. Smiling, Marley reached over and touched her glass with his own. She raised hers quickly, feverishly, and took a deep swallow. Immediately she strangled and coughed and her eyes filled with tears. Marley in wonder lowered his glass. His previous appositions came tumbling about his ears. He saw that he must reconstruct his adventure. But how to go about it? "I shall never learn to drink champagne," she lied.

"Not that way. It should be sipped. Only the confirmed tippler can drink it the way you did and not strangle."

As in refutation, she took up the glass again and slowly drained it, her eyes, now brilliant, holding his.

"There, now! You have gone and made a martyr of yourself. Why did you do it?"

"I wanted it." She did not lie this time. She pushed the glass toward the bottle suggestively.

"No. I'm not going to let you have any more."

"Please!"

"I warn you, it will not have pleasant effects."

"I want it."

"Very well." He tipped the bottle reluctantly. He began to feel confused. He had no doubt that fundamentally it was the old story, the tawdry old story so well known to man. The adventure had begun tritely enough, but her looks, the tone of her voice, the test of the wine, all caused him to re-about his angle of vision. Instead of bidding her good night at the door he was determined to see the adventure to its end.

Further speculation was interrupted by the arrival of the dinner.

"Good Lord!" he thought. "She's hungry."

There was no dawdling. She ate with the haste and impatience of the starving. Poor little thing! She was starved. Many times he himself had known hunger. He could not keep his eyes off her. And when at length she relaxed and sat back she looked across the table in astonishment, as if she had forgotten all about him. The old tension reasserted itself. It came back into her hands, and there was now some of it in her eyes. Those who are the most reckless and fearless are generally underfed.

The golden beads in her glass were dying away, unnoticed.

"Coffee?" he asked.

"A large cup, please."

It was served.

"May I smoke?"

"Why not?"

He lighted a cigar and proceeded to get the coal going well. "Now, tell me honestly and truthfully, wasn't that the first glass of champagne you ever tasted?"

"Do I look like one who never tasted champagne before?" she said evasively.

"You not only look it, but act it. How long since you have had anything to eat?"

"Like this?" with a gesture toward the empty dishes. "Years and years and years."

"No, no. I mean, when did you last eat?"

"Last night."

She had made a mistake. This was not the kind of a man she had set out to find. She did not want kindness, pity, sympathy. She wanted a noisy, rollicking, wine drinking man, who would serve to harden her heart, to keep in flame the terrible defiance which had made her go into the street this night. Her hands began knotting and twisting again. She mustn't let down, she mustn't! The trifling exhilaration of the first glass of wine was gone. She reached out for the bottle, but he caught her hand.

"Take my word for it, it will only give you a frightful headache. Better try another cup of coffee."

"I want the wine, Mr. Man. I want it, want it!" What man could have plumbed the desperation behind that smile of hers?

He let her have her way. This time she drank it like a finished tippler. She set down the empty goblet with a flourish—and broke it. Somewhere she had read that this was a sign of gayety. She glanced carelessly at the wreckage, then laid her arms upon the table, and leaned across. It must be now. Something within her was dying, she knew, but it must be now.

"Are—are you interested in old furniture?" she asked.

"Old furniture?" He was nonplused, but he managed to say: "Of a kind." Old furniture? What the devil! Here was a new game indeed.

"See!" She held out her thin arms, exhibiting the frayed edges of her sleeves. "I am horribly poor. I've been horribly hungry all day. I—I have a chair; they say it is valuable. Would you—could you possibly buy it?"

"Have you tried the dealers?" For the life of him he could not have said more.

"No. They——" Her hand went to her throat; from there to her forehead, which seemed on fire. Then she laughed.

The damnable pity of it! Marley called the waiter and paid the reckoning. He remembered the face of that waiter for days to come.

"Shall I order a taxi?"

"No; it is only a little way."

For poverty and horror fringe both sides of the richest street in the world.

"It is keen outside," he warned.

"I had rather walk."

"All right. We'll see what can be done with the chair."

Poor little sister from Tawdry street, she did not want to be alone with him—just yet.

Down Broadway, sometimes with lowered head, sometimes shoulderwise against the increasing gale; then off to the left, into one of the side streets, the girl guided the man. Brick and brownstone, perfectly respectable, if outward appearances went for anything, like certain people who move daily among us.

Marley walked beside her, speechless and miserably depressed. It was a damnable world. He longed for the cleanness of the sea, the desert, anywhere but this habitat of the human pack. Stealing a glance at her, he caught the profile as they passed a light across the way. He could have sworn on his oath that she was as innocent as a babe; that, or else she was the shrewdest, subtlest of her kind.

And then his shoulder struck hers. She had stopped.

"It is here," she said, her voice dry and thin.

Marley saw a cardboard, dingy and broken, propped rakishly in the corner of a window—"Boarding." And now that he recollected the impressions he had subconsciously taken along the way there had been many signs like this; here and there a cracked window, a broken grill, a tottering window balustrade, a tumbled ash can in the gutter. Tawdry street! How many times he had seen it, here and there, across the world; localities once respectable, like the present inhabitants. And what would Mary Chartres say when he told her? Ah, should he tell her? It was quite possible that she might not see the adventure as he saw it. Women, the best of them, were full of illogical arguments.

The girl went up the steps, heavily and slowly. Marley followed. She opened the door, which was not locked. The hall was unlighted save for a pale yellow aureola at the top of the first landing, revealing that somewhere up above was a half turned gas jet. It was just as cold as out on the street, except that the wind did not blow here. And there was that repellent odor which comes from a hodge-podge of vegetables, cooked overlong. In warrens like this people could eat and sleep and live! Marley shrugged.

"How far up do we have to go?"

"The third floor." As she spoke she stumbled against the first step. The quick arm of the man prevented her from falling.

"A little more light wouldn't hurt. I suppose the landlady is of an economical turn of mind."

"She is generous enough with some things," ominously.

Banter died within him. The ascent began. Marley took short breaths in a vain effort to evade the stale odors, to which there was now added that of agitated dust. Since when had soap and water been known on those stairs? Presently three leaking gas jets joined the diversity of smells. Marley, smiling grimly, admitted that not even the Lady of the Cyprian Isle could have lured him to the top of these three flights of creaking, whispering stairs.

Over there, a little way beyond, were other women, in silks and furs and glittering crystals; laughter and music and fine wines and delicious foods; while sin and penury crouched in the dark side streets, biding their time.

The girl hesitated at the threshold and leaned her weight upon the door knob. Conscious, wondered Marley. He was wrong. She was making the final call to her will. He heard her cross the floor. A match crackled and flared. He saw a cot in one corner, an oil cooking stove in another, a single chair, and a kitchen table. There was a door leading to another room. Across the threshold ran a thread of light. The door to the hall blew shut and the girl faced him.

"There is no chair. I brought you here——" Suddenly she flung her arm over her eyes and leaned against the table. "Dear God, I can't, I can't!"

The cry would have stirred pity in the heart of Attila. Marley sprang to her side. "You poor little thing! Don't you suppose I understand? All men are not bad. What's the trouble? Tell me all about it, and if a little money and a little kindness will help they are yours for the asking."

Some one was coming up the stairs. Marley turned, facing the door. The sound of the steps ceased, to be followed at once by a sharp rap. Marley laid his finger against his lips warningly. For the first time he sensed a doubt. Could he be wrong, after all? Was it to resolve into the sordid old story of the husband returning unexpectedly, who would demand money as a balm to his injured feelings? But wait! If a man entered, Marley was determined to pommel him within an inch of his life. The rapping became authoritative. Then the knob rattled and the door opened unceremoniously. Over the threshold stepped a woman; or, to be more precise, a female. Her cold, shallow glance sped past the man and rested upon the girl.

"Well, have you got it?"

Once before, in the purlieus of Singapore, in the Street of the Numbered Houses, Marley had heard a voice like this. The recurrence of the sound stirred the hair at the base of his neck.

"No, I haven't got it," answered the girl dully. "And what is more——"

"O, and what is more!" mimicked the woman. "Well, out you go till you do. I warned you. Day after day I've listened to your promises till I'm sick of them. What do you think I'm renting rooms for, my health? And this fine gentleman, what's he doing here, then, I'd like to know?"

"How much do you owe this woman?" Marley asked of the girl.

"This woman!"—bridling.

"Be silent!"

"She owes me thirty-eight, if you want to know. Will you pay it?"

Marley counted out the money and thrust it toward the woman, who snatched at it eagerly enough. "Now, make yourself scarce," he said rudely. "I'd give a thousand if something would turn you into a man for ten minutes. You harpy! I know your breed. You sent this poor girl into the street. It was nothing to you if she damned her soul. Thirty-eight dollars! Get out!"

She replied with an evil smirk. It was too much for Marley's patience. He seized her by the shoulders, whirled her right about face, and pushed her out of the room, slamming the door behind her and putting his foot against it. The knob was tried violently two or three times. After a minute he heard the woman go down the stairs.

During this scene the girl had not stirred. All at once she began to laugh; short, sharp cachinnations, far more terrible than any sobbing. They tore at her heart, sent invisible daggers into her brain, choked her. Marley, genuinely alarmed, ran to her.

"Here, here! None of that. Everything's all right. She'll never bother you again. There, there! Leave it all to me."

Gently he pressed her down upon the cot, patted her hands, and offered her all manner of clumsy encouragement. Gradually the hysteria passed away. He wet his handkerchief at the faucet and bathed her face. And women and girls were going through like ordeals, night by night, and had been, and would be, till the crack of doom. By and by she lay very still, her eyes wide open, staring ceilingward. He drew up the chair.

"Now, tell me all about it."

"I have tried so hard. I was pretty. There was a time when the thought of it made me glad; but I curse it." The dull, level tone, without anger or vehemence, cut him to the heart. "I wasn't going to pay the landlady. She is bad and cruel—I wanted to be honest. I did not want fine dresses and jewelry. I wanted only to clothe and feed us, with a little left over sometimes for a book or a flower. One by one I lost my positions—because I was pretty! God will always be good to men like you, if he would only let me die, too!"

"You mustn't talk like that! You speak of us?"

"Open the other door," she said, turning her face toward the wall.

He got up, rather bewildered. He touched the knob, hesitated for a moment, not knowing why, then pulled the door open.

"Good God!"

Upon a cot lay an aged man, peaceful in death. A glittering candle threw a tender light upon the sad old face. Marley heard the girl speaking again.

"I wanted to send him home, where mother sleeps. For myself, the river. Tomorrow they are going to bury him in potter's field."

Softly Marley closed the door. He returned to the girl and knelt down beside her.

"I'm a man. I've knocked about the world so long that I've forgotten how to pray. But this I can do: So long as I live and prosper you shan't want. Now, have you strength enough to get up and go with me?"

"Anywhere!" She tried to kiss his hand, but he drew it back embarrassedly.

"I know a woman with a great heart, and I am going to take you to her. Tomorrow your father shall go home."

Mary Chartres stood before one of the windows in her cozy sitting room, her hands clasped loosely behind her back. The room was in darkness except for what light came from the third room beyond. She looked out upon a wonderful picture of stars, below and above, terrestrial and celestial. Sometimes she saw a cluster of yellow stars, serenely making a pathway through the dazzling field; a star going down to the sea.

For a long time she remained motionless. Her thoughts were like the ripples on water, broken, wimpling hither and thither, never strong enough to reach shore. She was restless and irritable. She had demanded solitude, and now it irked her. A little while since she had rehearsed two or three of her great scenes, with the mirror in her dressing room as a critic. She had turned away in chagrin. Her keen perception of the ridiculous often handicapped her. She could not rehearse alone. She needed the bigness of the stage, the presence of her coworkers, the lights, the great dim cavern on the far side of the footlights. Then her part seemed real to her. But here, alone, she recognized the truth; she was a manikin, a puppet, who had no real part in the world which moved about her.

Suddenly she left the window and switched on the lights. From her writing desk she picked up the manuscript. John Marley, clear eyed, healthy skinned, with a touch of the divine fire. She saw him gradually becoming absorbed by the falseness of the city life. First he would lose his boyish eagerness, his trust and faith; then he would drift into the cynicism of the disillusioned; he would write smart things instead of big; his humanity would give way to the desire to be clever. After that he would become one of the pack. She knew. Twelve years of varied fortunes on the stage had taught her the keen truth, that the joy and zest of life is the striving and that attainment is disillusion. If only he would return to his seas and deserts; to come back to civilization only when he had completed a play! Thirty-five years old! That did not matter. At heart he was a boy.

With that impulsiveness which was one of her principal charms she went to the telephone and called up his hotel, only to learn that he was not in. She turned to the piano, but that left her unsatisfied. The clock struck half after nine. How long the day had been! She jumped up from the piano bench. It would be the very thing; a ride to the park and back would clear her mind of the broken cobwebs. She gave orders to have the car sent around at once, and began to dress, from time to time pausing to surrender to her thoughts.

Fame was something and money was a great deal, but down in the bottom of her heart she was dissatisfied. She envied the wives and mothers in the audience as doubtless they envied her. She had been too busy to think of love; but she could not shut out the insistent call of home; not the home in the sense of a house with a garden, smart servants, but the broader meaning; two persons who were all and all to each other, and later, three perhaps; the little orbit of love and family, letting the world come and go as it would, unconcerned so long as it did not interrupt the peace of the idyl.

She was putting on her hat when the telephone rang. It was Marley. She recognized his voice immediately.

"Hello! Come right up. No; wait in the lobby and I'll be down. Just ordered the car for a spin in the park, and I'll take you along. Impossible? You must see me in the apartment? Is it a play? Tragedy? Modern tragedy? Real? What are you talking about? Well, then, come on up. I'm sorry I didn't go out with you. I've been a nuisance to myself all day. What's it about? You can't tell me over the phone? For mercy's sake, what have you been doing? Come, quickly!"

Marley led the girl into the lift. She obeyed him mutely. The horror of the last hour had deprived her of everything but locomotion. Marley kept a firm but reassuring grip on her arm, for she looked as if she would drop at any moment.

At Mary Chartres' door he stopped, beset with doubt. How would she accept the situation? He squared his shoulders. If Mary Chartres failed him he would lock up his heart and fling away the key. He rang. The door opened almost instantly.

"O," said Mary, observing that he was not alone.

Without a word Marley led the girl inside. He dropped his hand from her arm. His hand no longer urging or sustaining, she stopped, like a mechanical doll. Then somewhere a wheel ceased turning; the cozy luxury of the room faded, and all became black. Marley picked her up and laid her on the sofa, while Mary flew to her medicine chest for the cologne. She applied it to the girl's temples and wrists. Presently the girl sighed and turned her head away from the ministrations.

"Well?" said Mary, her warm hand closing over the girl's rough, thin, cold one.

Marley crossed to the window. He watched the flickering stars as he spoke.

"I'm a man, built like the rest of my kind, no better, no worse. If I have lived clean, if I haven't dissipated, it was not due to will power so much as temperament. I wasn't inclined that way. And perhaps there's a good deal in the fact that till recently I was too poor. Well, I was lonely, horribly lonely. Among the thousands swarming about me there wasn't one I could talk to. What mystifies me is that I had such a longing. I'm so used to being alone. I spoke to that poor girl on the street and asked her to dine with me."

"And you bring her to me?" Mary drew back her hand and stood up.

He heard and understood the movement. "Wait till I have told you the story." Still with his back to her he went on, low voiced, without hesitance, interpolating a phrase now and then and revealed his deep knowledge of life. "Perhaps it is because I was born a dramatist. I lived plays up to the time I began to write them. I repeat, I was lonely, and God knows that my thought did not go beyond that. I told her that I knew a woman with a great heart." His voice ceased.

Mary was stroking the hot forehead of the girl. Tears burned down her cheeks. The poor baby? She turned her head and through the blur of tears gazed at the broad back of the man. Then she smiled; and there was more to that smile than was expressed in the crook of her lips.

"I told her that so long as I had anything she should not want. But a man gropes in the dark. What can I do for her? Will you help me?"

"But what can I do?" She knew exactly what she could do, but she wished to learn if his insight stopped where it did or went further. "What can you do? I can keep her here for the night and a few days and after she returns from the funeral, but no more than that. Have you any relatives?"

"Some, but they are so remote that they might just as well be strangers."

"Too bad. And I am as lonely that way as you are. But, John, you can't take care of her. You can't pay her board and buy her clothes, you poor, foolish man, without inviting questions. The world——"

He turned now, with a laugh. "You know how much I care for that. But I have a plan, and I think you can help me. We'll make it our business to find her something to do; some clean, honest work, among clean, honest people. This is not the kind of a girl who would accept charity. Look at her face, look at her poor, needleworn fingers. Honest independence, that's all she wants. And she will have us both always to back her. That will give her courage. Isn't that the right idea?"

If there came into her mind any doubt as to his original purpose in speaking to the girl on the street it was transitory, and she brushed it aside as unworthy. Besides, he had said that he was a man, like his kind, neither better nor worse, and a man who will make such a confession is one to be trusted to the end of time. She went toward him with her hands outstretched.

"Yes, that is the idea, what I wanted you to figure out. I am glad you did this thing. You're a good man, John Marley. I can see why you will become a famous man Tuesday morning. Now, run along; go back to your hotel and smoke. We'll be partners in this. Good night."

At the door he took both her hands, and with a smile which had about it the charming embarrassment of a boy's he bent and kissed the hands. He was, however, unaware of the half unconscious caress in the finger tips which lightly brushed his face in the release.

Alone, Mary forgot the girl on the sofa, her pitiful tragedy. She stood looking at her hands as if they had suddenly become something new and strange, hers yet not hers.

by EDWIN BALMER

Herewith is presented the second chapter of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.

Lieut. Walter Barrett, commander of the United States scout cruiser Salem, having been directed by the government to proceed to Haiti with two of the president's personal representatives who were to watch the native uprisings on that island, deliberately altered his course and steamed as fast as the turbines would allow east in the North Atlantic. News had been received that the high seas fleet of the European league of former enemies was maneuvering in the Atlantic. The United States continental army was widely dispersed, some in Haiti, some on the Mexican border, and others at various posts throughout the wide interior of the nation. The nation's fleet had been withdrawn from the coasts they were expected to defend and were patroling the Mexican coasts.

Lieut. Barrett realized that the withdrawal of the league's fleet from the Caribbean was not in compliance with the United States' request, but in accordance with its plan. He convinced his brother officers and members of the crew of the theory and left the passengers oblivious of their destination. Sighting a fleet of foreign biplanes in the mid-Atlantic, the Salem wirelessed back to the government office of the discovery, and received in reply a reprimand for diverting its course and a command to proceed at once to Haiti. Lieut. Barrett declined and instructed his gunners to be ready for fight, but not to fire the first shot should they encounter the league's fleet.

A lookout for the Salem espied the league's fleet and made out the number and class of the vessels comprising it. A league biplane had spotted the Salem and carried the news to the fleet commander. As soon as the Salem hove in firing range one of the league's battle cruisers opened fire on it with its heavy guns. The Salem at once answered the fire and Lieut. Barrett ordered a message wirelessed back to Washington stating the number and class of the enemy fleet's vessels and information that the enemy had fired the first shot. Lieut. Barrett and his men realized that it was going to be an unequal and hopeless fight with the swift battle cruisers and destroyers of the enemy and their higher calibered guns. Aboard were the two representatives of the president, one of whom had voted against the preparedness program in congress and had secured an appropriation for a large postoffice for the community he represented.

The Salem steered straight toward the enemy and answered its fire with as much effect as possible. Lieut. Barrett, suspecting a spy aboard, directed that the wireless room be guarded by one of his trusted men. The battle cruisers and destroyers closed in on the little vessel.

A FLARE of hell! Blackness! Peace for an instant, quiet like the peace of death. Then the light of the sky, the glare of his flaming ship, and now, as Barrett moved, the tortures of the damned. Barrett lay on his back on the deck; it was hot, that riveted metal on which he lay, hot everywhere he felt it; smoke swept over it, smoke dense and choking and sickening sweet with an awful cooking smell—the odor of flesh scorching.

Barrett rolled over. A boy in ensign's uniform lay beside him; he was young Griswold, who had commanded the foretop; he had been thrown down and was not yet dead. His eyes were open and he recognized Barrett as his commander got up on hands and knees beside him; he was not conscious. "Twenty-two dreadnaughts, I make them, sir," he reminded. "Four ships of the Zeus class, six of the Trajan, four of the Pharaoh, six of the Sargon, and the others look like the Thor. Four may be battle cruisers of the Carthage, class . . . they are farthest away."

Barrett got to his feet. His right leg was broken somewhere; it crumpled under him; but Daniels, the quartermaster, had an arm about him. Daniels, after pulling Griswold away from the spot of the deck which was burning him, was supporting his commander.

"Mr. Spurstow is still working with the radio, sir," Daniels was telling him. "We have been struck, sir, very hard forward again. A magazine blew up. We are sinking by the bow; there's no use trying to keep the screws going, sir; but if an engine crew will stay to keep power for the dynamos Mr. Spurstow thinks there may be a chance for a signal before we go down."

Barrett thrust the quartermaster's arm from him. "Tell Mr. Hanlon that," he commanded. "Let go of me. Tell Mr. Hanlon that. I'll go tell Mr. Spurstow he will have his power."

He fell to hands and knees again. Gazing mast and, he believed, the wires of the radio still stretched horizontal. But his ship was fast settling beneath him. Daniels' arms held him up again, and, half carried by the quartermaster, he stumbled into the wireless cabin. The apparatus shattered by the spy was strewn about, but except for that and the blotch where Hutchins had lain before his body was thrown out there was no sign of destruction yet within the narrow steel walls. Spurstow, the relief operator, with two electricians, was working slowly, it seemed to Barrett, at the repairs. He cried out to Spurstow for haste, and for an instant brought the operator's eyes toward him. Spurstow had been working for many minutes, knowing that at the next second all might be over for him and for the ship. Barrett rebuked himself.

"That's right. Make it sure!" he cried.

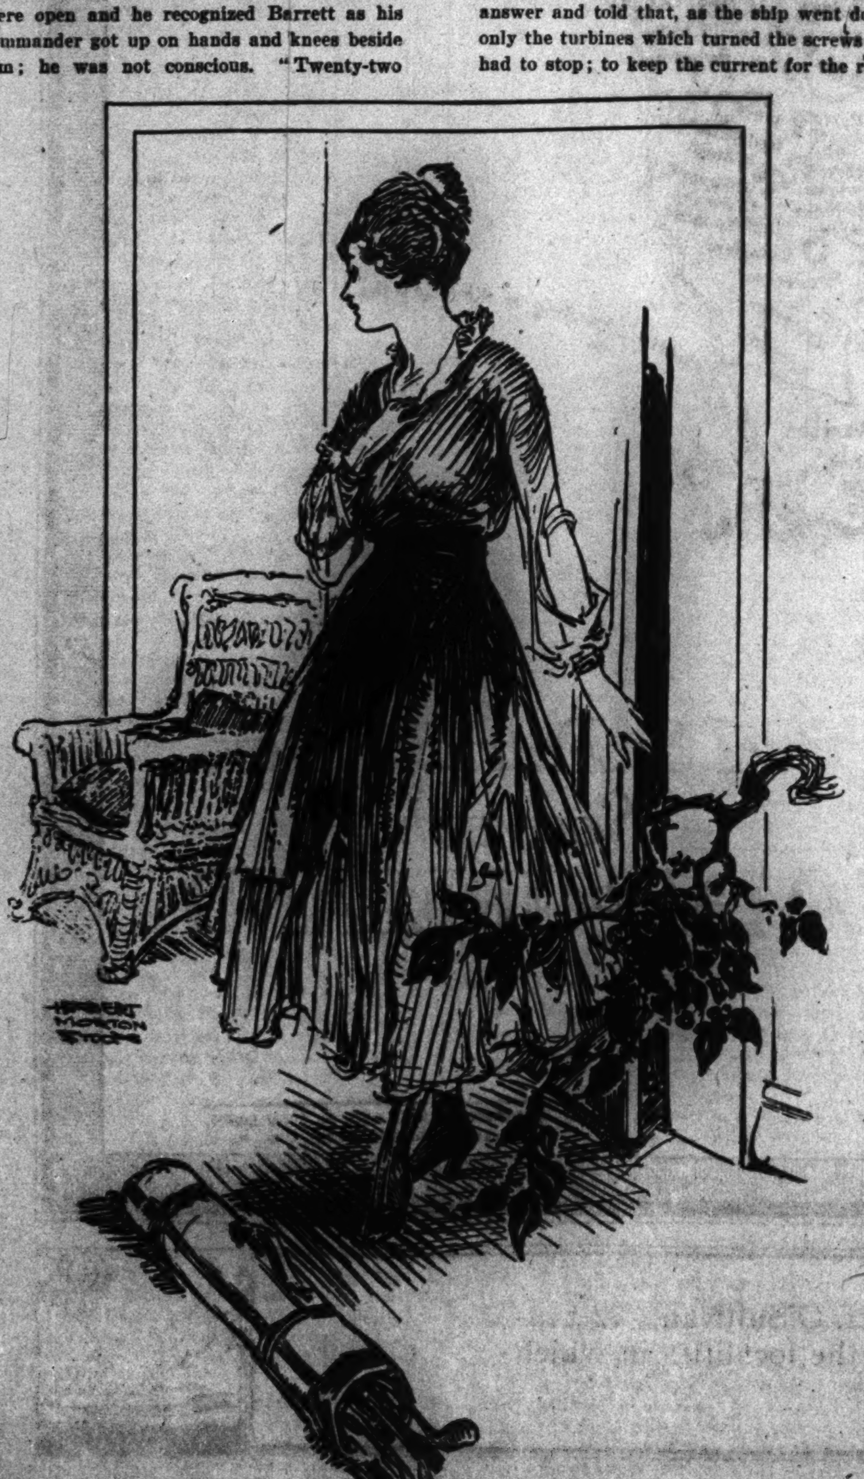
The tremor from the turbines, continuous till now and evident always between the shock of the Falcon's shells, suddenly had stopped. Every one in the little cabin felt it.

"I spoke with Mr. Hanlon, sir," Daniels said to Barrett as the commander seized him. "He understands. He said he'd stay to keep current for the radio."

Spurstow flung down his pliers and touched the key. The blue spark of the radio rasped across the spark gap.

"You can send now?" Barrett cried. "You can send?"

The operator's wrist snapped down; the crash of his spark, leaping and leaping as he pressed his key, shut out just then all other sound in the little steel walled room. It made answer and told that, as the ship went down, only the turbines which turned the screws had had to stop; to keep the current for the radio to send messages to the shore men still stayed at their posts below.



"Hanlon! Hanlon!" Barrett gasped to himself as the spark still rasped. "Boy," he bent over Spurstow, but careful not to touch him, "you are getting them? You are getting them at home now? Then send; send it all. We found the fleet and they attacked us. Don't say much of that; that doesn't count. Just that they attacked, and their force; they're twenty-two dreadnaughts in their fighting line; four of the Zeus class, six of the Trajan, four of the Pharaoh, six of the Sargon . . . two of the Thor!"

He had fallen back now and was half insensible. Like Ensign Griswold, who had fallen from the foretop, he was rambling on and on, repeating the ships of the enemy over and over again. For he had fallen, too. But not upon the deck this time; into the water; it was cool and salty, but choking him; and others were in the water, too. Most of them made no cry and did not thrash at all, but when he looked at them they sank quite easily. Indeed, only one man nearby was swimming at all strongly. He did not seem hurt, and, as Barrett saw him now closer, he understood why; the man was in civilian's shirt and so could have hidden till the last moment in some safer part of the ship. He had on a life preserver. Barrett did not cry to him at all; Barrett was not asking him for help; but he came beside Barrett and offered to hold him as well as he could. So Barrett saw it was Banland, and, as he recognized him, Barrett pushed him away.

"It's all right, Banland," he cried; he was quite delirious again. "Don't bother about us. It's all right. I've seen your postoffice in Virginia. I was telling Marston so only today. It's quite pretty, and in twenty years the village may grow up to it. So don't bother about me, Banland. . . . But if our radio reached the shore—we don't know that, Banland; before they torpedoed us—but if we warned 'em may your soul go to heaven instead of to hell. Mr. President, they were twenty-two dreadnaughts, as I made them out, four of the Zeus class and six of the Trajan, and a damned pretty postoffice, if I do say so. But Mr. Hanlon shouldn't have stuck. Let me go, Banland; you see, he had absolutely no chance at all, and he knew it, but he gave us a tenth of a knot more. I tell you he gave us a tenth of a knot more than the ship ever made before, and he stayed there to the end. Banland, I knew the figures once, but I've forgotten 'em. Forgive me. What does a damn fine postoffice cost out in—say in Virginia?"

II.

THE SHADOW OF THE SWORD.

"So you're sure there'll be no trouble?"

"Absolutely! The Europeans are withdrawing their cruisers from all ports in the Caribbean and showing complete compliance with our demands."

"Compliance!"

"The premier has cabled Washington asking ten days' extension of time for making formal reply to the president's note, and unofficial reports, passed by the censors, say that the Liberals are regaining influence with the prince regent and everything looks all right."

"You mean they're mobilizing against us at this minute—if they haven't already put on transports all the troops they need to clean out this country. Where's their fleet?"

"There's no mention of that in the afternoon bulletins."

"No, nor for several days. All we know is that it's on the high seas at 'maneuvers,' no one knows where, and all our ships are scattered. The president hasn't mobilized two squadrons for fear of offering some provocative measure."

"And dead right, too," Ashby returned, dropping his golf bag against the porch rail and himself sinking into the cane chair. "It takes two to make a quarrel; that's the devil of a bromide, Bob, but you force me to pull it. The only reason in God's world that they got war in Europe was because both sides wanted it and were all ready for it and didn't know what to do without it. We don't want to fight, and, down at the bottom, they don't want to fight us."

"Why not?"

"Well, in the first place, they don't dare to."

"They don't dare to! O, God!" Wendell, in his exasperation, kicked his chair against the house as he got up. "In the name of all that's rational, what have we got in this country to make their boy scouts think twice about taking us on?"

Ashby leaned forward and pulled the driver from his golf bag; he weighed the stick doubtfully in his hand and waved it critically before him. "O, but I was rotten this afternoon; couldn't smack a ball straight a hundred yards, and my second year at it, too. But then, it takes four years to make a golfer; one season to the driver, one to the midiron, one to the mashie, and one on the greens, and you've got to begin as a kid, too. Bobby, pardon me; as a brother-in-law you've made my sister happy, and usually you're entertaining, but doesn't it sometimes occur to your Annapolis and West Point alumni that your business must horribly overdevelop the bump of foreboding?"

"In other words?"

"Of course, I know we haven't all the ships and all the men ready to take on the regent at the drop of the hat, but does any sane man suppose that the prince is going to attack us for the sake of a few first successes when he knows we're bound to lick him in the end? You bet not; so there'll be no war unless we want it. We don't want it; so that's all there is to it."

He speared his driver violently back in the bag among the other golf clubs and sat staring away.

It was a warm, humid evening of August in northern Illinois, with the leaves on the maples about the Ashby home just beginning to turn red and with the grass of the lawn sleek and glistening. The grounds stretched for a hundred yards to the road, which led up and down gentle slopes to the busy, prosperous little city of Elgin, three-quarters of a mile away. As Jim Ashby was the third of his name to stake his fortune there, success was coming to him quickly and easily.

At 22, after finishing an engineering course at the University of Illinois, he had started work in the shops of the Ashby Brass company, which his grandfather had founded and of which his father now was president; after two years in the shops, two more in the sales department, another at credits and accounting, he now—at 27—had his own office with the title of assistant superintendent under his name on the door; his salary had doubled in the last year, and all the future was his. Outside of business, he was a leader in sports at the country club; he had his own roadster and he owned a motor boat on the river. Above all, he just had won, as his wife to be, Agnes Ware, the sweetest and most sought after girl in his world. Altogether, life—as Jim Ashby found it lived in Illinois—was a most satisfactory, safe, and delightful institution.

Jim sat, awaiting Bob's retort; receiving none, he looked about and saw that Wendell had produced from a shoe box which was beside his chair a strangely shaped brass and steel object, somewhat larger than two fists. It had been cast at the Ashby Brass works—or, at least, part of it had—for the rounded part was precisely according to a pattern in use there; but this piece had been combined with others to compose an instrument which, as a whole, was quite unlike anything familiar to Jim.

"What the deuce is that?"

Bob handed it over. "What do you make of it?"

Jim examined the thing gingerly. It was a heavy metal bulb, cast very thick, with a narrow neck and with pins—which appeared to be plunger pins—protruding all about. The purpose of these so obviously was to detonate a contained explosive that Jim looked quickly at his brother-in-law before touching any of the plungers.

"Push it in," Bob said. "The thing isn't loaded."

"What should it be loaded with?"

"Picric acid or any good high explosive; not a particularly large charge is required. It seems to be an incendiary bomb, with only a small chamber of explosive in the center surrounded by a chamber for the burning fluid. Of course, if required, it might all be filled with high explosive."

"Where did you get it?"

"It was sent to me from Chicago this afternoon."

"What for?"

"As a sample"

"Of what?"

Wendell pulled his chair a little nearer and leaned toward his brother-in-law. "Of the sort of weapons—or, rather, as one of the sort of weapons—which are being distributed to the secret agents of the prince regent throughout the middle west."

"The secret agents?"

"Do you suppose the country isn't honeycombed with them, the interior as well as the coast? There were 35,000 German spies—according to a conservative estimate—in northern France alone just before the European war; France had her spies by the tens of thousands in Germany; Russia had her agents all through Prussia and Austria; and in England—you must remember a little of what they found out! And no country in the world offers the opportunity for spies which America does; any number of subjects of the league 'belong' here as much as any one else; and the government doesn't even begin to guard against their activities."

"But what can they do?"

Wendell smiled a little. "You mean, since we havn't got any forts out here to map or any military plans to steal, they wouldn't have anything to do? The fort photographers and plan pickpockets are only the dilettantes of the European spy system. The real, serious agents are the sort all about us here—I mean the men who are ready to enlist the minute we call for volunteers, to be with our army and to give information—the disposition of troops, the placing of guns and ranges—to the enemy the first time we meet them in the field; I mean the men who, at the moment of mobilization, will start riots and strikes and disturbances all over the country—to be shot themselves, perhaps—but who will make us hold back half our regiments of militia to put down civil disturbances when the enemy is landing; I mean men who will blow our bridges into the rivers to delay the moving of our troops, who will set fire to our munition works, and—well, in general, the sort of men who have been sending about the bombs like that which have been made, more or less under your nose, at the Ashby Brass works."

"Under my nose!" Jim bristled with offense at the tone.

"The man who sent that to me had evidence that it came from some of your workmen. If things like this are being made in your shops you ought to find it out; you could do it better than any one else."

"But——"

"Give it to me or hide it now, please!" Bob ordered sharply as some one came toward the screen door.

Jim looked about. "It's only Nellie."

Bob seized the brass bomb and dropped it into the shoe box and laid on the cover. He was standing, and Jim arose also as his sister came out upon the porch. She was a graceful, slightly built girl of 24, with dark, lustrous hair and delicate brows, with quiet, beautiful eyes, deep blue in color, and with sensitive lips and good, rounded little chin. Her lips were quivering now and her cheeks were flushed; she was so agitated herself that she did not notice the attitude of dissension between her brother and her husband, and Jim spoke to her in quick sympathy.

"Hello, Helen, what's happened?"

"Nothing, thanks, Jim."

"You don't want to tell me?"

"It's only father's been talking to me again."

"O!" Her brother understood. He looked from Nellie to her husband, picked up his golf bag and went into the house.

Wendell shoved the shoe box with his foot so that a chair hid it, then he kissed his wife's lips. Neighbors had said when she was a little girl that there was something appealingly impractical—idealistic, some called it—about Helen Ashby. She was considered to have proved to be "impractical," when, at 22, and against the violent opposition of her father, she had married Bob Wendell, who then was only an ensign in the navy with pay less than $1,900 a year. He was junior lieutenant now, with $2,200 annually, but Nellie's family had just learned that a third person was to arrive to share that slender pay. This had caused more personal criticism of Wendell's circumstances during the present visit in Elgin, and made it more difficult than ever for Nellie as well as for Bob.

"What's he been saying now, dearie?"

"O, he's going to tell you!" Helen's glance caught the headline of the paper which Jim had left. "Bob, what's the news tonight?"

"Well, the prince regent is withdrawing cruisers from the Caribbean."

"And pledging recognition of the Monroe doctrine?"

"Not yet."

"But the president said he had to today or——"

"Or what?"

"He'd be told again he had to, I suppose. But, Bob, how is it, really?"

"Well, the prince regent is recognizing the Monroe doctrine—according to Washington—by withdrawing the cruisers; so we've won another diplomatic victory."

"You're not looking at me. You don't believe that the prince regent is giving up all his plans about this half of the world just because the president has written him another note."

"No, I don't."

"Then the time is—close, Bob?"

"O, I hope not, dearie."

"But you're not telling me all that's happened or all you've found out since I've seen you. Isn't that so?"

He could not deny it. He glanced down once, doubtfully, toward the chair which was hiding the shoe box; then, changing his mind, drew a telegram from his pocket.

"Yes, I got this, Nellie," he admitted.

"From the department?"

"Yes."

She seized it, but, holding it, she could not open it. "It says there is going to be war?"

"No, no, Nellie. Just warning me to be ready to report if recalled."

"If recalled?"

"Yes; read it. I'm simply to stay near the telegraph wire, and not to let any one know I've been warned; no one's to suppose we're expecting trouble."

"Then it hasn't come?"

"Not—no."

"Not yet! you were going to say, Bob. 'Not yet.'"

III.

THE HIGHER SERVICE.

The dinner gong sounding in the hall postponed for Wendell further need of offering reassurance; it also prevented him from pursuing further the purpose which had led him to show the bomb to Jim. He delayed only to put the shoe box and its contents in a secure place before he joined the rest of the family at the table.

Dinner at Ashby's, as in most American houses of the sort, was the recognized opportunity for the plain and free discussion of all family affairs. Seven were at the table that evening when Nathan Ashby bent his head to give thanks.

The father of the family—he was a big man, tall and broad shouldered and with features which were regular but a trifle too large—or perhaps only too set and stubborn in expression—to be handsome. He was 52, and his dark hair was just beginning to turn gray; his blue eyes were steady and clear; his large hands, as he manipulated carving knife and fork, were deft and strong. He had started work at 15, when the Ashby Brass company was little more than a blacksmith shop, and now, whenever crossed in argument, he reviewed that fact and recited the figures of the company's gross business for the last year as proof that whatever he thought about anything must be right.

His wife, at the other end of the table, was a slight, delicate woman who believed that her husband nearly always was right. On one side of the table, Barbara, the elder daughter, sat with her husband, who was barely 30, but who already was manager of one of the most prosperous condensed milk companies. Their child—young Nathan, aged 3—was the only one of the family absent. Jim sat on the other side of Barbara, leaving the opposite side of the board to Helen and Bob. To this family the father announced as he put the last slice of beef upon his own plate and sat back:

"I've landed a job for you, Robert; has Helen told you about it?"

Wendell looked up, his lips pressed tight together; then he smiled. "Why, no," he replied quietly. "You haven't told me, have you, Helen?" he appealed to his wife.

"I guess you'd manage to keep it on your mind if she had," Ashby returned heavily. "It'll be worth $5,000 next year if the navy hasn't already got you so used to loafing and being paid for it that you can't do any real work at all; it'll allow you a drawing account of $3,000 right away to start."

Bob's lips parted, then pressed together again without speaking. Under the tablecloth a hand of Nellie's caught his hand and squeezed it tight.

"Where is the job?" he asked. "What is it?"

Nathan Ashby had expressed many times previously his frank opinion of a position in the navy or in the army. According to his ideas, a man went into the service of his country only because he was caught young and was fooled by the glamour of the uniform; because he wanted to see the world at the taxpayers' expense, or because he had disgraced himself at home, or just because he didn't want to go to work. Having enlisted and signed when he was a boy, he was bound to stay till his term of service—Nathan Ashby usually referred to it as a "sentence"—expired; thereupon, if the officer had any ambition left, he got out of the service; if he remained it was either because he hadn't really grown up yet, or because he had become so used to "loafing and being paid for it" that he dared not compete in business with active men, or because he was after the pension. In the service, a man learned nothing which a business man did not already know or could not pick up in a few hours whenever emergency might require.

"My friend, Ben Homan of the Homan Marine Engine company of Chicago will give you a trial," Ashby replied. "He's putting on the market about the lastest little motor for small boats that I know about; but other companies have the jump on them for the summer resort trade. If you take their proposition it's just the place where you can cash in on your navy experience."

"How?" Wendell inquired.

"As an ex-officer of the navy you could get into the yacht clubs and meet the best people who are putting money into pleasure boats. Ben Homan was down at the office this afternoon buying some parts, and when he heard you were an officer in the navy he offered to start you right away showing their new model at Oconomowoc, Mackinac, and the Thousand islands before this season's done; then they'll send you south for the Florida and gulf resort trade. You get commission on all your sales, and they start you with a drawing account of sixty a week. You'll write them or telephone tomorrow morning."

The color suddenly had left Wendell's face. "Homan was down at your plant this afternoon?" he asked.

Nathan Ashby noted the new tenseness of Wendell's manner. "What's so funny about that?" he demanded.

Bob made no direct response; he was aware that Jim was observing him closely. "You were very good to take that trouble for me," Wendell said to Nathan Ashby, "but since all negotiations have been with you, would you mind replying to Mr. Homan for me?"

"You mean you're turning it down?"

"Yes."

"What rank, will you tell me, lieutenant son-in-law, do you have to hold in the navy before you begin drawing five thousand a year?"

Wendell made no reply.

"About admiral, isn't it, or something like that—the place where you get if everybody ahead of you dies and you're about 62 and ready to be retired? So it's your idea to wait until that time before you take care of your wife right?"

Wendell's shoulders jerked; under the table cover he let go of Nellie's hand and his fingers clinched; her fingers caught his appealingly.

"Father!" she cried. "What do you mean by speaking so?"

"Just what you heard me say. He's not capable of giving you right care now and

"So far, maybe, you've lived somehow; but how about a few months from now, when you can't just live around anywhere and you'll have to hire help and you've worn out the clothes I bought for you before you were married, and you've got to get things for some one else, too, and your real expenses begin?"

Wendell had kept silent long enough so that he trusted himself now to reply tersely, "I believe that you will find that we will manage."

"O, you'll manage! Well, I won't have one of my daughters just 'manage' at a time like what's coming to her. Men who are satisfied to 'manage' nowadays lose their wives, and if you'd risk your wife's life rather than take a real job, I won't risk my daughter. What did little Nathan cost you, Granger?" Ashby turned to his successful son-in-law. "Six or seven hundred dollars with specialist, nurse, hospital, and all, wasn't it? Where are you going to find that on your navy wages, Mr. Officer?"

Wendell arose and stood a moment, his tall, lithe figure trembling under constraint. He gazed at his father-in-law without speaking; then he turned to Nellie's mother. "I'm sure you'll excuse me," he said.

Mrs. Ashby looked down at her plate. "O, he means it for the best, Bob," she pleaded. "Don't go feeling bad."

"No; don't go now, Bob!" Jim entreated. He was flushed and uncomfortable. "Wait a minute. Father, that was too rough."

"You think so, eh?"

"Yes; you didn't mean all that. Tell Bob so, won't you?"

"Apologize to him," Ashby almost roared, "for getting him a job?"

Wendell, who had waited when Jim spoke, moved away; but Nellie, who also had arisen, detained him.

"You won't say anything to them, Bob, so I shall. I'm going with you in a minute; please wait for me. I just want to tell them this: My husband is giving himself to protecting me in so big a way that you can't even understand it."

"Nellie!" Wendell protested.

She disregarded him. "What's happened in Europe hasn't made you think differently about Bob because it hasn't happened here—yet. So you believe that my husband—and the other men in the service who might be making more money—just like to imagine they're useful to the country."

"Helen, you must not work yourself up so!" her mother cried.

Nellie did not hear. "I suppose if I'd never met Bob and if I'd stuck in Elgin, Illinois, a thousand miles from the nearest ocean and a couple of thousand more from the next big nation, I'd believe that, too, and I'd agree that making castings or selling motorboats to resorters at Mackinac or Palm Beach was the noblest work of man. But you'll wake some day when war comes. And when that day comes, you, father, will thank God on your knees that Robert Wendell and a few thousand other men like him—who might be making five thousand dollars a year at selling boat engines or canning milk—are able to see something else than the salary check; and you'll ask God for more men like them to protect you and to make you safe—to make you and mother and Barbara and me and little Nat and the rest of us safe!"

She stopped, gasping. Nathan Ashby, in his rage, was unable at once to make reply. Accordingly there was silence in the room for an instant; the maid, who had been awaiting a pause, entered tremblingly.

"The telephone, Mr. Ashby; it's the watchman at the factory. He says Mr. Ingouf and Enloe want to get in to do some work in the laboratory tonight. He wants to know whether he should let them in, if it's all right."

"Of course it's all right!" Nathan Ashby dismissed the matter violently. "What harm could they do?"

IV.

"TO NEWPORT NEWS."

The Ashby Brass company, like many manufacturing concerns, had the laboratory for the trying out of new processes or devices. It was used mostly in the daytime, when the plant was running; but it was not exceptional for men who were experimenting with a new device to work there also in the evening. Ingouf and Enloe were machinists who had been working together on a new type of valve, Jim Ashby knew; indeed, his father recently had relieved them of their regular tasks to give all their days, at the company's expense, to perfecting the valve; it was not strange, therefore, that they wished to use the laboratory that evening. But, as Jim heard the request, he started. He could not see Bob's face at that moment, and the next Wendell was out of the room with Nellie. Jim remained at the table with the others and finished his meal in silence.

He had told Agnes that he would call that evening; and, since he had been engaged, he usually had hurried direct to her home after dinner; but now, when he left the house, he took his car on the road toward the factory. Bob's bomb was all foolishness, of course. There could be no such organization of spies in America even if there was to be a war; and there was not to be any war. The evening bulletins were perfectly definite about that. The bomb—if it was a bomb—had been made partly out of metal cast at the Ashby works; but any one might have procured the casting, and the contraption must be the work of some crazy crank. He was going to the works to prove that.

As he drove slowly along the evening was perfect for putting him in that mood; it was mild, clear, and moonlit. Peace—the very essence of quiet and security—was in the air. Here and there on both sides of the road the homes of sensible, successful neighbors showed in the moonlight, the windows on the lower floors softly aglow. The front door was open at the Harrouns'—Mr. Harroun was one of the most important men in the county—and, as he passed, Jim heard some one playing the piano and Gertrude Harroun was singing, rollickingly, a new musical comedy song—"Uncle, Uncle Sammy"—which she had heard on Broadway. Jim recognized it and halted outside to hear the verse:

When you read of other nations,
You learn it's turn about;
Napoleon whipped the Germans,
Then the Frenchmen got the clout;
The Chinee chased the Jappy once.
Now Nippon lays them out—
They've all been licked but Sam.

O Uncle, Uncle Sammy, they must all slip
it to you,
When you've undertaken anything, you've always seen it through;
Red Coat, Mex, or Spanish Don looked just alike to you—
They've all been licked by Sam.

Loud laughter and appreciative cries of "Encore!" came as the singing ceased; so followed the next verse:

In the poor old eastern hemisphere
They're scrapping all the time,
For land in Asia, Africa,
For isles in every clime;
But every one keeps hands off here,
We dwell in peace sublime—
They fight with all but Sam.

O Uncle, Uncle Sammy, they must all hand
it to you,
Since Monroe made his doctrine plain, the new world's been taboo;
If any one seeks conquest here, he takes a look at you—
And no one takes on Sam.

Jim went on. The song strengthened his feeling that his going down to the factory tonight was rank idiocy. He knew perfectly well that Bob's bomb never was made at the factory when he was there; the only possibility was that it might have been made in the laboratory after hours. But would it be made by Ingouf and Enloe?—foreigners, to be sure, but two of the steadiest and most dependable men in the place and the best workmen. As Jim entered the factory the idea was so absurd that he felt like a fool when he looked into the laboratory where the two machinists were working together at a lathe, reshaping some part of their valve. Jim made an excuse for coming in, went to his office as though he had forgotten something and, leaving the building, he hurried away by another road toward the Wares' place, which was on the other side of town from the Ashbys'.

A youth of 18 was coming out of the house as Jim left his car and started up the gravel walk. He was Martin, Agnes' brother.

"Hello!" Martin hailed his prospective brother-in-law with more than usual interest. "Say, have you see Lieut. Wendell recently?"

Jim shook hands formally with the boy. "Why, yes, Mart; I saw him about half an hour ago."

"Say, what does he say about the news from the other side?"

Jim, weary of the discussion, gestured deprecatingly. "O, the same old scare stuff; that's all."

The boy obviously was disappointed. "So Lieut. Wendell says that, too, does he? He hasn't any of the inside dope from Washington—any more than the papers 've got, I mean?"

Jim shook his head. "There isn't any inside stuff on this. The prince regent tried to put a bluff over on us; the president called him and they're laying down the cards."

"Then that certainly is some pen the president pushes, old scout! Some pen! And O you English rhetoric! I'd never have neglected you so at school if I'd known what you could do!"

"Is Agnes home, Mart?"

"Agnes?" Martin recollected. "O, have you come to see her? Well, I should say she's not home. Since you ask me, she got a peek at you through the porch periscope and at once did the retreat to the Marne out the back way. Say, is Lieut. Wendell still up at your house? I'd like to go and see him."

"He was there when I left," Jim granted.

A girl in white was standing restlessly within the front door; she was a brown haired young girl, gray eyed, with a smooth, clear skin which was flushed now in her eagnerness, and she stamped her little foot impatiently as her brother lingered on the path. Agnes succeeded in making no other demonstration, however, until Martin had gained the road; then she threw open the screen door and ran down the porch steps. Jim caught and kissed her and half carried her up the steps again; they paused in the hall to look at each other under the light. Jim's inspection appeared far more than merely satisfactory; but he failed to pass muster under Agnes' eyes.

"Why, what's bothering you, dear?" she demanded solicitously.

"Nothing!" Jim threw his hat on a chair and, hand in hand with Agnes, he sought their place on the lounge near the big, shaded lamp. Agnes' parents had gone out and she and Jim had the room to themselves. "I'm rather extremely in need of some sane, rational, nonmilitary companionship for a while. What do you suppose I've been doing? I just came from the factory where I've been to see if spies weren't making bombs; yes——" He told her, in humorous detail, the discussions and his errand of the evening. "You can see from that the effect of having a lieutenant about most of the time; and Nellie's as bad."

"I can see," Agnes agreed. "I wasn't going to say anything about your sister, Jim, till you'd mentioned it; but——"

"Go on, dearie."

"I had her to lunch today and I got her ideas."

"About war?"

"I wasn't going to bring up the subject, but I'd been reading that dandy new disarmament article about our setting the example to the other nations—'The Mission of America,' by Prof. Doyen. The magazine was open at it and Nellie saw I'd been reading it. I give you my word that when I told her—as I had to—that I thought it was the finest and most practical thing I'd ever read, she became positively violent."

"I know," Jim nodded. "And there are so many things which you and I can't understand—not being in the navy."

"That was exactly the tone! I could hardly keep from laughing at her one minute and the next telling her what an infant she was. I didn't realize what the navy was doing to her before; now I know. It's absolutely stopped her development."

"It's put Bob back."

"Have you felt that way, too? I mean that Nellie, instead of growing in thought or experience since she's left Elgin, has been actually going back. She's a year older than I; and she used to be older really, but her mental age now is about the same as Mart's. He was home for lunch and agreed perfectly with every ridiculous thing she said."

"He just asked me what Lieut. Wendell thought as though no one else knew anything."

"Being 18, he's just at the army and navy stage. I suppose you were once, too, Jim, but—thanks be"—Agnes kissed him quickly—"you went into business and outgrew it. Why, Jim, I wouldn't dare marry—much less dream of bringing any one into the world some day"—Jim kissed her gently—"if I believed that the world had to be controlled by force and fear."

"And I'd never have asked you to marry me in such a world."

"Of course not; so the world isn't that way. America—the millions like you and I, Jim—can show the rest of the world that it's not. I told Nellie we'd agreed on that; and you felt, too, that Prof. Doyen was right—or mostly right. When war threatens, the way to keep it off is not to resist—that only makes war sure—but to refuse to resist; and the enemy cannot make his soldiers kill us. There can't be any war, can there?"

"Of course not!" Jim was impatient to hold her close and dismiss discussion.

"That's what I told Nellie, but she just laughed at me. She said the men would have to resist—or they wouldn't be men; and the women would drive the men on to it, when war really came. But I said that wasn't so!"

Jim brought her head down on his shoulder. "Let's talk about getting married, Agnes!"

"Married, dear?"

"Yes; when . . ."

Two hours later Jim drove again toward town in the bright moonlight. He smiled at the recollection of his errand to the factory early in the evening. The houses on both sides of the road were dark, but, with the complete silence of the night, the sense of peace and perfect security was stronger even than before, and from within Jim nothing rose to deny it. Agnes had made him forget—or remember only with amusement—the wild alarms which had disturbed him. Agnes and he were going to be married in three months; they had decided on the day. He was happy and he whistled as he drove along. What the tune was he did not realize at first; then he knew it was the confident, exultant tune of "Uncle, Uncle Sammy." It fitted in well with his mood; and, still whistling softly, he approached his father's factory. The windows of the laboratory were dark now and the place seemed deserted; but, as he was opposite the end of an alley, some one leaped out at him and called his name.

The hail was not loud, but there was alarm in its constraint which made Jim stop. In the moonlight he recognized his brother-in-law. Wendell, having showed himself, retreated abruptly into the darkness of the alley and, as Bob beckoned, Jim backed his car into the alley.

"Lights out!" Wendell ordered. Jim switched them off.

"What's up?"

"You were just coming down to find out?" Bob challenged.

"No; I was here at 8 o'clock."

"What did you find?"

"Just Ingouf and Enloe, working at their valve," Jim said; but instead of the feeling of foolishness for having looked in the laboratory, he now was conscious of culpability as Bob said:

"Working on their valve! That was all you saw?"

"What else was there to see?"

"Those men"—Bob motioned toward the darkened laboratory as if they were still there—"tell me, how much do you know about them?"

Jim had not realized, until he tried to answer, how little he knew about them or about others in his father's employ. They had come to Elgin recently to take machinists' positions; they were good machinists.

"Your car's good for seventy or eighty miles on the road?" Wendell demanded.

"Eighty-five, on a straightaway; one like it's been driven over a hundred an hour on track."

"And you dare drive it like the devil, if we need to?"

"Dare!" Jim rejoined. "What for?"

"For your friends in there! I was going to jump them as they came out. They've motorcycles here. But if we can let them come out as if they weren't watched and show us where they're going, and we could then get them, we'd find out more. But, aside from the pace, it's going to be damned dangerous."

"Dangerous!" Jim ejaculated with scorn.

"Quiet!" Wendell warned. "They're coming!"

Jim gazed with him about the corner of the building. A door at the far end of the factory opened and two men stepped out into the shadow. They looked about and, apparently, saw nothing to disturb them. They took motorcycles which were leaning against the building, brought them to the street, and started away.

"Now!" Wendell cried; he was in the seat beside Jim as the car started and swiftly turned into the street and followed the cycles.

Ingouf and Emloe, looking back, saw the car; but, as they were riding at little more than ordinary pace and as the car yet made no attempt to overtake them, they could not be certain that they were followed. They went fast and turned a corner; the car followed, and when it pursued also about a second turn the men on the motorcycles no longer had doubt that the car was after them. They "opened up" and speeded faster. Jim's foot bore down on his accelerator and the car did not drop behind.

They were away from the little city now and running on an open road—one of the smooth, wonderful highways prepared for motorists. The cycles seemed gaining, and Jim threw the muffler from his exhaust to get every ounce of power and roared down the road after them. Wendell, leaning forward, watched the way and cried warning of bad spots or obstructions. The speed, which was above fifty miles an hour before they left the outskirts of the city, mounted higher and higher—sixty-five, seventy, seventy-five, seventy-eight! And at that pace the motorcycles still kept ahead.

Jim, tingling with the thrill of the man chase, drove to the turn ahead at full speed; he locked his rear wheels and went about, skidding, opened up again, and was after the cycles down the straight stretch.

Eighty the speedometer showed, and Wendell, clinging to the sides of his seat, cried Jim on. He gave the car all he had, knowing no more than that Bob must believe that the overtaking of Ingouf and Emloe that night was worth Bob's life and his own; and the riders of the motorcycles made it plain that their errand was worth any risk. The car had begun to gain upon one cycle, although the other still kept ahead. The rider of the slower machine—Ingouf—realized he was losing and seemed to be working his controls to give him in some way more speed; but that motorcycle could go no faster, and the car came upon it closer and closer.

"Look out!" Jim and Bob each cried the warning to the other at the same moment.

A round object—metallic from its glint in the moonlight as it fell and rolled in the road—dropped or was flung back from the motorcycle. Jim, swerving his wheels so that they would not strike it, dashed over the object while it was still rolling. And the car was barely over—it was not ten yards by—when an explosion rocked the air. Jim, his arms and legs all tense, his eyes staring ahead, held the car on its course.

"Go on!" Bob cried to him; and he saw, without looking around, that Wendell had a revolver in his hand now and was aiming it. "Keep on; I'm going to fire!"

The revolver roared twice, spitting its smoke before Jim's face; the rush of the air cleared the smoke, and Wendell fired twice again. The car was coming up fast upon the motorcycle, and the rider no longer tried to escape; instead, he slowed, leaped off his machine, and turned, metallic missile in hand, to fling it at the car pursuing him.

"Don't slow! Go by!" Bob commanded, firing again and once more as the car rushed by. Ingouf stooped at the first of these shots and, having fired his missile, drew back his arm. The last was fired in front of Jim and across him, but he was by Ingouf before he could see what it did; he was still steering the car at seventy miles an hour when he heard, behind him again, the detonation of an explosion, and Wendell, shouting, was telling him to stop.

He brought the car up as short as he could; he leaped down to the ground after Bob, who was running back beside the road, reloading the revolver as he ran. The motorcycle which had been ahead stopped far down the road; the rider—Emloe—jumped off and stood staring back. Jim watched him and, when he made no move, Jim grabbed a steel bar from his tool box and followed Wendell. He caught up with Bob, who had stopped and crouched fifty yards short of the spot where they had passed Ingouf. The man's motorcycle, lying on its side in the road and with the engine still running, marked the place; Ingouf had disappeared.

"I ought to have got him with that last," Wendell said; and as he spoke Jim was not ashamed that his breathing was coming hard. "But we'd better make sure. What's Emloe doing now?"

Jim looked about. "He's riding again; he's going away."

"Then we must get Ingouf!"

INTERVIEW WITH JUDGE CHARLES A. McDONALD.

(Being the first of a series of articles that will appear from time to time showing the attitude and opinions of prominent professional men regarding motion pictures... Judge McDonald of the Chicago Municipal court, one of the most eminent jurists in the country, granted the interview for today.)

I WANTED vurr', vurr' much to interview Judge McDonald, but it did seem as though I never was going to be able to catch the man. He was always "just mounting the bench" or "just dismissing court—would I call again in five minutes?" Surely. In five minutes when I would call it would be to find that his honor had "just gone to lunch." And so on.

MOFFETT PHOTO

Judge Charles A. McDonald.

One Saturday, however, proved to be my lucky day. He was "just going into court" when my message was delivered. He waited a moment and I corralled him.

"Could you see me today?" I questioned. There was a moment's hesitation at the other end of the wire.

"Why—if it's important, of course I could," he said then, pleasantly. "But—well—I have seventy-two default divorce cases to hear, and——"

"O," I said, hastily. "I wouldn't think of troubling you today. But if I could drop in Monday—before court——"

"Come along—9:30," he said, and I agreed and got off the line, for I knew it was time for court, and far be it from me to clog up the wheels of justice!

Promptly at twenty-eight and one-half minutes after 9 Monday morning I blew into the empty—or, that is, almost empty McDonald courtroom. It was not empty, because the clerk was there and he is a nice and obliging young man—if he hadn't been I'd have said it was empty.

"Judge McDonald," I said, briskly. "Please. I have an appointment." (I thought I'd add the last bit of information in case he might take me for a briberess.) He didn't act alarmed, as it was. Instead, he just asked me to be seated until his honor arrived. I sat, and while I did attorneys came, attorneys went, buzzing around together like a lot of busy bees. Several people came in and sat down on the long seats that look like pews in a church, but which aren't. I looked at the clock in the rear of the room. A quarter to 10.

"B-r-r-ridged!" I muttered behind clenched teeth. Just then the door to the chambers opened and a man spoke to the clerk, who arose and beckoned to me. Judge McDonald had arrived and would see me.

He rose and spoke courteously as I entered—a distinguished man in his early forties, I should judge, with thick blond hair turning gray and the pleasantest manner in the world—a manner, the urbanity of which might deceive a sinner who had failed to observe the steely keenness of the steady blue-gray eyes.

"I came to see you about pictures," I said, after we were seated.

"I'm a judge, not an artist," quoth he.

"Motion pictures," I elucidated.

"Ah-h, that's different," Judge McDonald remarked complacently. "I'm quite an authority on those."

"'S nice!" I purred. "What kind do you like best?"

A crafty expression stole over his honor's face.

"Historical pictures," he told me—and grinned.

"What historical picture did you see last?" I inquired suspiciously.

"I like all historical pictures," he said firmly—"all of 'em. And all educational films, too. I think they are of the greatest value to the youth of the country. And, for the rest of us who are not so young."

"So do I," I agreed. "You do believe in pictures, then, don't you? Think they're fine for the race and all that."

"Nothing better. Nothing saner," Judge McDonald answered. He added: "Provided the pictures are good."

"And that," I said, "brings up the question of censorship. What is a good picture?"

His honor looked at me thoughtfully. "It is a question, isn't it?" he said, after a moment. "It's a question which, I wonder, should be left entirely to the censors." He was silent for a moment.

"Well," I asked, "what do you think—should it?" And his honor replied, "No, I don't believe it should." And he was quiet again.

"I suppose there's an answer," I said, "for I believe you're right. What is the answer? Do you know it?" He leaned forward, speaking strongly.

"Municipal censorship," he said. "Let the people choose. The people choose their president, their aldermen, their judges. Why are not the people capable of picking the pictures they wish to see? They are. Taken as a whole, the public is a good judge of what is good for it, as well as what it wants. In regard to this matter as well as others. Let the public see the pictures, pass a verdict, and let the majority rule. Of course, this might be a difficult plan to work out, but it's the plan in my opinion that should be worked out if motion pictures are to arrive at the triumphant destiny that seems mapped out for them. Personally, I don't think it's fair to the public, the companies—anybody interested in this great industry—to allow a few people, prejudiced perhaps, weak livered perhaps, abnormally prudish perhaps—I don't say they always are—to say what a big hearted, normal, broad minded, red blooded public should see and what it should not see. Do you?" He shot the question at me. I jumped.

"I do not!" I said. "And now, having gotten your views on censorship, what do you think of motion pictures as a glue for holding families together, promoting family life—and that?"

"I think," the jurist said, "that they're a saving grace to the nation, that's what I think."

I got my breath and started to ask another question. But his watch was in his hand.

"I also think," he said whimsically, "that I mustn't allow a certain motion picture editor to stay any longer. It's five minutes after 10 now, and it's my job to be on the desk at 10. I'm sorry——"

"O," I said, jumping up and holding out my hand. "So'm I sorry—for keeping you. It's been so interesting that I forgot the time. Thank you and good-by."

His honor shook hands cordially. He held open the door for me. As I was half through it his voice detained me.

"Er—" said Judge McDonald—" Charlie Chaplin is pretty funny, isn't he?"

Antonio Moreno

ANTONIO MORENO has a history that is as romantic as his looks, and that's being some romantic, isn't it, girls? Born in Madrid, Spain, his family originally intended that he devote his life to the priesthood. He, too, had thought that the church was his vocation—but a beautiful girl came into his life and he changed his ideas. This lasted for a time, and when the storm had passed he found himself in love again—this time with the stage. It was not long before he proved that he had marked histrionic ability, and about four years ago he came to America, there to work his way to the front in his chosen profession. Between "legitimate" engagements he posed for the Vitagraph camera, and it was not long until he was under contract with this corporation. He has also done some work for the Biograph. Mr. Moreno is five feet ten inches tall, has black hair and dark brown eyes and weighs 170 pounds. He is vurr' athletic and loves dancing. He can sail a boat, drive a car—and all those things. Evidently perfectly adorable—and not married!

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

CATHERINE R.: I am glad to add you to my list of correspondents. You have a pretty name, I think. Ella Hall works at Universal City, Los Angeles, Cal. She has blue eyes, is a blonde, and is 5½ feet tall. Her picture appeared on the Right Off the Reel page in "The Frame of Public Favor" on May 2, 1915.

AH! AH! BE CAREFUL! REMEMBER I LAVENDER EASILY!

R. E. N.: Mr. Bushman does not blush, he lavenders.

H. M. N.: I cannot imagine why your questions were not answered, unless probably your letter was lost. It's a shame you have had to wait so long. Won't you write again asking the same questions?

A. B. C.: No, Beverly Bayne is not the wife of the great Mr. Bushman. He is married to a nonprofessional. Beverly Bayne is not married.

FAN: Dear, dear, I must be a terrible person if it takes my readers six weeks to get up courage enough to write to me. I assure you, however, that my bark is much, much worse than my bite, and I crave affection and love to have my head rubbed. Many of the movie stars answer personally the letters sent to them, others employ secretaries, and some make it a point to never answer. The only way you can find out just which ones will correspond with you is to write, inclosing stamped and self addressed envelopes, and wait returns. Yes, I think Pauline Frederick is beautiful. No doubt about it, Richard Bennett is a good actor. Both Pauline Frederick and Richard Bennett are married, or rather Miss Frederick was. I believe that she is divorced now. They very likely would mail you photographs if you would inclose 25 cents in stamps. Harold Lockwood was the handsome young man who played opposite Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country." Francis X. Bushman has blue eyes and brown hair. Well, of course, if you think you would turn into a question mark you had better stop. As far as I am concerned, though, you could keep right on asking questions without bothering me in the least.

M. D.: Henry King is married to Gypsy Abbott. He is in his 20s. If you will write to him in care of the Balboa company, Long Beach, Cal., the letter will reach him.

B. V. D.: Aren't you cold? In "The Spoilers" Bessie Eyton took the part of Helen Chester. In "The Lady of the Cyclamen" Guy Oliver played opposite Stella Razeto—at least I suppose it is Stella Razeto you mean; the only other woman't part was taken by Josephine Miller, who played Phyllis Hoyt. The names of the two people whose pictures you inclosed are Mary Maurice and Charles Kent. You're vurr, vurr welcome.

CHAPLIN FAVORITE: Mr. Charles Chaplin is an Englishman. Y'wekkum!

PUSS IN BOOTS: Such a nice lady! I am glad to be able to inform you that Mary Fuller is with the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York, and Grace Cunard is also with the Universal company, Universal City, Cal. The picture of the actress you mention has not appeared in the Frame of Public Favor. Reason? She has not received enough votes as yet.

LORA H.: That's lovely, Lora! Joseph La Badie is the father of Florence. No, he is not her director, he merely tends to her personal affairs. No wonder you like Elmer Clifton. A solid gold link is some little friendship binder. He is with the Triangle company, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York. I should say that he is quite blonde and medium height.

DOROTHY: In "The Alien" Thelma Salter took the part of Dorothy. Y'Wokkum.

GERTRUDE: Thomas Meighan played with Charlotte Walker in "Kindling." He was her husband. Yes, Marguerite Clarke's picture has appeared in the Frame. It appeared April 4, 1915. I am so glad you like the Right Off the Reel page. Thank you for telling me that you do. No bother at all. Write again some time.

JESS: Leo Delaney's hair is real. Does it give a false impression? He is in the twenties. Send twenty-five cents in stamps if you want his picture.

QUERIOUS W. N.: Glad to oblige you. Maurice Costello is now playing with the Vitagraph company. Mrs. Bushman is not an actress.

I. S. K.: Margarita Fischer is married to Harry Pollard, her director. He also acts opposite her in many of her pictures.

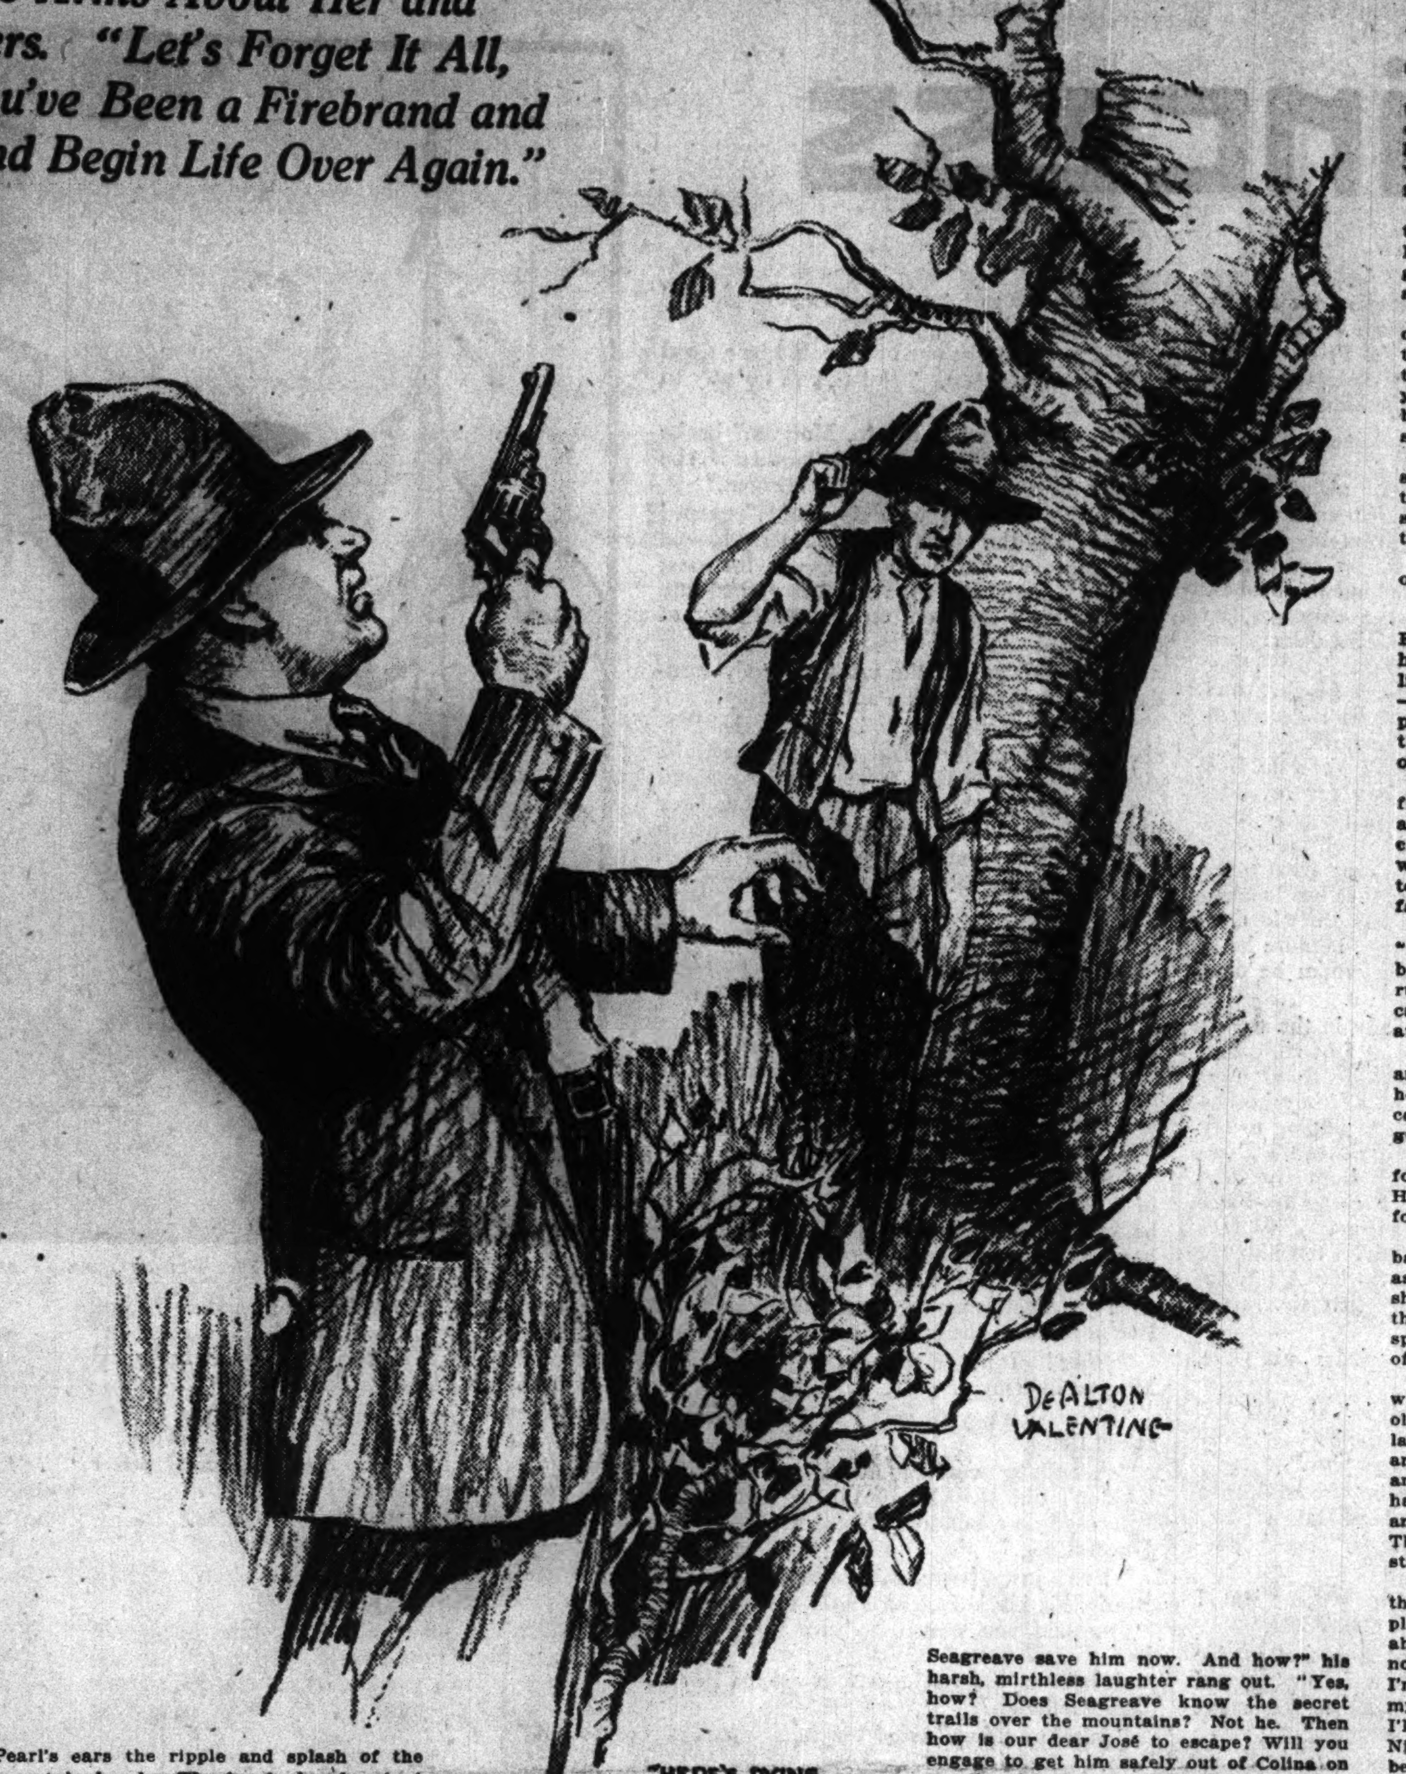
The BLACK PEARL by MRS. WILSON WOODROW

Seagreave Clasped His Arms About Her and Laid His Cheek on Hers. "Let's Forget It All, Pearl, Forget That You've Been a Firebrand and I've Been a Quitter, and Begin Life Over Again."



"HERE'S DYING TO YOU, HONEY."

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

At Paloma, Hanson, theatrical magnate, meets and falls in love with Pearl Gallito, the Black Pearl, a dancer whom he wants to put on the stage. He incurs the enmity of Hughie, her brother, her father, and Bob Flick, a suitor of Pearl's, who looks up Hanson's record and finds that he has a wife living in Colina. Hanson luckily also "gets something on them"—that they are concealing Crop Eared José, a fugitive from justice. The three are ignorant of Hanson's knowledge. Pearl, infatuated with Hanson, refuses to give him up in spite of his wife—that is, until Hanson makes a fearful break by inferring that her nickname, "The Black Pearl," refers to her character, not her coloring. Before this she was ready to elope and sign a contract with him. Afterward she scorns him and goes away to Colina to forget. Still, she refuses to sign a contract with Sweeney, rival theatrical man. In Colina she practices her dances, but fails to forget Hanson, who persistently communicates with her through Mrs. Gallito. In Colina she meets Crop Eared José, Mrs. Nitschkan, Mrs. Thomas, and Harry Seagreave—"Saint Harry"—who interests her. Hanson, desperate, meets Pearl at Colina. Pearl discovers she no longer loves him and says so. Hanson swears revenge—plans to send the sheriff after Crop Eared José. This he does. But the posse is frustrated through the efforts of Seagreave, whom Pearl really loves now, and Gallito and Flick. José is taken to a mountain hiding place, Seagreave and Pearl following. While there a snowslide takes place, preventing their escape for two weeks. This results in mutual love.

When they escape it is to find that Gallito has signed a contract with Sweeney for Pearl to go on the stage. She refuses to go, saying that she loves Seagreave. Gallito, infuriated, strikes at Seagreave, who falls over the cliff. Pearl and José rescue him from his perilous position.

CHAPTER XVI.

FOR the first few weeks after Harry's accident Pearl's consciousness of the external events in the world beyond the confines of the four walls of the cabin seemed obliterated. She could never remember afterward whether the rain fell or the days were flooded with sunshine. All of her energies and interests were absorbed in one issue—his recovery. Fortunately, his injuries proved more painful than dangerous, and were necessarily slow in mending; but the nursing was arduous, and Pearl might have found it difficult indeed had it not been for the assistance of the two mountain women and José.

It would be another matter to define correctly the motives that impelled that debonair bandit to stand by her side so manfully in the face of Gallito's wrath and reiterated prohibitions. It might have been a conscientious wish to earn the jewels, over the possession of which he had not ceased to gloat, or it might have been an impish desire to annoy Gallito. Again, it might have been gratitude toward Seagreave, sympathy with the Pearl, or, as easily the revolt of José's volatile nature against the monotony of life in the narrow confines of his rock chamber.

But to José's danger, as to the passing days, Pearl was alike oblivious, and it was not until Harry was able to sit up again for brief periods that she became aware of times and seasons, of other persons, and of the world of human interests and reactions. She awoke to a realization of these facts with a sort of wonder. She looked abroad over the hillsides and saw a new world. The long awaited spring had sped up from the valleys of mist, and at the wave of her white wand the mountains had bloomed with a delicate iridescence—the luster on young leaves and shining blades of grass. It was then that she also began to apprehend something of the nature of José's difficulties.

"I must be more virtuous than I thought," he explained to her one day, not without a touch of complacence, "for if the devil were truly my friend, he would fly away with your father. Those hawk's eyes of his are ever on me and he orders me daily not to leave the mine. If I could but cook for him," he added mournfully, "he would soon see reason, for," with customary boastfulness, "I have yet to see the man whose opinions I could not change with a single dish. I, Crop-eared José, have won freedom more than once on an omelette, and have gained the sympathy and interest of those set against me, with a single sauce. See, he even threatens me because I am true to my friends, but," and here he adopted his most wheedling tone, "if you would only make up with him, and I could but cook him one supper, here in this cabin, and let him win two or three games at cards from me, all would be well again."

"Ah, if I only could," sighed Pearl, "but he wouldn't listen to me unless I consented to leave Harry and sign with Sweeney. You know how set he is, when he makes his mind up. No, he won't listen to me unless I give in about this contract."

José nodded without speaking. For once he appeared to be turning something over in his mind. In truth, he was; he felt now that his comfort and safety largely depended upon a reconciliation between Pearl and her father, and he was prepared to take long chances in an attempt to effect this. Therefore he informed Gallito that from certain remarks Pearl had made from time to time, he, José, was convinced that her heart was greatly softened toward her father, and that for his part he was also convinced that she desired nothing more than to see Gallito again.

The old Spaniard knew José too well to put much faith in any of his utterances, but, nevertheless, inspired by a vague hope that Pearl might have repented her decision and wearied of her bargain, he climbed the hill to Seagreave's cabin the next afternoon to see her.

Harry had been sitting up longer than usual that day, and José and Pearl had helped him back to his couch in the inner room, where he now lay asleep, and Pearl had resumed her seat in the open door, where she sat gazing out at the wonderful panorama spread before her and idly enjoying the sight, the sound, the fragrance of early summer. Blue ranges, an infinite succession of them, stretching away to an illimitable and expanding horizon, floating in faint pearl hazes, but the hills near at hand were vividly green, their varied monotony of tone broken here and there by great waves of pink and blue wild flowers. Birds were flying from tree to tree, calling and singing, and there fell pleasantly upon Pearl's ears the ripple and splash of the mountain brook. The joy in her heart at Harry's recovery mingled pleasantly with nature's joy in her prodigal, flowering summer.

But all this harmonious blending of natural sounds and sights was broken by the sudden, harsh intrusion of human discord. Hearing footsteps near at hand, Pearl turned quickly to see her father standing almost at her elbow. Lean, gnarled, grizzled, and thorny as ever, he was gazing searchingly at her from under his overhanging, bushy brows.

So unexpected was the sight of him that Pearl showed plainly her uncontrollable surprise, which, courageous as she was, was not without a faint touch of fear. Her upper lip drew back from her teeth at the corners of the mouth and the frown so like his own darkened her brow. Rising, she had sprung to the doorway, stretching her arms from post to post as if to prevent him from entering, and he, noting that unconscious attitude of protection for the one within, smiled sourly.

"What are you doing here?" Her voice was harsh and so low that it was barely audible.

"No harm to you or him, either, so don't be scared. I got more important business in hand. I didn't come to quarrel with you, Pearl. I came to talk to you like you were a sensible girl." He had been rolling a cigaret between his fingers, and now he lighted it, and for a moment watched the smoke wreaths drift upward.

"Patience takes most of the tricks in life, I've learned, so I waited until I heard that he was all right again"—he jerked his thumb toward the cabin—"and then I waited until you had time to think, and that's all I'm here to ask you to do, my girl, think."

Again he gazed deeply at her, nodding his head as if to emphasize his words. Gallito could be impressive, even magnetic when he chose, and he chose now.

"I can think a-plenty," returned Pearl curtly, "but what is it you want me to study about now? If it's about signing up with Sweeney, I can tell you once and forever that it's no use. You're just wasting your breath."

His face darkened a little, his eyes gave one quick, wicked flash, but he controlled his temper. "Maybe, maybe," he said placatingly, "but that ain't all I came to talk about. I guess I've lived long enough to know that it's no use to talk to a woman about her interests when she's lost her head about some man." He showed his teeth in a wolfish and contemptuous smile. "No, I ain't such a fool as to waste my breath that way. You are an awful headstrong and wilful girl. Carraja! I do not know where you get such qualities. But somewhere back in your head you have inherited from me, your father, a grain of sense and reason, and because of that I come here today, not to try and coax you, no, I know better than that, but to talk to you as man to man." He paused here as if to let some underlying meaning in his words impress her, and she, unconscious of this, felt a sudden shiver of apprehension run over her, a momentary despair, as if she were being entangled in some yet invisible net whose meshes were being drawn tight about her. A quick glance at Gallito failed to restore her confidence. There was a look upon his face which did not betoken any expectation of defeat. Again she shivered; he had spoken truly, he was not one to plead, and he would not be here unless he felt that he was in possession of certain arguments which must inevitably coerce her to yield.

"Now, Pearl," his tone was still placating, "for your own sake and for the sake of your future, I am not willing that you should miss this great offer which Sweeney has made you. You have already treated him badly once. He knows he cannot depend on you. How many times do you think he will stand that? You can't afford to do it. I have been holding him off and holding him off until I can't do it any more, and we must now come to a final agreement. And one thing more," he stopped a second to light another cigaret, "what about Hughie? You and he have worked out a lot of dances together. He's got his heart set on traveling with you and playing for you. I don't see how you got the heart to spoil all his plans." For the first time there was a touch of real emotion in his voice; it was Hughie, not Pearl, who held the first place in his heart.

A quiver passed over Pearl's face. "O, I am sorry about Hughie," she cried, "but what can I do? I can't leave Harry. It's no use asking me to do that." She looked up at Gallito and, in spite of her tears, there was an immovable resolve on her face, and, seeing this, a slow, dark flush crept up her father's cheeks.

"Listen, Pearl," he said, and although he still held the manner of reasoning amicably with her, there was a touch of iron in his grating voice, "I'm here to make terms with you and to keep the relations which should be between father and daughter, but there are many things to consider when a girl is as obstinate as a pig. Then it is her father's duty to decide for her and to see that she does what an obedient and well brought up girl should do, and he must use what means are in his power to make her see the right way."

"There are no means in your power to make me see things differently," she said, "yours or anybody else's."

"So!" he said slowly, and flicked the ashes from his cigaret with a hand which trembled slightly. "But all my cards are not played yet. You think that everything shall go your way, but that is not life; no, that is not life. Since you have none of the feelings of respect and obedience which a child should have for a parent, it shall be a game between us. Now, at once, I will play my trump card." There was a grim and saturnine triumph in his voice. "José!"

She started and looked at him askance, puzzled and yet fearful. "José!" she repeated uncertainly.

"Yes, José. José has been useful to you, and José has spent all his time with you and him." He nodded his head in the direction of the inner room. "I have warned him." There was a quiver of passion and resentment in his voice. "I have pointed out to him again and again the risks that he was running not only for himself but me. Yet for me—me who has befriended him at the risk of my own life, who has kept him in my cabin for many months, he has no thought, no gratitude. That all goes to Seagreave, Seagreave who stole you and who now lies strapped in his bed unable to help you or José or any one else. Well, let Seagreave save him now. And how?" his harsh, mirthless laughter rang out. "Yes, how? Does Seagreave know the secret trails over the mountains? Not he. Then how is our dear José to escape? Will you engage to get him safely out of Colina on a railroad train? I think not. Remember, there is a big price on his head."

Pearl had shrunk back from him while he was speaking, both horror and fright on her face. "But you can't do that for your own sake," she cried. "It will then be known that you have kept José all these months, and that it was he who escaped the night I danced. Do you think the sheriff will forgive you that you lied to him and fooled him? I guess not. And then you sheltered José and hid him after that. On your own account you can't let him be taken."

Gallito smiled in unpleasant triumph. "If I should turn state's evidence for so notorious a criminal as Crop-eared José I should certainly get immunity myself. I was weak, yes, in my unfortunate desire to reform a fellow countryman, but finding all my efforts hopeless, I at last saw my duty and gave him up."

For the moment fear almost overcame Pearl, and then her high spirit flared. "And you would give poor José up," she said. "I would never have believed it, and yet I see you really would do it, just to have me obey your will. But you can't do it, and you won't do it. I tell you now, if you even dare threaten such a thing, I will send for the sheriff and tell him the whole story. I will let him know what you are. And more, too"—she made quick steps toward him—"I will have you arrested for assaulting Harry."

"Ho, ho!" he laughed loudly. "Self-defense, my girl, self-defense. Who could prove anything else? Who would take your word under the circumstances?"

"But I will tell you more, much more," she cried, all aflame now. "I will tell of all the cut-throats and thieves you have sheltered in your cabin from time to time. I know their names and I will prove what I say. I will show them the chamber in the mine where José is hiding. What will they think of that? You have a high standing in Colina and in other places. You are respected. Are you willing to give all that up just so you can force me to sign with Sweeney? I don't believe it, I won't believe it. But as sure as you don't help José to escape, so sure will I do what I say. O," she stopped suddenly, a sob in her voice, "O, here comes Bob, Bob and Hughie!" For the first time she left the doorway in which she had remained protectingly, and ran forward to meet the two who were rapidly mounting the hill.

"O, Bob!" she cried. "O, Hughie! I knew you two wouldn't go back on me. I knew you'd come sooner or later, both of you."

Hughie clung to her, one arm around her, and Flick's hard and impassive face softened a little as he gazed at her. "Why, Pearl, what's the matter?" he asked. "You look pale, and tears! Why, that ain't a mite like you! Has he been cutting up rough," he glanced toward her father, "and worrying you?"

"Why didn't you come before?" She lifted her shadowed eyes to his.

He winced a little, his mouth twisting slightly. "Ain't it enough that I've come now?" Something in his voice conveyed even to her who had so long taken his unwearying devotion without question and as a matter of course what it had cost him to seek her again.

They had drawn near the cabin by this time and Flick looked at Gallito's frowning face a moment. "Are you needing me, Pearl?" His drawling voice was as lazily indifferent as ever, but his glance held an intimation of danger for Gallito which the old man did not fail to understand.

"Maybe," Pearl replied in a low voice. "You 'most always come when I need you, Bob."

"I guess your interference ain't needed now, Flick," began Gallito. "I can——"

Hughie ran his hand caressingly down the old Spaniard's sleeve. "No need to tell old Bob that we're a united family, Pop," he cried. "Why, I'm already composing a wedding march." He caught his adopted father's hand in his.

At this mute expression of affection from the being who was nearest his heart, Gallito's face softened a little, although he gazed back at Bob Flick with a baffled and still scornful smile.

"Well," he said reluctantly, "it ain't often I confess I'm beat, but I guess I'm too old to stand both Hughie and the girl taking sides against me, not to speak of you, Flick, and I know if it came to a choice between me and those two where you'd stand."

"There ain't going to be any sides taken," said Flick. "We are going to give in and take what's coming to us, Gallito, like sensible men, whether we like it or not. When's the wedding, Pearl?"

A great, beautiful wave of crimson swept over her face.

"Harry wants it right away," she said.

"The sooner the better," remarked Bob Flick dryly. "And, by the way"—he put his hand in his pocket and drew out the little black leather bag she had given José—"José sent you back this for a wedding present. Honest, he didn't keep out more than three stones. Why," a flash of alarm on his face, "what's the matter, Hughie?"

The blind boy was standing a little apart from the rest. His head was thrown up and his face was pale. He was nervously clinching and unclinching his hands, but with that exception his attitude was one of tenseness and singular stillness, as if every faculty were concentrated.

"There's something about," he gasped, "something bad. I can't tell what it is yet, but I'll know in a minute. Ah-hh!" He rushed across the open space before the cabin and into the trees that grew thickly at the side.

It took Flick but a second to follow him, and the next moment Pearl and her father heard him call. "Come out. I got you covered, but I'll thank you first for your gun."

Gallito also started forward now, but before he had taken more than a step or two Hugh emerged first from the underbrush, followed by Hanson and then by Flick.

Seeing who it was, Pearl had shrunk back into the shadow of the room, but then, as if forcing herself to an unpleasant task, she came forward again and leaned against the door post, nonchalant and disdainful in spite of her pallor and the faint trembling of her lower lip.

Hanson swept off his hat and bowed low with exaggerated courtesy and much of his old swagger. The heavy dissipation of the last few months was evident in a marked and shocking way. His figure was gross and bloated, and his bold, ruddy good looks had vanished; his swollen face was purple an the features seemed curiously thickened. The hand which held his hat trembled constantly.

"Again we meet," he cried. "Well, under the circumstances, I've no objection. You pleasant little band of thieves have got ahead of the honest man once or twice, but not for keeps. This is my day, thank you. I'm not giving away information ahead of my time again, but, just between friends, I'll mention that the sheriff is overdue at Nitschkan's cabin, where José happens to be. They'll be up after the rest of you presently."

"Carraja!" Gallito ground his teeth, "and I left him at the mine." Then quickly to Pearl, "Suppose he should get away from them. Are both horses in the stable?"

"Both," she said. "Hurry, you get on one and I will have the other ready for him. Come, I will help you. Hugh, get down to Nitschkan's and warn them if you can."

Gallito ran through the cabin after her. This commotion roused Seagreave and, after calling once or twice to Pearl and receiving no answer, he made his way to the doorway, appearing there, thin and white, still upon crutches.

"Hello, Seagreave," called Hanson, still with his air of bravado. "You've been a long time coming to that door. I been sitting back in the bushes watching for you as patient as a cat watches a mouse-hole, with my gun all cocked and my finger on the trigger, ready to pick you off the minute you showed up. Nothing against you personally, but the Black Pearl didn't spare me, so why should I—oh, you needn't reach for your gun. Good old Bob, ain't that what the Pearl calls him, has got me covered."

"So have I for that matter," said Seagreave.

"All right, if it amuses you." Hanson shrugged his shoulders indifferently and leaned up against a tree which, growing before the cabin, had escaped the sweep of the avalanche. "Lord! Don't I know what you two cut-throats stand ready to do to me? And no one any the wiser. Well, what the hell do I care? But, say, Seagreave, since we're all having this nice little afternoon tea talk together, sociable as a Sunday school, it might do you good to take some account of the has-beens. Here's Bob, he had her before I did, but that ain't taking away the fact that I had her once, by God! I guess everybody understands that there's more behind those emeralds than the pretty story we've all heard so often. The Black Pearl certainly ain't cheap."

"Let him alone, Harry." Bob Flick's voice arrested Seagreave in his swift rush toward Hanson had never been more liquid, more languid. All through Hanson's speech his face had not shown even a flicker of expression. "This is mine. It always has been mine, and I've known it ever since you and me, Mr. ——, I never can recall your name, but, then, yellow dogs ain't entitled to 'em, anyway—met in the desert."

"I guess that's straight. You always had it in for me from the first night I saw her. Well, you'll only be finishing what she begun. She broke me; she drove me straight to hell. Maybe it was a misspent life I offered her, but when I met her I had money and success; I wasn't a soak. I still had the don't-give-a-damn snap in me, and, even if you're middle aged, that's youth. But she's like a fever that you can't shake off. And she don't play fair. But she's the only one. You know that, Bob Flick, and she didn't have the right——"

"I ain't questioned her right, Hanson"—Flick used his name for the first time—"and I'm standing here to prove it now. For the sake of Miss Gallito, because she once took notice of you, I'm going to treat you like you was a gentleman. Here's your gun. Take your twenty paces. And, remember, this ain't to wound; it's to kill."

Hanson took the pistol and measured off the paces. Then he turned and looked from one man to another with a smile of triumph on his evil face. "Broke by the Black Pearl and then shot by her dog! That's a nice finish. I can shoot some myself, but I ain't in your class, Flick, and you know it. I guess not. I prefer my own route." He looked toward the cabin, where it seemed to him that Pearl or her shadow wavered for a moment in the doorway. "Here's dying to you, honey," and before either man could stop him he lifted his pistol and shot himself through the heart.

* * * * * * *

In the meantime certain events of more importance than the passing of Hanson, to those involved, were taking place in Mrs. Nitschkan's cabin. As soon as Gallito had left the mine and taken his way up to Seagreave's José also had departed from his cell by way of the ravine and had hastened to the abode of Mrs. Nitschkan, where he and Mrs. Thomas were soon absorbed in the composition of various appetizing dishes, for with the connivance of the two women José hoped that evening again to subjugate Gallito with the spell of his cookery, and win back the indulgence he had been steadily losing.

The afternoon, then, was passing most pleasantly for both Mrs. Thomas and himself, when suddenly the door was flung open and Mrs. Nitschkan, who had been fishing in a creek farther down the hill, came dashing in.

"José," she cried, "the sheriff and his boys is all out after you again. There's nobody else they'd want up this way. They couldn't keep under cover all the way, for they had to cross the bridge, and I happened to see 'em then. Get out quick through the trees for Harry's cabin."

"But I don't know the secret trail."

"Gallito does. Anyway, cut for it an' maybe I can throw them off the scent. Gosh a'mighty! Cut for it. They're here."

With one last, hasty kiss on Mrs. Thomas' cheek, José was out of the door like a flash.

"Now quick, Marthy." Mrs. Nitschkan had seized a pair of scissors and cut the pocket from her skirt, tucking the roll of bills which it contained into her man's boot. "Cry, Marthy, cry like you never cried before. Go on, I say. Yelpin's your strong suit. Now yelp."

With that she fell to swearing lustily herself and throwing the furniture about, even turning the stove over and sending a great shower of soot about the room.

At the height of all this noise and confusion, dominated, it must be said, by Mrs. Thomas' loud and, to do her justice, sincere weeping, there came a thunderous knocking on the door, and without waiting to have it answered the sheriff threw it open and stepped in.

"Holy smoke!" he cried. "What you knockin' down the cook stove for?"

"'Cause I'm fighting mad, that's why," returned Mrs. Nitschkan tartly, "and I sure am glad to see you. I've been robbed, that's what. Ain't that so, Marthy?"

Mrs. Thomas lifted her tear stained face and corroborated this with mournful nods.

"Whilst I was takin' a little nap," went on Mrs. Nitschkan excitedly, "a rascal brother of Gallito's who shouldn't never have been let out of jail cut the pocket clean out of my skirt and stole my roll. Look here!" exhibiting the jagged hole, and also the empty pocket which lay upon the floor, "I just waked up to find him gone. He can't have got far, though. I guess he thinks I ain't on to that rock chamber Gallito blasted out for him in the Mont d'Or, but he showed it to Marthy here, and she showed it to me. Come on, and we'll get down there quick."

"Some of us will." The sheriff was inclined to believe her, and yet he was still suspicious. A rock chamber in the Mont d'Or! That certainly accounted for the miraculous escape of last winter.

"Pedro?" he asked. "Are you sure it ain't José?"

"I ain't heard of any José, have you, Marthy?" asked Mrs. Nitschkan innocently. "Pedro was his name. But come on quick."

"Two of you boys search this cabin and the woods around," ordered the sheriff, "and two of you go up to Seagreave's cabin. The rest come along with me."

Led by Mrs. Nitschkan, still volubly lamenting her loss, they started down the hill toward the ravine, when the sheriff suddenly looked up to see upon the crest of the hill just before it dipped into a descending slope two horsemen at full gallop, both horses and riders outlined against the sky.

"Our men are up there, boys," he cried. "Quick. I've got the fastest horse in the county, and we'll get them before they get to three rocks."

He was back to his horse again and on it and up the hill before his men were fairly in the saddle. It was a race after that, and so rapidly did he gain on Gallito and José that it looked as if his prediction of getting them before they reached three rocks was about to be verified. "I must do it, I must do it," he kept muttering to himself, "for it's bad going after that, and it'll take us all some time to find him."

He was lessening the distance between them with every long, powerful stride of his horse, but already the three rocks, gaunt and high, loomed before him as if forming an impassible barrier across the road. Suddenly, just as José and Gallito had almost reached them and the sheriff was gaining upon the fugitives in great leaps, he saw them swerve their horses aside and dash into a clump of trees to the right of the rocks.

"O, the fools! the fools! I got 'em now. Instead of going for the rocks, they've made for the trees."

A few minutes later he and his men found the horses ridden by Gallito and José blown and hard breathing among the trees, but no trace could they discover of the men they sought. Beyond the three rocks the character of the hills changed strikingly. Instead of the wide, undulating, wooded plateau, over which riding was so easy, the mountains suddenly seemed split by mighty gashes, a great pocket of crevasses and towering cliffs.

The sheriff and his men beat about aimlessly and conscientiously for several hours, but in vain. José and Gallito had long before "hit" the secret trail. So finally the sheriff, who was inclined to put less faith than ever in Hanson's representations, and convinced in his own mind that Gallito was merely conniving at the escape of an unregenerate brother, and that Mrs. Nitschkan's tale was true, called off his men and rode home. "The cuss ain't important," he remarked, "and I guess Gallito'll be glad enough to make up Nitschkan's loss to her and keep her mouth shut."

* * * * * * *

It was evening. Pearl and Seagreave sat in the door of the cabin. Her head drooped, her hands lay listlessly in her lap, and her brooding gaze was fixed on the soft, dark night. "O," she cried at last, "how can I do anything but leave you? Look at the mischief I've done in the world. Look at it!"

Seagreave clasped his arms about her and laid his cheeks on hers. "Let's forget it all, Pearl, forget that you've been a firebrand and I've been a quitter, and begin life all over again. There's only one thing in it, anyway, and that's love."

"Just love," she answered softly. "Well, love's enough."

THE GATE HOUSE STORIES.

BY
WM. DONAHEY.

ONE cold wet afternoon, as Mr. Binjy related a story to a group of his friends who clustered about the stove in the little gatehouse, the door suddenly flew open and Morgan Drew popped in.

"Jinks, I'm glad you're all here," he shouted. "I've got something I want to read to you—I've written a play!"

"A movie play?" asked Jeff Blinn.

"I should say not," exclaimed Morgan. "This is a regular Shakespearean play!"

"Who is going to act the parts?" asked Betty Mead.

"Our crowd. I've got parts for most of you. Beany, I want you for manager."

The colored boy grinned and nodded.

"What's the play about?" inquired the old gateman.

"It's about a Princess who was turned into a dog, because a wicked Prince—O, I'll read the plot to you," said Morgan, fishing a bunch of scratched and blotted paper from his pocket.

He cleared his throat and began:

"'THE LOST PRINCESS.

"'Act I.—Scene I.

"'A wicked Prince falls in love with a beautiful Princess and asks her hand in marriage. She refuses, and the Prince swears to have revenge.

"'Scene II.—He goes to an old witch, who hates the Princess. The witch agrees to turn the Princess into a wolf hound, on condition that the Prince will beat the dog severely every day.

"'Act II.

"'One day, as the Prince is beating the hound a huntsman, who happens along, objects to the brutal treatment, and asks the Prince to stop. The Prince, filled with rage, draws his sword and rushes at the huntsman. The huntsman draws his sword and a furious battle takes place. After the two have fought for some time the huntsman knocks the sword from the Prince's hand. As the Prince stoops to pick up his weapon the dog grabs the sword and runs away with it, and the huntsman kills the Prince.

"'Act. III.

"'Two fairies dance merrily about among trees and leaves. The huntsman enters, staggering from loss of blood from his wounds received in the duel. The fairies are frightened at the sight and hide behind the bushes. The huntsman staggers to the center of the stage, where he faints. The fairies, sorry for him, come out from the bushes. They bring a leaf filled with water and bathe his face, and soon he opens his eyes and tells them about the Prince and the dog. The fairies tell the huntsman of the wicked Prince—how he had the Princess turned into a dog for revenge, and that, now he is dead, she will change back to a Princess again. The fairies tell the huntsman that if he wishes he may marry the Princess, for she is bound to offer her hand to her deliverer. The huntsman tells them he does not wish to marry the Princess, because he is in love with a beautiful lady whom he does not know.

"'He tells of seeing this lady in the woods one day, how he fell in love at first sight and vowed never to marry unless he could have her for his wife. He tells how vainly he has searched for the beautiful lady, hoping to lay his heart at her feet. As he finishes the Princess, who has been changed from the dog, enters. The fairies run to her and lead her to the huntsman, who sits on a log, his face buried in his hands. The fairies tell him the Princess is before him, and when he looks up he finds to his great joy that she is the lady he loves.'"

"O how perfectly dear," cried Paula Gale, enthusiastically.

"Bully—that's what I call it," shouted Jeff Blinn, slapping his friend on the back. "Only I wish you had written a scout play."

"Well, I couldn't put a boy scout into a play that is supposed to have taken place hundreds of years ago, could I?" asked Morgan.

"No—of course not," said Jeff. "But I mean a play of today, about boy scouts."

"O, listen, Jeff," explained Morgan, "you've got to have some love making in a play, and how are you going to make a scout get mushy? I tell you it can't be done."

"Where are you going to give your play?" asked practical Betty Mead.

"Why, I thought our barn would be a good place," said Morgan. "But there's no way to heat it, and I——"

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Morgan," broke in Lisetta Bancroft; "I'll ask mother if she will let us give the play in our ballroom."

"Crickety! O, if we only could!" gasped Morgan, and the rest of the little party looked their approval with wide open eyes, for most of them had at some time or other peeped into the wonderful ballroom on the third floor of the Bancroft house.

"It would be just the most perfectly wonderful place," burst out Paula, excitedly.

"O, it's just too good to be true," cried Persis Gale, and catching Lisetta about the waist she tried to waltz that prim little lady about the tiny house while the others, pulling back their toes to save them from being trodden on, laughed at Lisetta's expression of outraged dignity, as the boisterous twin swung her around.

"You perfectly awful tomboy," scolded Paula, who was almost as severe and dignified as Miss Bancroft. "Why do you behave so badly?"

"O, I suppose it's because I just perfectly grew that way," mimicked Persis, with such a good imitation of her sister, that even the ruffled twin and Lisetta joined in the laugh. Nobody could be angry at Persis long.

"Say, Specs," said Jeff Blinn, who was fond of dogs, and made it one of his scout duties to be kind to all the animals of the neighborhood, "I'm pretty well acquainted with the dogs around here, and I've been wondering where you're going to get a wolf hound, for I've never seen one in this locality."

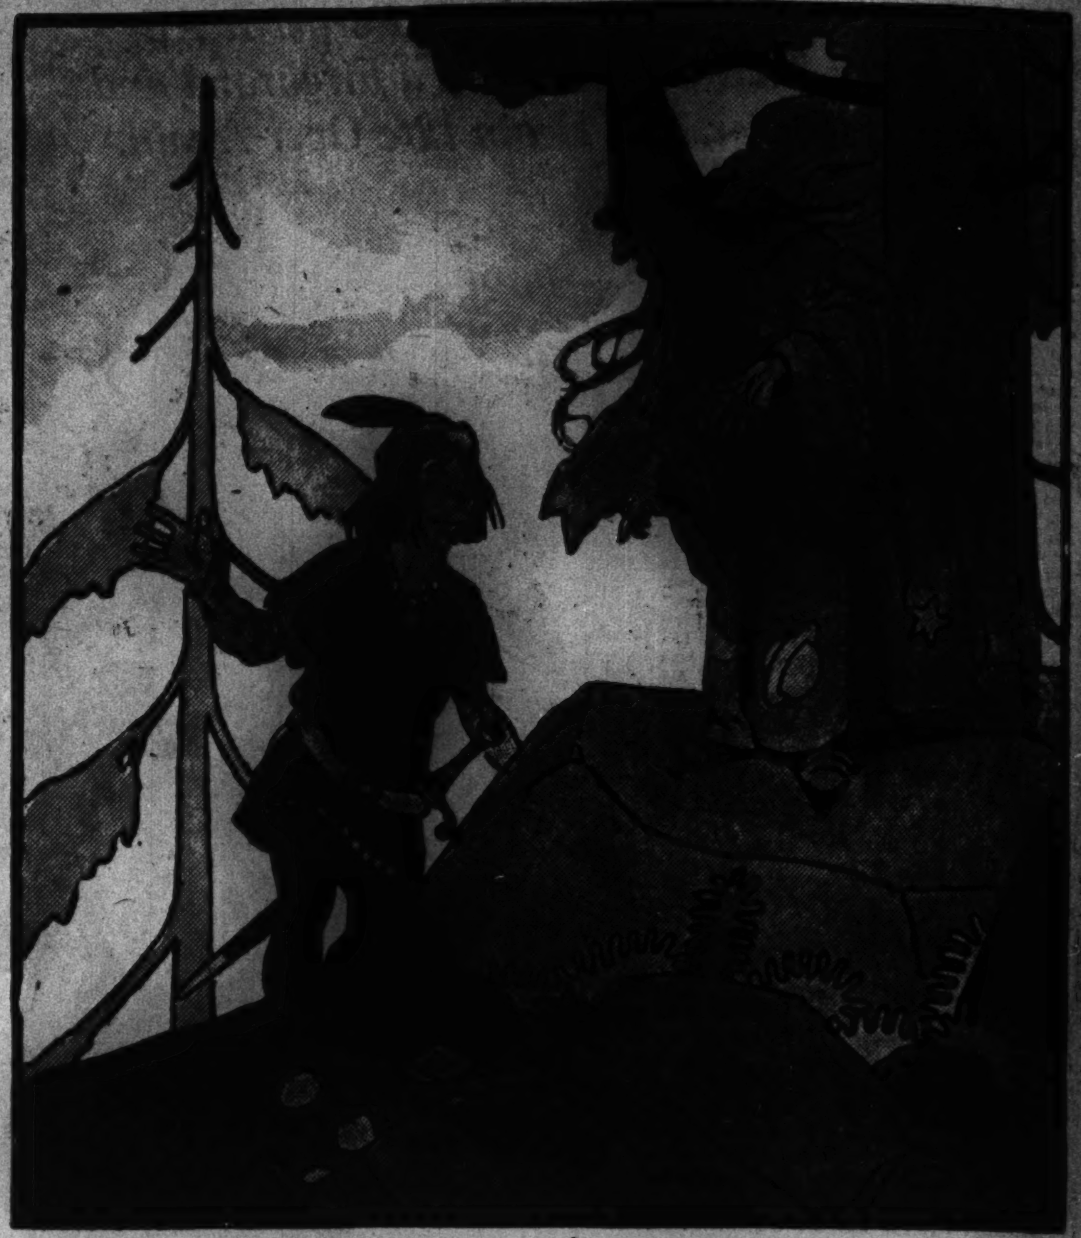
"Jinks! I never thought of that!" cried Morgan in dismay.

"Why don't you get Payne's bulldog?" asked Betty.

"A bulldog wouldn't fit in," said Morgan. "I don't like the idea of turning a beautiful Princess into a bulldog. No, it must be a big, graceful dog."

"I've just been calculating," observed Beany, his black face all alight with the idea. "You said you wanted to turn the Princess into a wolf hound. Well, you can't find no wolf hound. Do you 'spect our old fox hound, Jim, would do?"

"Just the thing," cried Persis. "The Princess would, of course, be sad at finding herself a dog, and a fox hound, with his eyebrows drawn up in the center, looks so awfully sorrowful—just like a Gibson girl."



"The Prince goes to an old witch."

"You're right," grinned Morgan. "Old Jim will do. But—he's black and brown. I wanted a white dog. Makes a much better stage appearance."

"We can fix that easy," nodded Beany. "Just give him a coat of whitewash."

"Great, Beany," cried Morgan. "Say, you're a born stage manager!"

"You can make old Jim white, but you'll have a hard time makin' him act," grinned Beany. "He's pretty pert, but I don't think he'll know enough to run away with that sword."

"O that's easy," said Morgan. "You just starve Jim three days before the performance and then tie a piece of beefsteak to the handle of that sword—when the Prince drops it, old Jim'll be so hungry he'll grab at the meat and run off with the whole thing."

"Land sakes," grinned Beany, "you done starve old Jim for three days he done gobble up sword and all."

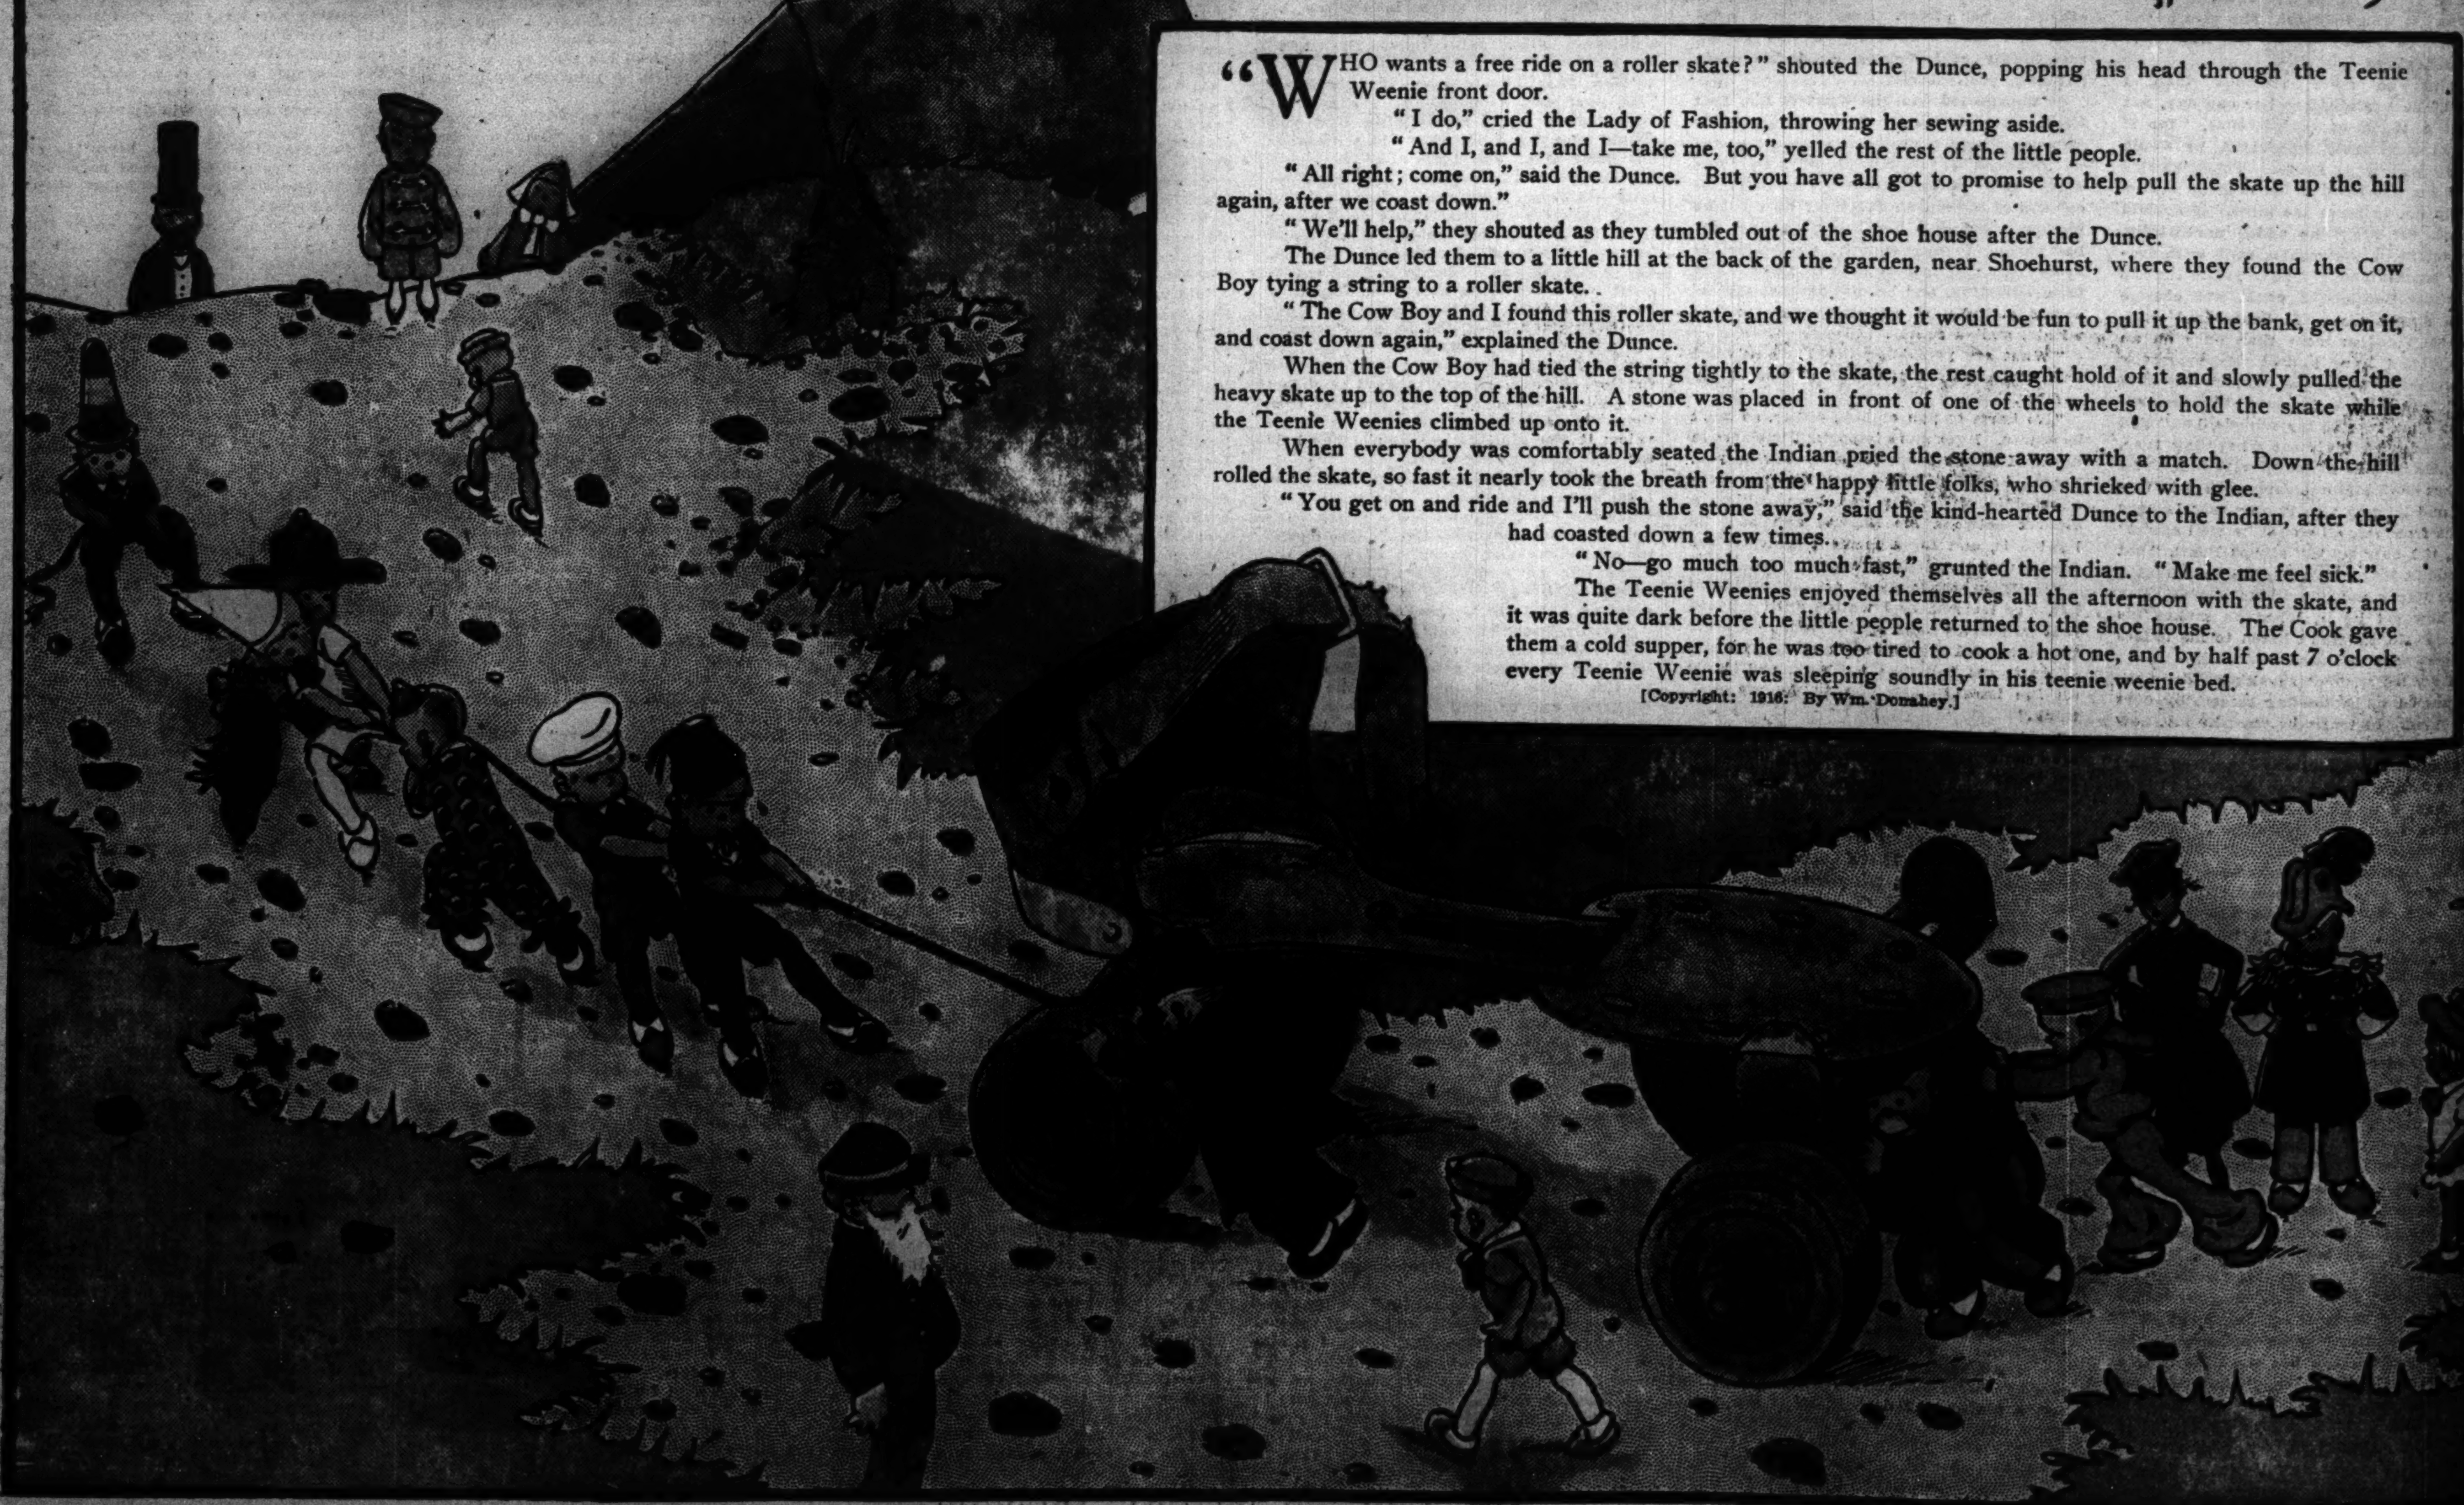
But nothing could now dampen the ardor of the author, the actors, or even of Mr. Binjy, who was as interested in the doings of the children as they were themselves.

Nothing but stage matters was takled about at the little gatehouse by the crossing for many days.

Another Gate House story will appear next week.

The TEENIE WEENIES GO COASTING ON A ROLLER SKATE.

BY
WM. DONAHEY



"WHO wants a free ride on a roller skate?" shouted the Dunce, popping his head through the Teenie Weenie front door.

"I do," cried the Lady of Fashion, throwing her sewing aside.

"And I, and I, and I—take me, too," yelled the rest of the little people.

"All right; come on," said the Dunce. But you have all got to promise to help pull the skate up the hill again, after we coast down."

"We'll help," they shouted as they tumbled out of the shoe house after the Dunce.

The Dunce led them to a little hill at the back of the garden, near Shoehurst, where they found the Cow Boy tying a string to a roller skate.

"The Cow Boy and I found this roller skate, and we thought it would be fun to pull it up the bank, get on it, and coast down again," explained the Dunce.

When the Cow Boy had tied the string tightly to the skate, the rest caught hold of it and slowly pulled the heavy skate up to the top of the hill. A stone was placed in front of one of the wheels to hold the skate while the Teenie Weenies climbed up onto it.

When everybody was comfortably seated the Indian pried the stone away with a match. Down the hill rolled the skate, so fast it nearly took the breath from the happy little folks, who shrieked with glee.

"You get on and ride and I'll push the stone away," said the kind-hearted Dunce to the Indian, after they had coasted down a few times.

"No—go much too much fast," grunted the Indian. "Make me feel sick."

The Teenie Weenies enjoyed themselves all the afternoon with the skate, and it was quite dark before the little people returned to the shoe house. The Cook gave them a cold supper, for he was too tired to cook a hot one, and by half past 7 o'clock every Teenie Weenie was sleeping soundly in his teenie weenie bed.

ALTHOUGH the woods fragrant with the gentle rains of spring always possess an irresistible lure, yet at this time the city, with its endless procession of autos, its gayly trimmed shop windows, its throngs of people, invites the attention of women whose interests demand the wearing of beautiful clothes.

In the models pictured on this page three delightful styles are shown. Beautiful in color the afternoon costume at the left is exceedingly interesting. It is fashioned from a biscuit colored taffeta and a novel idea is revealed in the trimming on the overskirt, for this is made of chintz motifs mounted with silver thread. The fullness of the skirt is arranged in the front, while the overskirt is prettily shirred at the sides and back, touches of silver adding much to the beauty of the gown. The sleeves are cuffed in a style that matches the beading on the skirt, while the corsage is designed on simple but graceful lines.

The quaint bonnet is made of Italian straw, crested with ostrich plumes of the biscuit color, while the soft ribbon ties are developed in silk of matching shade.

Vivid color is found in the shawl of burnt orange silk charmeuse, which is finished with a handsome silk fringe, for with the return of picturesque modes the old time accessories that played such an important part in the days of long ago are once again in vogue with the followers of eccentric Dame Fashion.

Equally charming is the afternoon frock at the right, for this picturesque dress is originated in an exquisite violet organdie over pink taffeta. Violet taffeta is used for the basque, and this is richly embroidered with bead motifs that accentuate its old time beauty. Trim little bows adorn the ruchings that outline the basque, while the dainty sleeves are also trimmed with small plaitings of the organdie. A double collar of this lovely fabric falls lightly around the shoulders, and its simplicity contrasts sharply with the elaborately trimmed bonnet. This, by the way, is developed in mauve tinted leghorn adorned with pink and gray miniature roses. Beneath this adornment a valance of mauve embroidered tulle is cleverly disposed and adds a charming finish to the bonnet.

Still another interesting accessory is depicted in the cashmere shawl which is covered with gray and silver embroidery.

The tailleur that centers the picture is fashioned from a pale blue Shantung, a fabric that is much in demand not only for the suit, but also the sports coat. In the model pictured an attractive idea is noted on the skirt, which is topped with a plaited frill that gradually lengthens as it passes towards the back. The peplum on the jacket follows the line of the overdress and as it is cut with ample width it falls in graceful folds.

The tailored hat illustrated with this costume is made of Neapolitan straw with soutache braid in delightful shades of old gold.

Some of the most effective Shantung suits show a clever use of color combined with the natural toned silk. Stripes play an important part. Not infrequently narrow stripes—at least those about half an inch or even one inch in width—are used on collar and cuffs, while stripes are also featured on the skirts. When, however, the designer seeks an unusual effect—one, in fact, not yet achieved by the loom—bands of contrasting color in varying widths are cleverly appliqued so that a novel trimming is obtained.

Another fabric that is much liked for the spring suit is djersettia, a woven material that seems somewhat like the favored jersey cloth. This new material is found in all the lovely bright colors, as well as white, which is always in demand for the summer suit.

As styles tend largely towards the picturesque there are many indications that the one piece dress will enjoy great popularity this season. Lovely satins, taffetas, coin spotted foulards and Shantungs, crêpe Georgette, and silk voiles are chosen for the fashioning of the new frocks, and as some of the most exquisite modes are inspired by the lovely visions of the beautiful women who graced the courts of famous French kings one finds that quaint bead and straw trimmings are now in fashion.

MEN AND WOMEN

An echo of a breach of promise suit in which $17,000 worth of heartsease was awarded the central figure, is revived in the prosecution set for an early date of the male figure in the case under the Mann act indictment.

Recently in a restaurant I sat near the woman who received the award. As I looked at her baby doll eyes and her more or less ingénue demeanor, I tried to analyze the state of mind to which any woman must reduce herself before willingly submitting to a court and public print airing of a life that were better left unrevealed.

Breach of Promise Suits.

Some one called the lust for gold "the paradise and hell of modern civilization." And lust for gold seems to me to be the only explanation of a breach of promise suit. Certainly there is no love in a soul which would seek redress in gold. Money is no heart balm for a love that was.

I believe that sentimental social reformers would be nearer the solution of things if they would realize that there is a large number of women produced in this especial period with whom love of gold stands above everything else. The shifting of all the burden to the shoulders of men is unfair. When ignorant young girls are told, as social sentimentalists tell them, that they are deeply to be pitied martyrs to a temptation to which it is almost a favor in them to succumb, of course they will do so and rely for their defense on the infamy of their tempters.

Nothing can be more ruinous to morality than these well meaning enthusiasts. The frailties of one sex cannot fairly be excused by wreaking fury on the wrongdoings of the other. In their eyes the man is always a huge wolf of mature age and merciless fangs and the woman always an innocent lamb led unconscious to the slaughter.

Unfortunately for the sentimentality of this, mothers of sons can testify in hordes that the relations are oftentimes exactly reversed.

The question of the too prevalent immorality of women is not fairly enough discussed. The idea that woman's debasement always originates by woman's self-sacrifice and too generous and tender love is an absurdity. Women are capable of other things besides sacrifice and sanctity, unfortunately, and it is folly to let our eyes be blinded by a maudlin sentiment. The vast majority of women who make vice their trade are led to do so by vain instincts and greed.

Flinging herself into a river after a degrading affair isn't a popular form of repentance nowadays. The common practice now is for the modern Marguerite in the full flush of her insolent youth deliberately to select a career of license and plunder.

The cure is arming womankind against the lust for gold and in sentimentalists realizing that the only possible floodgate against the overflow of immorality consists in the purity and dignity of women.

Trying to analyse the whys and wherefors of feminine fashions is a futile pastime. Since the original misunderstanding between the notorious Mr. and Mrs. Adam of Eden fame, over the question of whether or not the fig leaf should go into the making of the salad or a new dress, every innovation in dress designing has raised an argument, pro and con.

At no time, however, in the history of the world has fashion designing seemed so phenomenal as in its present era. At no time has there been such extravagance—both in style and money value—as at this critical moment, when the world is either gripped by the horrors of war or shifting uneasily under its shadow.

Fashions and War.

Curious that the birth of these revolutionary fashions should occur across the water, where the enormities and horrors of war might presumably enough be expected to lead in the direction of sackcloth and ashes! And at a time when economy is being preached as the crying need of every warring nation, it is remarkable that clothes should be designed to require double the amount of material needed heretofore, that shoes should take on a fragility unknown outside of fairyland, and that the short skirt introducing the high boot of almost double cost, should be encouraged.

Before the war women were content and happy in the narrow skirt, the neat coat, and the simple and more practical shoes.

There is a deeper psychology to clothes than dressmakers' bills and disgruntled husbands and fathers. Certain it is that when the women affected tailor mades and militant hats a feminine note in men's attire was distinctly evident in the corset cut coat and slim figured trousers and extravagant tones in socks and suits. Now that the male has adopted so generally that 100 per cent man garb—the uniform—woman indulges in an excess of frills and furbelows and excessively feminine features of dress.

A swing of the pendulum, it is! And therein lies part of the psychology of clothes!

It cannot be argued that foreign designers are creating these extravagant revolutions for American wear alone. I read a scathing article by a man who is in a position to know, who buys extreme models, in which he accuses Englishwomen and Frenchwomen of spending unnecessarily on frocks, attributing it to selfishness and thoughtlessness. Our foreign correspondents report that the tearooms of the luxurious hotels over there are daily the scenes of ultra smart fashion shows, and again at charity benefits for soldiers we read constantly of the festive dress of the women present.

Of course, it is hard to understand how, in the shadow of death or disablement worse than death, a question of fuller skirts, or hoops, or bustles could be discussed over the teacups. But thoughtlessness, or selfishness is not the explanation. These women over there have proved themselves guiltless of either charge. In the face of a situation heavily laden with tragedy and woe they have been brave. So there must be a deeper reason for women clinging to fashions in such a crucial time. I believe it is because they are her best form of distraction—the only thing, in fact, which will give temporary ease to the awful anxiety she suffers for the loved ones who are fighting.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

BILLIE BURKE'S Neck and Complexion Enviably Pretty

says Antoinette Donnelly

Billie Burke, $4,000 a Week "Tribune" Movie Star, Eats Onions Every Day for Her Complexion.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

LET us suppose you had a wonderful dream, and the wonderful part of your wonderful dream was that your weekly allowance were boosted to $4,000 a week. Now, I'll wager the real thrill of it would be the spontaneous dash to the nearest beauty parlor, to be made as beautiful as possible. Of course, we are just supposing this on the theory that you are a person of really feminine gender. Because this would be the impulse of a feminine person only.

Or, supposing you didn't dream it at all, but, like Miss Billie Burke, your weekly services were appreciated at the rate of $4,000 a week, actual money. I'll wager further that you'd plan a nice tidy little sum to be spent on acquiring or preserving (whichever your individual case requires) a beautiful complexion! So much for the daily service of a masseuse; so much for youth renewing skin foods; so much for wrinkle eradicators; so much for transforming powders, for freckle remedies, for face bleaches, for rouge, perhaps; and so much for other highly advertised cosmetic articles which would appeal to your fancy.

Honestly, now, wouldn't you? And I don't know as any one would blame you much, since a beautiful complexion is every woman's first duty to herself and her family and her neighbors. And if you are under the erroneous impression that that's the way to get one you are not so much to be censured as to be enlightened.

So, now for some enlightenment through Miss Billie Burke, THE TRIBUNE movie star, whose clear, white, and health flushed skin is its own best argument for whatever she might recommend as the best means of maintaining or acquiring a perfect complexion!

Of course, between you and me and the movie star, it must be admitted that Dame Nature was more than generous with this beautiful little lady. She endowed her with a skin highly complimentary to her glorious red gold hair. However, if she had been neglectful of it her natural endowment would have profited her little. She hasn't neglected it, and that's why today her complexion is so lovely.

Has money anything to do with the beauty of her complexion? It has not, although she has money enough to buy the most expensive cosmetics in the world. She has money enough to bathe her pretty face in humming birds' tears every day if she so chose! But what do you suppose she credits with the preservation of lovely skin? Water and fresh air—and lots of both!

Every girl's world is so full of these two wonderful ingredients, why is there a bad complexion?

"Every morning, first thing when I arise," says the golden haired beauty, "I slip on a negligee over my robe and stand before an open window and breathe and breathe long drafts of good fresh air, until my lungs are thoroughly bathed. Then I take my morning plunge in cold water. I follow this with a vigorous rubbing with a coarse towel, until my skin glows, and then I exercise for ten minutes more before I proceed to dress.

"At night," she added, "I take a warm bath. And at that time I scrub my face with a good pure soap and water. If I have been driving in my car over dusty highways I precede the soap and water bath with the use of a good cleansing cream."

"Do you take any measure to protect your skin before you go out in your car?" I asked her.

"Yes," she answered; "I always rub a little cream on my face before I go out, following this with a light dusting over of powder. I find this a protection against the sun and wind as well as the dust and dirt."

"You certainly have not suffered any ill effects from the use of makeup, which, of course, you have had to use on the stage," I commented.

"The reason is because I have never been hurried or been careless about either applying or removing makeup. And that's where so many complexions are ruined. I would never dream of applying makeup until I had first rubbed cold cream into my skin. And the minute my work is over I remove the makeup with the use of more cream."

"After your evening facial scrub, do you ever use ice to keep the pores of the skin closed?" I asked her.

"No," she answered, "but I dash cold water on with my hands—just as cold as I can get it. I never use a wash cloth on my face. I use my hands instead.

"I am quite as particular of the skin of my neck as that of my face," said Miss Burke. "I have learned my lesson from observing other women who will spend all kinds of time on their face and neglect their necks entirely, with the result that a young complexion will be often found mounted upon an old and withered neck."

Incidentally, Miss Burke's neck is especially lovely. From chin to the base of her throat there is the loveliest line imaginable. A delicate, youthful line it is. And she isn't storing up any double chin difficulties for her later years by letting her chin droop. She holds her chin up! And every morning and every night she practices the exercise illustrated on this page of holding her body rigid and stretching her arms up and down as she breathes deeply before the open window, which, she says, keeps hollows away from the base of her neck, but takes care of her shoulders as well.

"Do you walk much?" I asked THE TRIBUNE star.

"Never less than three miles a day," she answered. "And usually more than that. I learned the value of walking when I was in England. The English girls have such wonderful complexions."

Miss Burke went to England when she was 8 and was educated there.

"I think the food that girls eat is responsible for many pasty and unhealthy looking complexions," Miss Burke continued. "Candies and pastries and highly spiced articles of diet exact their toll in complexion troubles."

Miss Burke eats the simplest kind of foods.

"Lots of fresh vegetables," is her food motto. And what do you suppose is her favorite? Onions! Every day she eats onions, she told me. Maybe she got the onion secret from the Japanese women, who are credited with the finest skins in the world, and who are passionately addicted to the tearful product.

At any rate, if onions are to be given any of the credit for Miss Billie Burke's healthy complexion, then I should advise you all to eat them at the risk of temporary ostracism.

Stretching' Exercise for Neck and Shoulder Lines

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Beauty Seekers.

MRS. K. L. B.: You did not send me a stamped, addressed envelope, so, of course, I could not mail the hair curling fluid formula to you; neither did you put your address in your letter. Try it again and your anxiety about your straight hair will then be relieved.

POLLY: Cold feet indicate a torpid circulation in the lower limbs and it checks the healthy action of the skin over the entire body. Exposure to severe cold must be avoided; never let the fingers become stinging cold by handling ice, or by holding them long in ice cold water. Ankle exercises, taken at frequent intervals during the day, will add in stimulating the circulation. Point the toes down to the extreme limit and move the feet up and down in this way a dozen times; then devitalize them at the ankle and shake them thoroughly. You can also warm your feet when in bed by doing the ankle exercise. Remove your shoes, of course, before beginning the exercise.

BARBARA: Brittle, ribbed, or ridged nails indicate a run down constitution. Don't think of scraping your nails with glass to make them hard. First build up your system by a careful diet, lots of fresh air and exercise, and plenty of sleep, and then they will more quickly respond to local treatment. Holding the nails in olive oil for about five minutes each day will overcome the brittleness. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for the care of the nails if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

LITTLE MARGARET: A simple and pretty way for a girl of 15 to wear her hair is in a braid or curls down her back, with a bow at the neck or a simple barrette to hold it in place.

LILLIAN S.: The only way you can make your eyes brighter is to keep yourself in good health. Get lots of fresh air and exercise, be careful of your diet, get plenty of sleep, and fill your heart and mind with bright and happy thoughts. I shall be glad to send you my dietary for gaining flesh if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ALBERT: I fear, Albert, there is nothing you can do to change the shape of your nose. You might massage it from the base downward. It would probably take months before there would be a noticeable change, if any. About the only thing I can suggest is to make yourself so captivating that such a trivial defect would never be noticed. A broad nose, you know, is an indication of a strong character. Doesn't that help some?

* *

MARIE S.: To prevent chapped hands heavy gloves should be worn. At night use a good cream just before retiring. Rub the cream well into the skin until it has all been absorbed, and then dust the hands with talcum powder to protect the bedding. In case of bad chapping it is advisable to leave some of the cream on the hands. This will necessitate the wearing of a pair of old loose kid gloves to protect the bed clothing. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you a simple formula for chapped hands.

AGNES T.: I can't just gather from your letter why you should be taken as being older than you really are. Is it because your clothes are too mature looking, your hair not arranged in a youthful way, or because you are too subdued in your ways? I should wear my hair in a braid down my back if I were you, as you are only 13. You can make your hair pretty and wavy by using a hair curling fluid and then comb it back loosely, holding it in place with side combs. Wear simple girlish dresses and do not attempt any of the exaggerated styles of coiffure. I think one piece dresses are more youthful than shirtwaists and skirts. I shall be glad to send you my formula for hair curling fluid if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

JANIE: The color cannot be restored to gray hair. The roots of the hair are imbedded in the hair follicles and cannot be reached by any fluids applied to the scalp. You might, however, prevent the hair from becoming more gray by taking a course of scalp treatments.

* *

MADELINE: The white spots on the nails are caused from lack of care in manicuring. The cuticle of the nail is raised, the air gets under it and takes away the nutriment, causing the white spots. Be careful always to push back the cuticle with the blunt end of an orange stick and not let it slip under the cuticle. This treatment also should establish the half moon that is lacking on your nails. Yes, I have a treatment for blackheads and pimples, but as it is too lengthy to print I shall be glad to mail it to you if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

EDITH: Many girls continue to grow until they are 20 and many have their full growth at 18. There is no way to determine a question of this sort. This is a simple exercise for developing the legs: Rise on tip toe, hold this position for a few seconds, then lower the body. Do this alternately, first with one foot and then with the other, and finally with both. Do the exercise for about twenty minutes twice a day.

THERESA: A woman 5 feet 6 inches in height at the age of 25 should weigh 135 pounds. I am sorry, but I have no formulas for face powder. There are many good grades of rice powder on the market. You can learn of them by inquiring at any drug or department store. Yes, I have a formula for chapped hands. I shall be glad to mail it to you if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

MISS LAURA L.: As you did not tell me how old you are or describe your appearance in any way, you see how impossible it is to make suggestions as to the arrangement of your hair. If you are under 18, you can wear your hair down in curls or in a braid down your back. If you are past 18, you might try the modish coiffures before your mirror and adopt the one that is most becoming, always bearing in mind that the simplest and most youthful is more appropriate for young girls.

* *

MAMIE: The hard water will not ruin your skin. It is liable to make it rough and scaly for a while, but I am sure you can overcome the condition by using a good skin food on your face at night. Of course it is much better for the complexion to use soft water. You can soften the water by using the following: Put one pound of bran into a muslin bag, place in four quarts of water, and boil for fifteen minutes. When washing the face add enough of the bran water to make the water milky. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

CLARICE: There is no special height or weight for a girl of 14. She is still at the growing age and her height and weight would vary with her growth. You will just have to be content with the fact that you are still a little girl and wait a couple of years yet before giving much thought about height and weight.

* *

The grayness of the hair is due to loss of pigment. The scalp massage stimulates the circulation and promotes a proper flow of blood to the roots of the hair and gives them nourishment.

Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

Hit Her with Snowball.

One day, while walking down the street, a young fellow threw a snowball at me and as we were passing a bunch of kids he said: "You boys ought to be ashamed of yourselves to hit a perfect lady with a snowball." He then brushed the snow off my coat and, pretending to be so nice, asked to escort me home to protect me. I told him my feet hadn't been shot off yet, that I could find my way. MISS T. N.

Charged for Her Devotions.

While spending my vacation in a small town the proprietor of a floral shop opposite the hotel insisted on becoming acquainted with me and pestered me with his attentions, although I ignored him entirely. He sent flowers to my room continually during the two weeks I stayed, together with notes telling of his unfailing devotion. I still ignored him and regarded it all as a great joke until the day I was leaving when I received a bill for "daily flower service" amounting to $14. MISS O. Q.

He Beat It!

He walked slowly and was of that handsome Beau Brummel type, which makes one look twice out of a habit of observation. This second look of mine was rewarded with an exceedingly sly sideward wink. I entered a drygoods store and gave him no further thought. On my way out I was much surprised to see him standing in wait for me. He raised his hat. "I beg your pardon, Miss Waddington," he said, "at first I was not sure, but now I recognize you."

"I am not Miss Waddington," I answered sternly, "please walk on."

"Waddington, Waterson, Watson, or something like it—I dont remember your name as well as your face. I can't forget the little girl that used to ride with me on the merry-go-round at Silverton and eat candy from my coat pocket, and put crabs under my collar at Sandy Beach. My dear girl, it must be you. Your her dead image and your voice—your voice is just as sweet. Come on, be game, girlie, and don't throw down an old friend. I'm Jack Ramsey!"

"Very glad to see you, Jack Ramsey," I smiled at him in a great semblance of delight. Then I gasped a little. "Dear, dear me, I forgot my crochet bag. I must have left it in the notion department. Do wait for me here, I'll be back in a minute!"

In a minute I was back with my cousin walking beside me, a six foot policeman in a brand new uniform.

We laughed aloud as we saw Jack Ramsey start, open wide his eyes, and with his dandified airs in funny collapse, beat it down the street. MISS A. F.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Then Another Pipe Burst.

After I had consented to become his bride I extracted from my future husband a solemn promise that he would from that happy hour eschew the weed in all forms. He was in a frame of mind at the moment to promise me anything, but I thought he meant it. The truth burst upon me one day with the bursting of a water pipe in the basement. I went down to investigate and found my husband sitting in a big box contentedly smoking his pipe. R.

Liked Her to Look Busy.

My fiancé's position was collecting rents. George would stop in and see me mornings, as we lived near his territory. I always wore fresh white aprons, dressing sacks, and hair always combed; no matter how early George would come I was dressed.

He remarked about my freshness and said "of all his stops no one ever looked so neat as I." A few months after our marriage my ardent lover came home and said: "For goodness sake put on a big colored apron, please. Look as if you did some work around here and not a statue." J. F.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast

RUST OF IRON
RUST OF RHEUMATISM

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material which, if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, are formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means to magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus cleansing, sweetening, and refreshing the entire alimentary canal each morning before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides, it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases, and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet, and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headache, constipation, bilious attacks, [illegible] nasty breath, and stomach acidity.—Advertisement.

Every spring the home woman finds it to her advantage to take a careful inventory of the house garments which she possesses and see that those left over from last year are generously supplemented by new spring ones.

The ones which I have designed for today and am offering in pattern form are those intended primarily for the practical woman who would look attractive in her home. They may be made of a dozen or more different materials and the styles are sufficiently simple to insure both popularity and value for them.

Extremes in color are to be the vogue. Either brilliant, gorgeous effects or soft pastel tones are to lead in fashion favor. This applies for the home garment as well as for the frock intended for more dressy outdoor wear.

Particularly gay are to be the tubable materials, and unless the question of laundering done outside makes the cautious woman hesitate for the longevity of her colors there is no reason why the house frock or apron should not be of a bright nature.

There are not many new shades, the art of dyeing so far having brought no novel shades into the spring sartorial field. There is one pretty novelty, however, which is called cyclamen pink. This is a pastel shade and would make up charmingly into either the house frock, the apron, or the kimono shown today.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

She Didn't Laugh at Him.

I met him at a party and my, but he was big and awkward! I felt sorry for him, though. And when he stumbled over a stool in the middle of the floor and sent a plate of sandwiches flying, instead of laughing I helped him pick them up and carry them out. He took me home that night, and after that when we were both grown up and he wasn't a bit awkward and just awfully good looking, and was still taking me home, he told me one night how I "won my mate," and then he asked me to marry him, and now we have two darling kiddies just as awkward as their father was. Wires Were Crossed.

One evening I was speaking to my aunt over the telephone when suddenly wires were crossed or something and I heard a deep, melodious voice saying: "Is this Hyde Park —?"

"No, no; you've got the wrong exchange; this is Normal —," I answered.

"Well, you'll do just as well; I kind of like your sweet voice, anyway."

These words just thrilled me. We talked for quite a while, and I kidded him as much as he did me.

Every night he called me up after that, and I accidentally gave him information about myself, never dreaming of meeting him. After six weeks of such fun an insurance man came to the door. To my surprise and embarrassment he told me he was my "phone acquaintance." After a good laugh we made an engagement to talk it over.

We were married two months ago, and I don't regret how I won my mate. P. W.

Little Things that Count.

At a summer resort I first met the "only girl"; also her mother and two sisters. A few days after this meeting we all went, afoot, to view the natural beauty spots of this resort. Before starting on the trip I had noted the probability of rain; also I had espied the mother's rubbers and had quietly slipped them into my pocket.

The rain came (I was ever a lucky devil) and when, in response to the mother's expressed wish that she had worn them I produced her rubbers and put them on her, I was highly commended for my thoughtfulness.

Other little attentions to mother and daughters followed in after days; and, believe me, with all women it is the little things that count. Mother ever remembered my consideration—so, too, did the "only girl." T. M. V.

"TIZ" FOR FEET

No More Sore, Tired, Tender Feet; No Puffed-up, Calloused Feet or Painful Corns—Try "Tiz"

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot torture.

Ask for "Tiz." Get only "Tiz."—Adv.

Doris Blake Says

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If you were born this week you are 'Happy-Go-Lucky

Varied is your field of labor, running the gamut as it does from musician, poet, scientist physician, woodworker, machinist, upholsterer, decorator, and bookkeeper to clerk. You have natural business ability and are not in the least lazy, so it stands to reason that you will make a success of almost any sane enterprise you undertake, especially if it is one in which you have a personal interest.

For your "side line," provided you are not following it as a profession, you will delve extensively in scientific and philosophic subjects. Never do you feel that your education is finished; always are you striving to improve yourself both physically and mentally. In fact, no sign appreciates more the value of a liberal education.

Unlike many of your neighbors, you build far better than you realize, for you are overanxious to make good in any new direction, and withal sensitive and proud, characteristics which you keep hidden rather deeply, except as they are affected by your home life.

Just once in a long, long while do you lose your temper, and then you have a real "tantrum," which is, fortunately, brief. But you have many friends and you keep them, too; in fact, you are quite a household pet, so that you usually get a fair share of whatever is being passed around. In a quiet way you enjoy yourself wherever you may be.

Your motto of "Everything will come out all right" rightly labels you "happy go lucky," a trait, which, in your case, seems to be a most fortunate one. Even though your life may be somewhat of a grind there are but few "bumps," and things do seem to come out as you wish, even if this happy state is sometimes not reached until later years. In any event, you whose birthdays come this week just go along being satisfied with what comes your way and don't fret away your life as do some Pisces persons. Whatever else is denied you, you have the respect of all your acquaintances, and you deserve it.

You are a natural philanthropist, more's the pity, for you seldom have much money to spare. If the cause demands you will deny yourself the actual comforts of life to further the interests of relatives and friends. You so rarely look for dishonesty that you are prone to have too much confidence in the words and promises of those you love. In fact, it is almost impossible for the average Pisces person to acknowledge a flaw in a friend.

With your children you are apt to be impatient and dictatorial; still, you prefer the obedience that springs from love rather than that which is enforced. If you are a Pisces woman you have more devotion in your nature but you are less methodical than the men. Unless you have been carefully trained as a child you are apt to be careless, constantly losing your belongings or leaving other people's in disorder. Curiosity, too, is one of your strong points, and sometimes you carry this to unpleasant extremes. Learn the value of silence and try to be more attentive listeners—that's my message to the average Pisces woman.

Pisces, like Sagittarius, inclines to a faithful adherence of the marriage vow, but your love nature isn't as strongly developed. You are never happier than in beautifying your own home, for you love harmonious surroundings, as well as harmony in your domestic circle.

Capricorn, Dec. 22-Jan. 20, and Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, will furnish you congenial friends as well as happy conjugal companions. Pisces and Cancer, June 22-July 22, would make a sympathetic union.

Your fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 13 and Aug. 5; your birthstones, chrysolite, pink shell, and moonstones; colors, gray, emerald green, pink, white, and black.

Let Her Alone a While.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 26 years of age, of good habits, and a neat dresser. About five months ago I met a young lady in an informal way. I have since taken her to shows and dances, but I always have a hard time to make an engagement with her. When I speak of a future evening call she does not agree to it, but asks me to call her up on a certain day and she will let me know. This happens almost invariably; she always says that she doesn't know what arrangements the girls have made. She admits that she has other gentlemen friends she goes out with, and one in particular who calls twice a week, but she says he is only a good friend and that it is no love affair.

"When I am in her company at times she is friendly and affectionate, but no spooning; at other times she is distant and acts as though I am some one to fear. The first time we were out together she took my arm. Since that I have always had to take hers. As I understand it it is the lady's place to take the gentleman's arm. Is this right?

"I think a great deal of this young lady and have always treated her as a lady and have done nothing that I know of to cause her to act as she does. She puts me off sometimes as long as two weeks on calls, and I have come to believe that she waits to see if others call her, and if they do she goes out with them, and if they do not, then I am good enough for an evening with nothing else to do.

"I have told her a couple of times that I thought that she thought me a pest and just went out with me to satisfy me and that I was going to do her a favor and not call her any more. Then she would say that kind of a remark was uncalled for and that if she didn't like my company she would not be afraid to tell me.

"If you can tell me from the information I have given as to what you think of my case—I am going to quit calling on her unless she acts differently or unless you tell me something to the contrary. I think a lot of this girl, but I do not want to impose on her good nature. "G. D. F."

I believe I'd try the letting alone method for at least a month; see if she tries in any way to look you up. I really can't tell just what her state of heart may be towards you; she's something of a conundrum; but I have a sneaking feeling that you are half way right in your opinion. You're wrong about the arm etiquette; you should always take hers except in a grand march.

Should They Go Walking?

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls 14 years old. Would you kindly tell us if it is proper to go walking with boys at night or let them escort us home from places of amusement? "Blue and Brown."

Blue and Brown, you're starting up the social ladder early, entirely too early, in my opinion. And don't your mothers think so, too? If I were your parents I would certainly not let you make a practice of going walking in the evening, although there might be times when the "bunch" would all come home together from parties.

Wants Her Picture.

"Dear Miss Blake: A young man whom I know recently had his picture taken and I asked him for one. He answered that he would give me one if I would give him one of mine. I refused to do this on the ground that I don't approve of girls giving their pictures to their men friends as a rule. He disagreed with me and I want to know which one of us is right? "A Reader."

If you ask him for his picture, then you can most certainly expect to have to give yours in exchange. Your point is right where the man does the asking and provided you do not know him well.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

They're Not Anxious.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 15 and considered good looking, although it is not my nature to say so. Several of the popular, nice young men of the town have taken me places, but none of them seem anxious to keep company with me often. My folks want me to go and have a good time, and why do you suppose this is? I know that I'm not silly when with them, nor do I run after them in any way. Won't you please advise me what to do? F. H."

You're too young, that's why. Don't your parents think you are too little a girl to be worrying about real beaus? If you were my daughter I'd certainly not encourage you in the ideas that seem to be filling your head. You're all right; get over the notion that you are not going to be a popular belle when the right time comes.

She Likes Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 24 and would like to know if it is proper to introduce yourself to a lady in church. I am interested in all the nice girls and want to get acquainted with them in the best and most gentlemanly way without intruding.

"What do you think of a girl who speaks to a man who has not been introduced? I became acquainted with a girl in a 10 cent store. She seems to like me because she stops and talks every time I go into buy something. She asked my name the other day. I do not believe in asking a girl more than once if she makes excuses.

"I have not enough faith in them. Thanking you in advance for whatever advice you may give. Bach."

I didn't like that concluding remark of yours about not having faith in girls. Get that idea out of your head, also the one that if a girl refuses your first invitation it means finis. Can't you be generous enough to think that she might have some other obligations which she could not possibly break even for you? I don't see any reason for your having to get acquainted with girls in your church without being introduced. Doesn't your minister make any attempt to introduce his church members? Of course I'm not saying it would be amiss to do the introducing yourself, if necessary, in this atmosphere, but not elsewhere. I would say offhand that the girl in the store was doing a little more than her share towards cultivating your acquaintance, but then I haven't heard the young lady's side of the story.

She Loves Traveling Man.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 19 and am deeply in love with a nice young gentleman of 22. Although he is a traveling salesman and I don't see him often, he writes to me every week and whenever he comes to see me he tells me he loves me.

"The other day I had my fortune told and the fortune teller told me that he has another girl, but does not care for her as much as he does for me and that this girl knows that he loves me, so she is trying her best to take him away from me.

"Please advise me what to do. Should I tell him what the fortune teller told me or should I ask him if he goes with any other girl or had I best forget it? I love him better than any fellow I ever knew. I have many boy friends, but don't like them. Please advise. "R. B. B."

Believe your "best beau," but don't, please don't believe what the fortune teller says, or you'll be having something about which to worry continually. Unless he gives you just cause for doubt forget this tale and never let him know anything about it. He probably has other girls, just as you have other men friends; why shouldn't he and why shouldn't you as long as you are not engaged? So there.

Lost Her Sailor.

One day last summer I had just bought me a new sailor straw hat, and had no more than stepped out of the store when a west wind took my hat off my head and blew it on top of a street car. I raced with the car for about ten blocks to the depot before I was able to catch up with it. I was very much embarrassed running along the street bareheaded trying to catch up with the car. M. D. E.

He "Pulled a Boner."

I was a football player on a school eleven. I had recently won my regular berth as a player on the team and, of course, was anxious to show off my prowess. My chance soon came as my signal was given in a play. I was fairly bubbling over with excitement. The ball was snapped and passed to my expectant hands, and with a bound I skirted the end and was off for the goal. I even shut my eyes to see if I could go faster, and that is what started it all. When I opened them again I was but a few yards from the goal, so it was an easy matter for me to make a touchdown. I turned around feeling like a hero looking down on his conquered foes, when to my dismay and great embarrassment I found I had made the touchdown at the enemy's goal. J. E. SPAIN,

Joke Was On Her.

My chum and I both were about 17 and full of mischief. On our way downtown one day we decided to have some fun pretending I was deaf and dumb. We went into the party dress department of one of the largest stores, and my chum explained that I lived out of town and wanted a party dress, but was deaf and dumb, so that she would act as interpreter.

The clerk was unusually considerate and accommodating and showed us everything, but as she kept bringing and bringing my laughter increased and I could hardly restrain myself. So as to leave without the clerk's surmising, my chum said we would be in later in the week and bring my mother.

In order to keep from bursting out laughing, I turned quickly and in so doing bumped vigorously into an elderly lady coming into the department and before I could think, from mere habit I said "I beg your pardon." O, if you could have seen that clerk's face when she heard me speak you might know I fled never to return. E. A. M.

His Little Mustache.

As I was making my toilet for a dinner party one evening I noticed that my mustache, that I had just begun to let grow, did not show up well, and instead of looking like a mustache it looked as if I had neglected to shave.

After debating a few moments whether or not I should shave it off, I decided that I would use burnt cork upon it. With many attempts I finally succeeded in getting the ends of the little hairs black without blackening my upper lip.

Everything went off nicely at the party until the latter part of my speech, after the dinner, when it became necessary for me to sneeze, whereupon I grabbed my handkerchief and held it to my nose. When I removed it I wiped it across my face. This created a laugh from every one present.

Imagine my embarrassment when one of the party gave me a small pocket mirror, and upon looking into it I beheld my noble features bespattered with burnt cork. BILL.

Chased Neighbor's Chickens.

I think the most embarrassing experience that I ever had came through a little brown water spaniel dog I once owned that chased the neighbors' chickens. She disliked to stay at home alone, so I used to shut her up in the barn when I went uptown. Our house was in the edge of a small town and many of the yards I must pass on my way to the store were full of chickens.

One day I was in a hurry and forgot all about the dog until when I was about half way to town I noticed her following me. As we passed a bunch of fine young Rhode Island Reds all at once the little dog fled at them, scattering them in every direction. All my commands were of no avail. The fluttering, squawking chickens were too much of a temptation, and I was obliged to go on and leave her jumping and barking after them and hope that no real damage might be done.

I had reached the end of the path and had just stepped upon the platform in front of the store and was about to go in when here came my little dog as fast as she could run with a beautiful "fry," one of the best in the flock, in her mouth. She laid it down at my feet and looked up at me fairly bursting with pride, wagging her tail and waiting for my words of praise.

The usual group of loafers in front of the store seemed to find something funny in the situation, but that performance was the last straw. The next day we sent our little dog to some boys in another town. They had wanted her for a long time. I never heard if they were able to break her of her bad habits or not.

She Didn't Want to Do It.

Imagine me in the business world as a precise, dignified—not to say prim—woman of 30 years. At home I enjoyed a good joke, but at the office——

One day I overheard the betrothed of my cousin asking him over and over again, "Do you love me?" "Say, do you love me?" This cousin worked in the same office with me and was the only person who ever entered my personal office. I formed the habit when he came in of saying, "Do you love me? Say, do you love me?" This made him angry. On one occasion he made no response, so I went on: "Say, Honey, tell me, do you love me?"

To my everlasting consternation the voice of my ultra-dignified employer replied: "H'm—this is so very sudden; may I have a few minutes for consideration?" B. S. L.

Raised His Umbrella.

One very rainy day I happened to meet a friend in one of our department stores, and, seeing she was without an umbrella, offered to share mine with her. As we had both finished shopping, I immediately raised my umbrella, and, trying with the greatest care in the world to keep her feathers from getting wet, we both walked the entire length of the main aisle. It was only when we reached the swinging doors and I noticed the amusement of the shoppers and clerks about us that I realized we were not on State street. The absurdity of the situation did not lessen my embarrassment, and it only seemed the old umbrella would never close and let us out of sight. N. W. R.

Turned Hose on Him.

It was a hot summer day. I was watering the front lawn and one of the younger children pulled on the hose. In turning to speak to her I turned the hose on a young man who at that moment happened to pass. The poor fellow was dripping wet. I was so angry that I forgot to apologize, but he seemed to enjoy his ducking. L. M.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

Spitting in Public Places.

SHE was well dressed; she had a pretty spring hat, a good looking spring suit, was neatly shod, and wore a carefully tied veil and fresh looking gloves. She was walking in South State street, near Washington street, and to the passerby looked the lady in the best sense of the word, when suddenly the whole effect of hat, shoes, gloves, and costume was destroyed because she quite calmly and openly spit on the sidewalk.

She didn't do it furtively, as if to escape detection, nor did she do it explosively, as if she couldn't possibly help it. It was premeditated and complete and utterly blotted out the first impression of the self-respecting, well brought up, dainty woman.

Spitting in public places, whether done by men or women, is an abominable, unpardonable habit. We Americans are more addicted to it than any other people. It is bad enough to see men do it, but it is much worse—and why, I can't explain—to see women do it. So, never so far forget the proprieties as to do this unpleasant act in any place where some other eye can see you.

M. E. J.: On entering a restaurant or club dining room the man leads the way. He follows the waiter who is piloting the party to a table. The woman walks with or after her escort. It is quite proper to stop and talk to friends who are already seated at table if you know them well and have something especial to say. But on many occasions it might be a little awkward, as it interferes with their meal and delays the beginning of your own. It is one of the things no general rule can cover. You must use that indispensable quality, tact.

MRS. C. H. G.: Hold your knife in your right hand and your fork in your left while eating any course that needs cutting. Don't slice your meat all up before eating it; cut one mouthful at a time and eat it before cutting another.

UNKNOWN—It is not necessary to decorate a church for a wedding, though a few flowers or plants near where the ceremony is performed are attractive. Smilax twined about the electric light fixtures would look festive, but if you have other floral adornments, might easily be omitted.

Don't ask a friend to sing who is accustomed to be paid for singing unless you are prepared to offer remuneration for it. If the friend declined to be paid then you might send a gift to him or her as a token of your gratitude.

Yes, be sure to ask the bridegroom's mother to stand in the receiving line after the wedding. The bride stands on the right of the bridegroom to receive congratulations. She wears her veil parted and turned back so that her face is quite unveiled.

A wedding breakfast to be served at 11 o'clock in the morning should be a light affair. A fruit course might begin it, to be followed by one hot dish, such as creamed lobster or oysters; then a salad and an ice. The bridal party, consisting of bridal couple, bridesmaids, and ushers, should sit at the bridal table.

DOUBTFUL: A spoon is the proper utensil for the fruit cocktail.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the successful substitute for calomel — there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

MAKE him just boy. He has a hard, long fight ahead of him, despite all your loving care. Right now his body and mind are deciding the manner of man he will be. His stomach determines his stamina of brain and brawn.

"HANDY VOLUME" ISSUE

You Can Save 107.88 by buying this "Handy Volume" issue at 58.88, instead of paying 166.75 for exactly the same reading matter, illustrations and maps, in the larger-volume Cambridge University issue; or you can pay $1 down and $3 a month for a short time at a slightly higher price. Besides the difference in price, the only difference is in size; the "Handy Volume" is 8½ inches high and 6½ inches wide. Both are one inch thick and in both issues there are 29 volumes to the set, 41,000 articles in all, 44,000,000 words, 15,000 maps and illustrations.

You can save money buying now instead of waiting until later on, because the present sale will not last much longer. Prices will soon have to advance. The publishers, after the present stock is gone, cannot supply more sets at present prices. Manufacturing costs and costs of raw materials have advanced so much that the cost to make the sets of this "Handy Volume" is greatly increased. The end of the sale will soon be announced. Then the price to the public will be materially advanced.

You can leave your order in our book department. You can see actual sets of the "Handy Volume" Britannica there; can examine print, paper, pictures, bindings; can compare the small-volume issue with the Cambridge set—and see for yourself what you are getting.

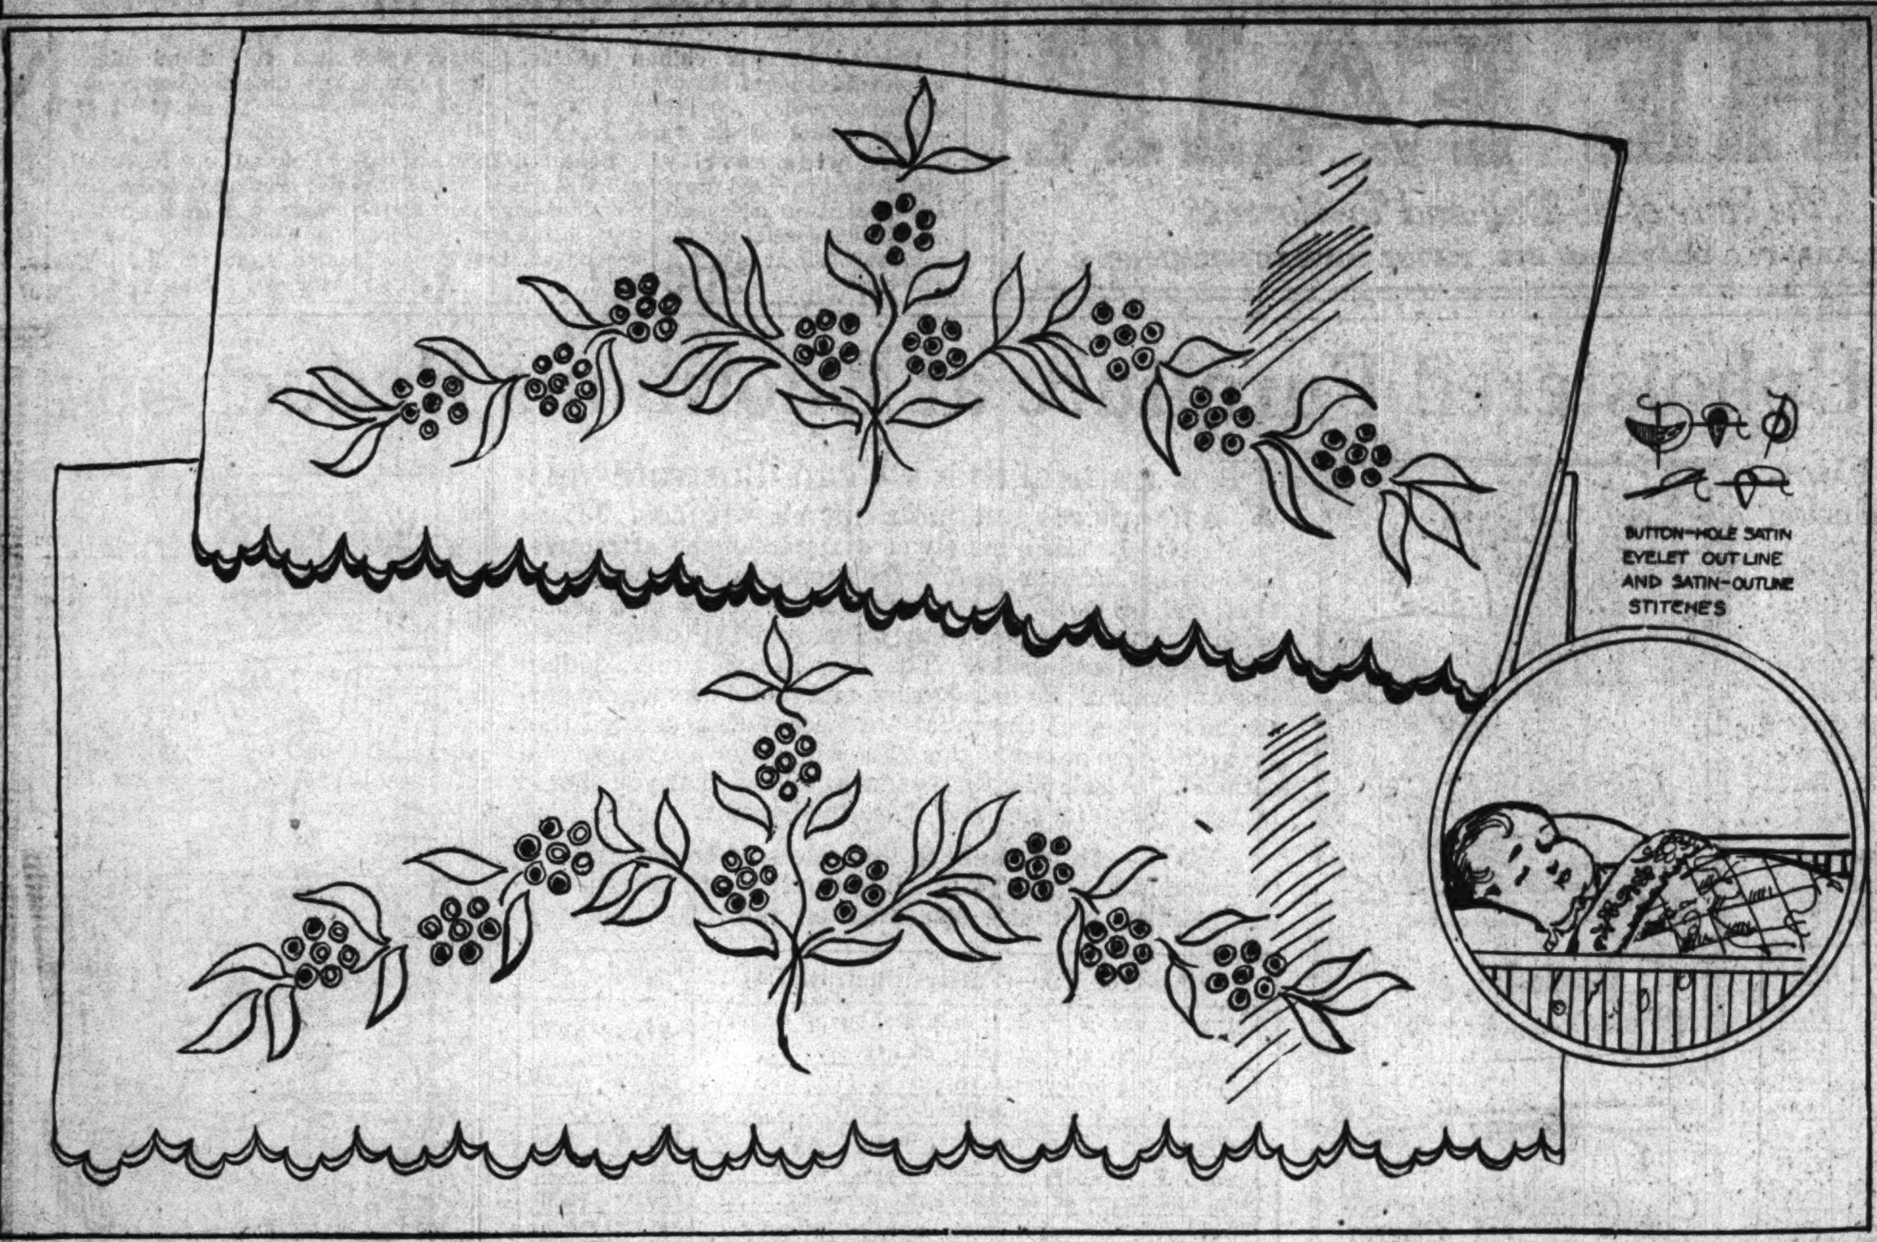
Embroidery Design for Baby's Crib Sheet and Pillow Slip.



The accompanying embroidery design is for a baby's crib sheet and pillow slip. It could also be employed on a baby's blanket.

Such a set as this would be exquisite embroidered on crêpe de chine or some other fine material. The design is new and not too elaborate. Detail drawing shows method of working.

In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If your material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and trace each line carefully with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy, secure a piece of transfer or impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on the material face downward, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. On removing the design and transfer paper you will find a neat and accurate copy of the design on the material.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Putting on Airs.

"DEAR MISS KING: Would you kindly say a word about the girl who pretends to be possessed of more of the world's goods than she really is, and who constantly reminds the people with whom she works that they are not in her class socially and that she works not because she has to but for the good time she gets out of it?

"There is just such a young girl employed in our office, who talks as though she were the daughter of a millionaire, although I know it to be a fact that her family have had a struggle to keep up a modest home and that she not only has to support herself but help with the household expenses as well. Yet she will remark with an insufferable air that 'I just picked up a little bargain in an evening gown; it was only $125, reduced from $180, and I made father come across with it.'

"Isn't there something we can do to help suppress foolish talk like this, whether it is the truth or only pretense?

The case cited in the foregoing letter is by no means rare. Unfortunately, one meets this impossible young person too often in the business world. She not only insists on talking about her expensive clothes, father's motor, and the servants, but also regales her associates with tales of her popularity and the strenuous social life she leads.

Such pretensions are entirely out of place in a business office, and are a breach of good taste.

To a girl of this type, even though she holds down her position fairly well, her work must be a secondary consideration, and she necessarily lacks good judgment, or she would realize that in case her employer were obliged to reduce his working force for any economic reason he would probably feel that little Miss Butterfly could be dispensed with.

She will never gain anything by these pretensions, and they will undoubtedly be a source of amusement to her fellow workers. There is no excuse for these airs, even if they are not all pretense and she is actually a favorite daughter of fortune who, because of a whim, holds a paying position. In fact the latter has less excuse, because she must have had greater opportunity for education and training than our little make-believe.

The average working woman has about all she can do to secure for herself the ordinary comforts of life, keep her wardrobe presentable, add a little luxury now and then. She has little time or money for extravagance in either clothes or conversation. And such extravagance in others only amuses or irritates her.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE recent article on the planning of meals seems to have aroused unusual interest. Therefore it is perhaps timely to take up a delayed study of staple foods. It seems to me that there can be no really economical planning of meals without a liberal use of the staples. Economy with other things depends on going to market almost daily, and being a good buyer. With staples enough, you can get on a day or two or even more without going to market.

Perhaps it was because I was brought up over a big cellar, in which there were pork barrels, cider and vinegar barrels, crocks of cider, apple sauce, bins of potatoes, turnips, apples, etc., with horseradish and parsnips in the ground for the earliest spring and greens right after, that it seems to me that you can always get a meal, either a quick one or a more deliberate one, if you have a reasonable supply of staples. In our storerooms above stairs there are always milk and cream, a barrel of flour, firkins of meals, a jug of real molasses, supplies of sugars and dried fruit, and it was not much of a walk to the henhouse. Tea and coffee and a little meat were the only things bought in weeks, sometimes, especially when field and orchard and berry patches were at work.

Among my staples are always potatoes and onions. With either alone, or with the two in combination, I can make a dozen varieties of quick soups, which I like better than any other sort, and which my friends praise highly. A dish of onions gently cooked in a bit of water so that the real quality that epicures value so highly is not lost, finished with a bit of cream or butter, is a truly medicinal dish as well as one fit for and satisfactory to the most fastidious eater.

As to the odor of onion and cabbage, if they are cooked over the least fire in a closed vessel, not uncovered for ten minutes, the odor sent out is negligible. I would like to print it in blackest type that just as tea can be cooked strong and bitter, so can vegetables, and few of our vegetables of today are coarse and strong by nature. Boiled tea is acrid stuff, and the same alkaline principle that is in tea is in vegetables, which may be developed, the vegetables being spoiled, by hard boiling. Tea is a vegetable.

When one learns how to cook the legumes straight from the bag, without soaking and in less time on the fire than directed in recipes prescribing soaking, they seem a much readier resource than of old. Beans, peas, and lentils are used as a substitute for meat because they have a good deal of that element which is usually called protein, but is sometimes spoken of as albuminous or nitrogenous. These things all mean the same thing.

I cook all fresh vegetables except green beans with about half a cup of water—enough clings to spinach from the washing—which is enough to start the steam over a brisk fire, after which they are covered closely and put over a gas burner turned as low as it can be turned. The more water there is in a vegetable the quicker it will cook, and even Hubbard squash, cut in dice, will cook in ten minutes thus. Spinach cooks or melts in five or six. After you have learned the time never take off the cover until the vegetable is done, for the steam, a great cooking force, escapes and the cooking is delayed.

In cooking anything with starch over the simmering burner care must be taken not to have the flame touch the bottom of the kettle, for then it may stick on. But any starchy thing may be cooked thus in a much shorter time than in a double boiler and with proper care never sticks.

Dried vegetables I give all the water they will take and start them in cold, as I usually do the green with so little, although boiling water would save a minute or two of time. Study food tables and you will see how great an amount of water was dried out of the pea and bean in ripening, then try to put this back gently. You cannot force it back. Most of the dried vegetables will take four times their measure of water and the grains will take from four to eight times.

Although I have but to go out to a certain rather good restaurant I know of to find nearly always a too starchy menu, and although I have seen many such in print recommended by certain seeming authorities, I will take an illustration from that helpful book "How to Cook and Why," from the chapter, "What to Eat Together," to show this. "The following menu," say the authors modestly, "shows an abundance of starch and a lack of flavor":

Vegetable soup.
Lamb. Mashed potatoes.
Rice croquettes. Lima beans.
Salpicon of fruit. Creamed tapioca.
Coffee.

"Potatoes, rice, Lima beans, and tapioca all have a great amount of starch, and three of them should never occur in the same meal."

One thing that this menu does not tell is that there was probably bread on the table, perhaps two or three kinds, which added to the starch supply, and perhaps some crackers were served with the soup and the salad, more and more starch.

This meal would have been just as bad or really worse if a steamed pudding or pie or strawberry shortcake or cake had been the dessert, all starchy and all less digestible than the tapioca. If instead of the rice croquettes spaghetti or macaroni or noodles had been served, it would have been just as dense in starch. To make it a little worse some banana might have been added to the salpicon of fruit, and sweet potato, denser in starch than white, might have been used. Nuts might have been added at the end, not only increasing the starch content of the meal, but supplying a lot of fat in the shape of oil.

It requires a good deal of exercise to make meals heavy in fat and starch justifiable, because these are both fuel foods which if not oxidized or burned up in the body may be stored for future use, but the more that is stored the more lumbering and obese the human body becomes.

Sphagetti.

Some radishes, a fine dish of spaghetti with cheese, and a cream or fruit dessert makes an excellent sort of luncheon. A relish of real food value in the shape of ripe olives may replace the watery radishes—the edible part of the radish is about 92 per cent water—and a salad may be added, but not if the spaghetti is eaten in anything like Italian portions.

Because spaghetti is so starchy, it will stick on to a kettle with a big fire under it for boiling. A better way is to throw it into rapidly boiling water, cover, and put over a small flame to boil. Almost any fire at all will be too much or enough to raise the cover. Watch and do not use enough to do that. In the steam filled kettle the spaghetti swells more than when boiled in an open vessel, and so is more palatable. Drain when done, twenty minutes of cooking is usually sufficient, put in skillet with generous butter and stir and heat up, seasoning to taste.

People who have not tried spaghetti with butter alone do not know how good it can be if it is rightly cooked. It is a sin to serve nondigestibly cooked stuff with a sauce to make it agreeable. The Italians always add the grated Parmesan cheese no matter what the sauce. It is always possible to add a few mushrooms or minced mushrooms, but it is most important to have the spaghetti right before you add anything.

Parmesan Cheese.

To those who know how to use Parmesan cheese it is a splendid staple and not too expensive for common use because a little will go so far. Do not buy it in bottles already grated but by the pound, grate it, and put it into Mason jars or something that may be closed tight and it will keep. It is always ready to be served with a simple soup to add both food value and a good flavor, with all the sphaghetti, macaroni, and noodle dishes and to use in cookery of au gratin dishes, especially those of whitefish.

Grated Bread.

There is nothing quite so unpalatable as flabby stale bread crumbs used) in anything, but rightly prepared they are a real staple and will improve a great number of dishes; in fact, make them truly elegant. A pudding dish after it is buttered may be lined with brown crumbs and the pudding improved by the carameled or rather the dextrinized starch. Of course the bread should be good, and the crispest rolls make the finest crumbs. Dry the bread thoroughly and until it is somewhat browned in the oven, grate or rasp, and put away in a tight bottle so that it cannot grow moist.

Reply to Inquiry.

MRS. L. H.: What you need to do is to go to the library and read up on the subject of cakes. I am sure it is inexperience of some sort that has caused your trouble. You can bake richness into a two egg cake or you can bake or beat richness out of a ten egg cake. Fluffiness is a matter of skillful work, and no recipe in the world will help you, probably, and then again it might. Any form of sponge cake is the suitable thing for whipped cream. Cakes too moist are not wholesome. A cake will not be moist if baked with too much fire, because too much of the water evaporates. A sponge cake baked with the right fire must have a paper over the top, which keeps the moisture in. Take off at the last. It is not expense that makes the cake, although the materials should be of the best.

Over a Yawning Chasm.

We were gayly making our way down the street one bright spring morn when we came suddenly to the edge of a yawning chasm. Workmen were removing a large sewer pipe, and it meant quite a step over or go a long way around.

When he safely landed on the other side he gallantly turned to me with outstretched arms and said: "Give me your hand." I in jest replied, "Now, henceforth, and forever." To this good hour I am glad his sense of humor was not thoroughly developed.

The Way to a Man's Heart.

I had invited my sweetheart to a dinner, prepared all by myself without his knowledge, and was proud of my culinary achievement. He praised my cooking all through the meal, which I acknowledge flattered me. When we were alone he remarked, "Anna, after eating that splendid meal I am almost tempted to marry your cook."

"I am the cook," I replied before thinking.

Well, I am his cook yet; besides, he claims that I proposed to him. Such an idea!

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It.

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.

A BIRD THAT DOES NOT SING

Is like a rosebush that does not bloom. Neither the bird nor the bush is natural. The reason for the bloomless rosebush will probably be found in the soil from which it is nourished. The reason for the songless bird is the same. It will be found in its food. By a careful process of elimination and selection, the Philadelphia Bird Food Company has produced a perfect food for canaries. They have fittingly named this food

BIRD MANNA.

It is a food, a stimulant and a medicine. For the foundation of this wonderful Food Medicine, the Philadelphia Bird Food Company is indebted to the canary breeders of the Harz Mountains in Germany. Bird Manna restores the color of the plumage, keeps the bird in good health, and as a natural result, it expresses its health and happiness in the only way known to it—by warbling tuneful melodies.

You can buy Bird Manna of your druggist, or a package will be mailed to you for 15c in coin or stamps.

The Philadelphia Bird Food Company has for many years made a study of birds and their diseases, and they have written a book about them. The Bird Fanciers' Handbook is a volume of 120 pages, amply illustrated, which will tell you how to feed your bird, how to preserve its health and how to make it a good warbler. This book will be mailed you for 15c. The book and package of Bird Manna together will be mailed for 25c.

NOTE—Like other good things, Bird Manna has been imitated. The genuine is put up only in white metal caps, with a red imprint of the trade mark, "P. B. F. Co." The Philadelphia Bird Food Co., 400 North Third St., Philadelphia, Pa. —Advertisement.

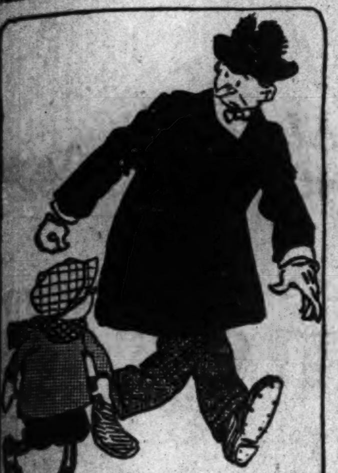
My uncle was taking his little son downtown. He was in a hurry and walked along rather fast for the little tot at his side.



Finally, when Johnnie was just about down and out he looked up at his father with a most fatigued look and said, "Dad, wouldn't you rather walk than run?"

One rather rainy day last summer John and Warren started to their grandmother's, who lived several blocks away. Before they had gone far there was a very loud clap of thunder, which frightened the little fellows and they ran back home. As they entered the house John cried: "Mamma, mamma, did you hear that thunder?"

She replied: "Why, yes, son, did you?"

"Yes, me and Warren was standing right by it."

My little niece was sent to the store by her mother for some stamps. On giving her the money her mother said: "Mary, be careful and don't lose the change." When Mary returned from the store she had a big bag of candy, but no stamps, but hurried to explain. "You know they had no stamps, mother, and I was afraid I'd lose the money, so I just bought candy."

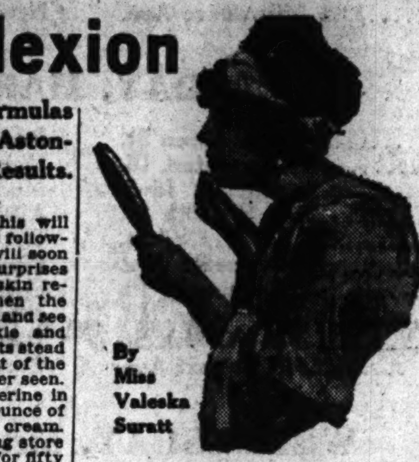
Valeska Suratt's Secret for Complexion

If You Will Try These Formulas I Feel Sure You Will Be Astonished at the Splendid Results.



By Miss Valeska Suratt

If every woman who reads this will make up her mind to use the following complexion formula, she will soon experience one of the greatest surprises in her search for beauty. The skin responds with great rapidity when the proper means are used. Use this and see how every red spot, every freckle and blemish will vanish and leave in its stead a lily-like purity and tint like that of the most beautiful faces you have ever seen. Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in half pint of water and add one ounce of zintone. This will form a satiny cream. Use liberally every day. Any drug store will supply you with the zintone for fifty cents. This is a real skin rejuvenator. How tired the average woman is using the old-style creams, constantly massaging with little result! Here now you may be assured of those very results which you have so long cherished and worked for. Every woman in the land should use this formula.

Getting Rid of Blackheads.

A quick, absolutely sure way to get rid of blackheads is to sprinkle some neroxin on a sponge, wet with hot water. This, rubbed on the blackheads, will remove them all, big and little, in a few moments. It also leaves the skin with a ruddy glow, vigorous and refreshed. The entire face should be rubbed as stated above, then bathed with cold water. In this way you will be sure to remove every blackhead. You can secure the neroxin from the drug store for fifty cents.

To Remove Superfluous Hair.

There is only one superfluous hair remover I know of that will not cause a burn or spot on the skin. This is sulfo solution. It dissolves away every hair evenly and completely without burning it off, as is the case with ordinary depilatories. It is wonderful to see how easily and uniquely it works. It leaves the skin soft and beautiful and never fails. It can be used safely on the tenderest skin, anywhere on the body. The sulfo solution costs one dollar at the drug store.

A Real Hair-Forcer.

By using my own hair-growing formula you will find it easy to have glorious hair. This formula is a sure and quick destroyer of dandruff, a wonderful forcer of hair growth, and stops hair falling, absolutely. Mix half a pint of water with half a pint of alcohol (or take a full pint of imported bay rum, if preferred), and add one ounce of beta-quinol, which can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents. This makes the most economical and effective hair treatment you can ever obtain.

For Head Wash and Shampoo.

For a head wash nothing surpasses eggol. This is a cleanser more effective than any soap or other shampoo. It removes every particle of scurf, dirt and skin scale from hair and scalp. Use a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water and use as a shampoo. It is very economical, for you can get enough for twenty-five cents to produce a dozen or more luxuriant shampoos.

Splendid Smooth-Out Cream.

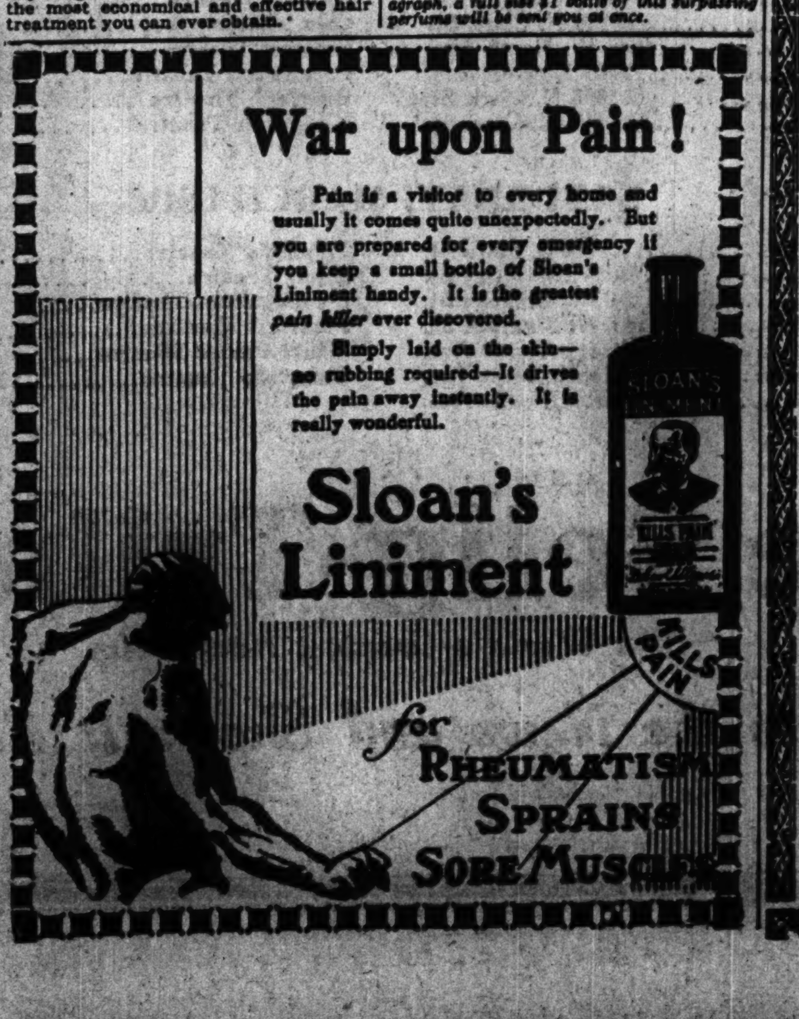
Even deep wrinkles can be removed quickly by using my sure wrinkle formula. To a half pint of hot water add two ounces of eptol, which can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents. This will produce an astonishing difference in a short time, and wrinkles, crow's feet and deep lines will gradually disappear, making the skin plump, vigorous and youthful. It never fails.

For Perspiration Under Arms.

By using hydrolized talc, the great discomforts of armpit perspiration can be controlled. This brings the secretions in the armpits to normal, the profuse perspiration is checked, and your gowns will not become wet and fade, as a result. Hydrolized talc is excellent for perspiring feet, or for any excessive perspiration. It costs fifty cents at the drug store. It also destroys all odors quickly and completely. Hydrolized talc is a necessity to every woman's toilet.

If you have any difficulty at all in obtaining from your druggist any of the articles mentioned above, simply send your name and address, enclosing the price, to "Secretary to Valeska Suratt, Suite 330, Thompson Bldg., Chicago," mentioning the articles you want, and you will be supplied at once.

I want every one of my readers to try the new triumph of the perfumer's art, "Valeska Suratt Perfume." If you will send only fifty cents to the same address given in the above paragraph, a full size $1 bottle of this surpassing perfume will be sent you at once.



War upon Pain!

Pain is a visitor to every home and usually it comes quite unexpectedly. But you are prepared for every emergency if you keep a small bottle of Sloan's Liniment handy. It is the greatest pain killer ever discovered.

Simply laid on the skin—no rubbing required—It drives the pain away instantly. It is really wonderful.

My Clothes Tricks.

That "clothes make the woman" is a truism you can't deny. Haven't you found this out? Haven't you found that a change of color scheme in your clothes made you more attractive? Haven't you found good corsets to have improved your figure? Haven't you found certain dress patterns trying and different lines in the make of your clothes flatteringly transforming? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Clothes Tricks that Have Helped My Looks." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Bean Pole Gained Flesh.

I was tall and slender, and my folks said I looked like a bean pole. Outsiders thought so, too, I presume, but hadn't the prerogative of the home folks to tell one unpleasant truths.

It began to get on my nerves after a while, so I shut myself in my room and took an inventory of my looks. I surveyed myself in the mirror from every angle—and I was mostly angles—and saw myself as others saw me. I agreed with my folks, and set out to remedy my failings.

I had always had a leaning toward striped and plain dress goods. These I discarded and wore large plaid and figured goods alternately. Instead of wearing a long, straight skirt I had my dresses made with overskirts to break the appearance of length. Then, as a finishing touch, I did my hair low in the neck, whereas I had hitherto worn it piled high on top of my head.

All this I did so gradually that I quite deceived my acquaintances into thinking that I was gaining in flesh, and I had the satisfaction of hearing my friends say, "How plump you are getting to be!" I am sure none of them ever mistrusted "the clothes tricks that helped my looks."

Collared the Thin Neck.

The average woman in the forties who is neither fat nor fair, adds ten years to her face by wearing a collarless or low necked blouse.

I have achieved the same effect without adding to my age by always wearing a guimpe of thin net made with a high tight collar, the body held closely in place by an elastic band.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt discovered this secret before I did. For years she has not been photographed or appeared in private of public life without her neck being swathed to the chin.

Lining in Corset Cover.

I have found that corset covers ready made are much prettier than home made ones, but as they are made of such thin material they show the corset and laces through.

This unsightly appearance is easily remedied by putting in a lining in your corset cover, the back only. Use sheer material, cut just to fit, and run it in by hand. Corset covers wear longer, too, if this is done.

With this lining one need not wear the brassiere or extra cover underneath.

Hat at Wrong Angle.

A small thing changed my appearance to a great advantage, and that was the angle of my hat. I used to wear it rather far back on my head, one day a friend pulled it over my forehead, and we both remarked how much more becoming it was. Since then I have noticed so many women who wear their hats too far back on their heads, and I often wish I could tell them of my experience.

Made to Look New.

I am a business girl, and to my mind, one of the greatest assets to one's appearance in a dark suit or business dress is the addition of clean, fresh collars and cuffs. In this way, an old costume may be made to look like new, giving others the impression that you are always well dressed and take special pride in being neat and tidy during office hours.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

Ferns.

FERNS are popular plants, and will be found extremely satisfactory when well grown. But when poorly grown they are very disappointing. As a general thing failure with them is attributed to unadaptability to the conditions which prevail in the ordinary living room. This, however, is seldom the case, as all of the varieties of which mention is made in this article can be grown successfully in the house, provided they are given proper care.

One of the most popular varieties is Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, better known as the Boston fern. This has fronds often six feet in length, and as there will be scores of them in large specimens, the plant becomes a veritable cascade of foliage. This variety is not adapted to window culture, because of its great size, but should be given a place on a bracket or pedestal where its fronds can droop without being interfered with by other plants.

The Whitman variety, unlike its parent, the Boston fern, does not have long fronds. The average length is perhaps a foot and a half. But what they lack in length they make up for in width, which will average seven or eight inches on well grown plants. These fronds, instead of having narrow leaflets, as in the parent variety, have leaflets divided in such a manner that each becomes a miniature frond, and these give the plant a feathery lightness which has gained for it the name of ostrich feather fern. I consider this the finest of all varieties for house culture.

Nephrolepis Scotti is a variety—also a sport from the old Boston type—of dwarf habit. Its fronds are about a foot in length, and quite narrow. But so many of them are sent up by each plant that the effect is pleasing. This is excellent for window use, as it does not occupy more room than a geranium.

Ferns are generally supposed to be fond of water at their roots, and so much is given them that they are often watered to death. While they are fond of a moist soil, they do not take kindly to mud, and an oversupply of water is sure to injure them. Give them a soil of leafmold, if you can get it, with some sharp, coarse sand mixed into it.

If leafmold is not obtainable, go into the roadside and turn over a sod, and scrape away from the bottom of it that portion which is full of fine grass roots. This will give you an admirable substitute for genuine leafmold. Mix it with light sandy loam, using two parts of the latter to one part turfy matter.

See that the pot is provided with the best of drainage. If this is done there will be little danger of overwatering. It is an excellent plan to cover the drainage material with a layer of spaghnum moss, before putting in the soil, as this will prevent the latter from washing down and clogging the crevices through which surplus water is supposed to find its escape. Aim to keep the soil simply moist all through.

It is an excellent plan to shower ferns several times a week. This serves two purposes: One is to keep the foliage free from dust. The other is to discourage the red spider from taking possession of the plants, as he often does when the room in which they are kept is warm and without much moisture in the air. If the plants seem inclined to stand still it may be well to apply some good fertilizer, and thus encourage growth.

If the pots containing ferns are kept standing in jardinieres be sure to see that the water that accumulates in the bottom of these receptacles is emptied frequently. Stagnant water is likely to do much harm to the roots of the plants.

Those who have only north windows in which to grow plants will find ferns admirably adapted to culture in them, as no sunshine is needed by them. Most varieties can be propagated easily, either by division of the roots, or by rooting the runners which are thrown out, strawberry fashion.

If the crown of the old plant divides and forms several crowns, each one of these, if broken away from the others with some roots attached, can soon be grown into a fine specimen plant. Small plants will be found useful for the decoration of the table, when used by themselves, or in combination with a few bright colored flowers.

When Irene Rebelled.

ALL through my school days—grammar, high, and institute—I chummed with Irene Fair. Her people were in comfortable circumstances and her mother's one ambition, as all their acquaintances knew, was to find a prosperous husband for their oldest daughter, Frances.

Frances was a frivolous girl with no strength of character, but she was blond and showy and fashionable and her mother's pride. Still, her twenty-sixth birthday found her without husband and Mrs. Fair scheming as hard as ever to land one.

Irene was a beautiful girl with smoldering black eyes and more vitality and enthusiasm bottled up in her dainty body than any girl I ever knew. She was naturally loving and obedient and so had played the "little sister" part, as her mother bade her do until Frances was safely married. Irene was never allowed to associate with or discuss the genus man. She wore made over dresses and short skirts without a murmur and was gay and happy.

I knew this would be all right as long as she was in the jellyfish state, but when she emerged from this I looked for trouble—and there was. At the age of 19 she rebelled against purring around on the hearth rug any longer, and to keep her quiet and out of the way of men callers her mother bought her a fine bicycle, and another six months passed.

Then Jack Hale came over the horizon and the scene changed.

Frances met him at some social event in town and he was promptly invited to call. The Fairs lived two miles out in the country and he was to cover this delightful stretch of road on a motorcycle the following Thursday.

Frances primped and powdered, Mrs. Fair planned and plotted, and the matrimonial bee buzzed against the farmhouse walls once more. Irene, loaded with scruples about as much as was Iago, quietly listened around and heard Jack Hale discussed to the exclusion of everything else—and then she received her instructions. She was never to ride her wheel toward town on days when Mr. Hale would call. She must not intrude upon Frances while the latter entertained Mr. Hale; in short, she was to wipe herself out of the scene until Frances had caught this desirable man.

Irene, in hot rebellion at this disposal of herself, went into a terrible rage, declared she was the talk and pity of all their acquaintances, declared her right to independent thought and action, and refused to wear short skirts any more or to lie about her age.

"Am I to go on forever riding a wheel, acquiring tan, freckles, and a big waist while Frances has all of the clothes and all of the company?" she angrily demanded as she flew out of the house, pushed her wheel into the road, and peddled down the dusty lane toward town, leaving her mother and sister shocked and speechless.

Tears of anger streamed down her face and the dust settled into the tiny rivulets, turning them into mud canals. She sped over the forbidden road without meeting any one until she reached the turn, and then a chugging chortling sound filled the air and a man on a motorcycle bore down upon her.

Their glances fenced sharply as they advanced, and then, as though they had given the fraternal high sign, they slackened their steeds and he inquired the way to the Fair farm.

So this was Jack Hale, the coveted man. Irene's face burned as she directed him.

"Anything wrong?" he inquired, gazing solicitously into her tear stained face as he chugged his wheel along.

"No, sir," she answered sharply, angry because the mud canals had registered.

"I don't believe you," he replied with a grin as he disappeared in a cloud of dust.

And so the lines of destiny crossed.

Many, many times Jack Hale motored over that stretch of road to the Fair home, hoping to meet the girl with the tearful face and smoldering black eyes again, but a month passed before he saw her. She was sitting in an upper window of the very house he had visited so often, and his astonishment and pelasure were so keen and so genuine that Mrs. Fair and Frances could not hide their chagrin from him.

Hale made his adieux that day in a strange state of mind. A light was dawning over his puzzled brain. He lifted his hat to the girl in the upper window, rode a few rods up the road instead of toward town, then, dismounting, waited.

In five minutes Irene rode furiously past him with lowered head and cheeks ablaze. Another five minutes and Hale had joined her, his heart pounding with joy. A little persuasion and Irene's wheel was lifted over the fence and safely hidden in the shrubbery and the pair motored tandem down the hazy road into paardise.

As well try to stop the planets in their course as to stop their love. All summer I knew of their secret rides, and I was at the farm when Jack Hale asked for Irene's hand in marriage

That night they rode away together and were married. This reads like a simple romance, but it furnished excitement in our village for a month.

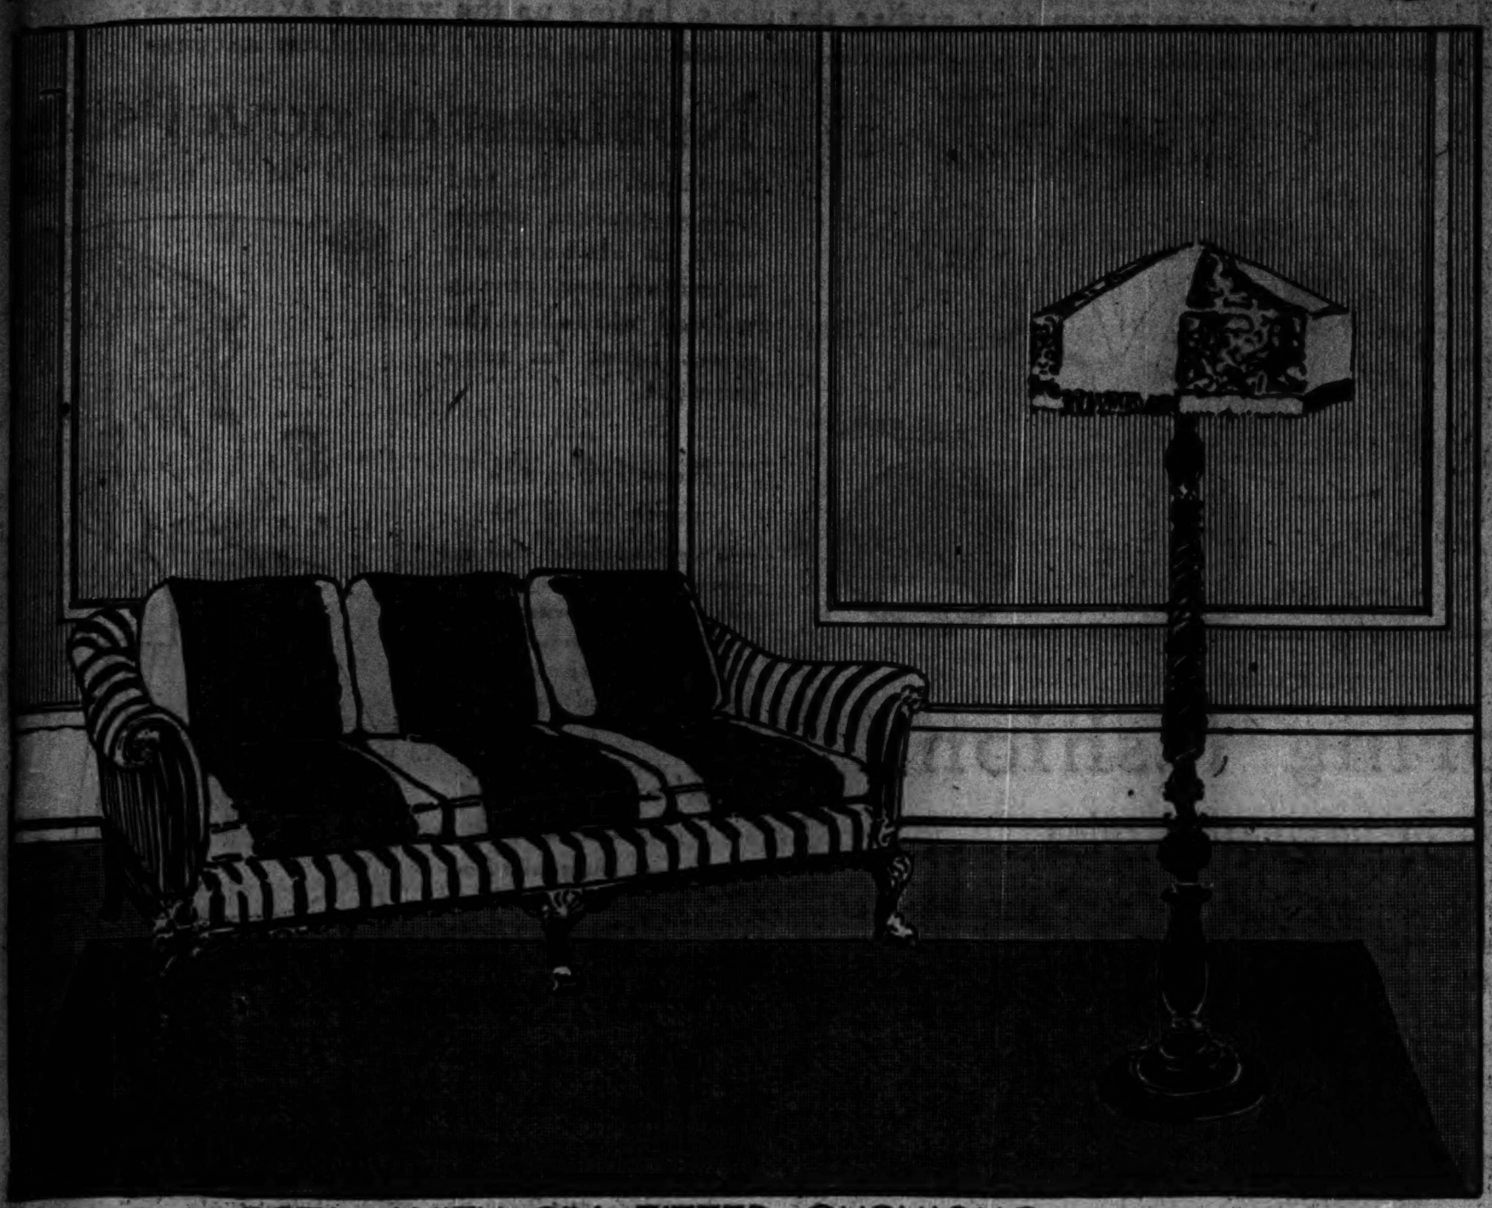
SLIP CUSHIONS FIND FAVOR

Anita de Campi



SOFA WITH SIX FITTED CUSHIONS

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

SOMETIMES it happens—not frequently, to be sure—that a new fashion embodies in itself an unmistakably economical feature, recognizable at first glance, and any new fashion with such a feature immediately jumps into popularity. This is so now with the slip cushioned chairs, benches, and sofas that have cropped up everywhere this season.

Of course it can't be said that they are entirely new. They are renewals of an old idea, but are none the less acceptable for that fact. Witness the interest that is felt in all manner of period furnishings.

Who that has kept house for any number of years has not gone into fits of exasperation over some favorite chair or sofa presenting a perfectly good appearance excepting for the front edge of the upholstered seat? The piece may have been done in tapestry impossible perhaps to match. Even the machine made tapestry cannot always be matched, and if it could it would not do to only partly reupholster a piece because the old part would seem faded or badly soiled by comparison.

The new slip cushions have the advantage of being upholstered on both sides, so they can be turned over, giving exactly double the wear to the seats that is given to the backs, so that both wear out at the same time.

The most popular present day upholstery for sofas, davenports, etc., has the sitting cushions made in three parts. These three cushions are in some cases interchangeable, as well as being reversible, making for the greatest possible longevity. The upholstered backs in some cases have similar triple divisions merely indicated by indentures and cordings, and in some others have three actual loose cushions stood upright against the framework of the back.

Do you know what a squab is? No, I don't mean a nice little bird. "Squab" is the old time name of the loose cushion. Esthetic students of period furniture know that it was in vogue during the days of William and Mary—it was characteristic of Queen Anne pieces, and familiar as well in the Louis XVI. type, only in the latter it was called "pouffe." In the Jacobean period the same cushions were covered with embroidery.

In the Queen Anne settees the seat framing was frequently covered with fixed upholstery, supplemented by movable squab cushions placed side by side.

A new living room sofa that could also be used in a bedroom is in the straight line of the Adam type, enameled and fitted with three squab cushions side by side on the seat, while four loose cushions with fringed out edges are put informally at the arms and back, not fitted to the back—indeed, two of the cushions are oblong and two square, purposely irregular, to show the cane of the framework. The material used alike for all the cushions is a daintily striped satin brocade.

Day beds fitted with squabs are extravagantly covered with delicate taffeta, the cushions being filled with down. In all cases the cushions used for the seats have the thickness squared off by having a strip inserted between the top and bottom of the covers, while those made for the backs and ends have the face and back of cushions stitched directly together at the edges.

Among the new furniture features for 1916 are a number of modern chairs and sofas suggestive of various periods, though not direct copies of period pieces. A good cane chair with a black lacquered framework and a black lacquered panel set upright into the back has a black and natural cane colored irregularly striped squab cushion. Another chair that has the whole upholstered frame covered with black and white and gray velour in narrow stripes has a supplementary squab cushion and white enameled legs.

Another chair with an ivory enameled frame has the upholstery in flowered chintz. The chintz is printed in wide flowered bands with a cream colored dotted ground, alternating with a band of tiny stripes in tan and dull green. This has an extra cushion and sprigs of the flowers are painted on the enameled framework.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the newest sofas. It has six fitted loose cushions. The wide stripes of the material are brocaded velvet, while the narrow stripes are silk brocade—the velvet and silk are not sewn together but woven in one piece. Noticeably novel is the circumstance of the framework being upholstered in an entirely different fabric. It is not patchy, as might be imagined, but delightfully piquant.

Answers to Inquiries.

A. A.: Frame in your quilt made of lattice work of ribbon with a band wider than the ribbon used in the quilt. Do not use the whole thing as a bedspread, but take it lengthwise and lay it across the foot of the bed. This style of covering is one that is popular abroad. The quilt need not be full sized. Such a cover is called by decorators couvrepied.

R. V. L.: Since your dining room is paneled in so striking a manner it would be well for you to keep the other rooms as simple as possible in contrast to it. Perhaps the best choice you could make would be a silver gray paper, matching the background of your gayly figured panels, using this gray throughout the other rooms. Take the predominating colors of the birds, flowers, etc., in the panels and repeat these colors in such small articles as lamp shades, cushions, etc. Get one large wire lamp frame and cover it attractively, turn it upside down, and slip it up over your old electric light fixture to conceal it. This can be held in place by heavy silk cords converging at the ceiling. Make a circle of the same cord around the ceiling fixture and adjust the cords that hold the lamp shade to this. I wonder how it would do to place a pair of thin voile ecru curtains one on each side of each one of your heavy ecru lace curtains. This might give a charming shadowy effect, and make the curtains that are now too showy seem simple both from outside and in. If the woodwork in your room is oak, be advised not to stain your bookcase mahogany, but leave it oak as it is. Have either the water colors or oil painting in your drawing room, but not both. Few pictures are being used; perhaps you might dispense with the crayons framed in black mission. It would be a pity to cut up the brocaded bedspread. Sunfast materials are inexpensive and have the advantage of being washable.

W. B.: Why not apply for a position as a decorator in some department. If your service is worth anything you will, no doubt, be paid. Be contented with a little at first until you learn the trade.

* *

N. B.: You say your living room is painted in old ivory. How would you like pearl color side walls and delicate mauve tiles? I should have an olive green roof. If you have an architect, leave the height of the ceiling to him, as he will know all of the conditions of your building, which I can only surmise. Since your woodwork is to be ivory throughout, your color scheme must be in delicate tints to harmonize with it.

* *

A. S.: Calcimine is as beautiful as paint, but more perishable. It would not be at all objectionable if your place is small to have it tinted light throughout. If you want green in your dining room, let it be a light grayish green and not a vivid shade.

* *

N. S.: The proper mode of treating built in china closets now is to have them finished with wooden doors in place of the glass ones. It is the fashion to make little display of china, silverware, glass, etc. Those who cannot replace the glass doors with wooden ones are using a curtain of silk inside of the glass doors. The silk is gathered to two rods, one at the top and one at the bottom of the doors. Why not reserve your crochet lace for use in the bedroom? Good musicians all prefer to have pianos left uncovered. That the piano is a musical instrument and not a mantel shelf is a statement that bears repetition.

* *

M. M. M.: Nothing is more popular than old oak. Since the furniture you have is oak, it would probably be advisable to select the rest of your furniture in the same wood. Probably you could have the piano refinished with a dark oak filler.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"FOR some time after I wrote to your Corner I had no answer. Now I write to tell you that I am unspeakably grateful that through your kindness in publishing my letter a lovely supply of reading matter has poured in upon me from about a dozen unknown kind friends. It brightened my lonely Christmas, with its many limitations, more than I can express to you. I only wish I had the pen of a ready writer to condense and tell better the comfort and pleasure you have given me and the great thankfulness and gratitude I feel to you and your noble band of willing helpers. L. C. G."

This correspondent writes from a hospital. I am glad that she has learned before this that her failure to hear from us was due to no lack of interest on our part, but to the pressure of letters which had to take their turn before hers could appear. It is good to know of the pleasure the "willing helpers" have brought into her life.

Wants Some Pictures

"Can you give me the address of Mrs. A. L. C.? I see she has paintings to give away, and I would so much love to get some from her. If you cannot furnish me with the address, will you please keep mine, and when you hear of some one with paintings to give away let me know, so that I can write to her? Mrs. F. F."

I am sorry to say that the paintings asked for have been given away, but I am glad to comply with the request of Mrs. F. F. and hold her address in the hope that some one else may have such pictures as she desires and be willing to bestow them on her.

Offers a Bible.

"In a recent issue of the Corner I observe that a girl asks for a Bible. If you will kindly send me her address I will be glad to supply her with a Bible. E. F."

I regret much that this correspondent's failure to send me the signature appended to the request for the Bible makes it impossible for me to supply the name and address desired. I will, however, put E. F.'s own name and address on file in the hope that if the original seeker for a Bible does not see the offer it may be noticed by some one else who will be glad to take advantage of it.

Little Girl Wants Quilt Pieces.

"I am a little girl 12 years old. My own papa is in heaven and I have a stepfather and two sisters. We live in the country and are not very well off. My sister and I would like to have the pieces to make a quilt that Mrs. J. D. offers. My grandma and my aunt would like to get a letter from Mrs. R. D. K. They like to make quilts, too. If you will write to me I will give you their address. My mama has a good banjo that she would like to trade for a guitar, as she can play that and cannot play the banjo. H. M."

I am sorry that the quilt pieces offered by the friends referred to have been given away. Has any one else quilt pieces to send to this child and to her grandmother, and is there some one who desires to make the exchange of a guitar for a banjo? I will send the address on application accompanied by a stamp.

Portieres of Beads.

"I see the request for instruction for wall paper beads. I have made them and used them in assorted colors, cutting a long triangular strip of paper, rolling this into the shape of a long bead on a hat pin, then gluing the edges together. When the required amount is on hand to make the portiere, varnish the beads. Use heavy linen thread in stringing the beads, putting first a wall paper bead and then one of glass until you have the desired length. Make a small tassel on the end of each string. The strings of beads are made in varying lengths, so that they may look like those sold in the shops. If E. H. C. will pay postage on them I will gladly send her a box of them, enough for one curtain, all rolled and ready to varnish. Mrs. G. W. M."

Other sets of instructions for making these beads have been received and some of them already have been printed. I wish much that E. H. C. had sent her address in order that she might take advantage of this friendly offer. As it is, all I can do is to keep the address of Mrs. G. W. M. and hope that E. H. C. may see this letter and write to be put into communication with Mrs. G. W. M., inclosing stamp for reply.

Needs a Shoulder Brace.

"I see in the Corner that Miss F. L. wants to give away a shoulder brace. I need one very much and I would be more than glad to receive this one. L. H."

The shoulder brace offered by Miss F. L. had been given away before this request arrived. Has some one else one for this applicant?

Taking Millinery Lessons.

"Has any one in the Corner some scraps of colored silk or soft velvet that I can have? I am taking millinery lessons at high school and need pieces to make flowers. Scraps too small for piecing will answer perfectly. We only came here in July and so have not collected any pieces yet. I would be glad to pay postage. "M. W. M."

I am sure some of our readers will be glad to send to this girl the scraps of silk and velvet that are too small for patching and will be of service to her. I hold her address.

Help for an Invalid.

"If there is any dear shut-in with whom I could correspond or to whom I could send reading matter I would be so thankful and glad to give such help. A sure exterminator of bedbugs is gasoline. I was unfortunate enough to get them into my new home several years ago and I was so horrified that I was almost tempted to set fire to the house. After trying everything I had ever heard of I learned of this remedy from a woman whose husband made it his business to go from hotel to hotel and boarding house with this cure. On a bright day in the morning fill with gasoline a can with a crook in the spout and go into each crevice in the beds and mop boards and everywhere else where the creatures might lodge. After everything has been soaked with the gasoline put down the windows, close the doors leading out of the bedroom, and leave everything shut up for a couple of hours. Then throw open the windows and air the room thoroughly before making the bed. You may have to repeat the process, but this is a sure exterminator. Be careful always about fire when using gasoline. "Mrs. H. L. M."

Without doubt the shut-in will soon be heard from and I will keep the address of this correspondent to send in response to inquiry accompanied by a stamp. We are glad to get the suggestion for the exterminator.

Long Walk with a Baby.

"I wonder if the Corner could help me out a little. Having had a good deal of misfortune during the last year I am absolutely unable to pay for a baby carriage. My baby is 5 weeks old and quite heavy. As I cannot afford to pay the regular prices for provisions in stores in our neighborhood I visit shops half a mile away, where they have frequent sales. This is difficult for me to do when I have to carry the baby, especially as I have gained a good deal of weight since the baby came and have little strength. I will gladly pay transportation on the carriage. Perhaps the following information would be of use to some of the housekeepers. When potatoes are frozen or not of the best variety, if put into a pot with a sieve bottom and this set in a vessel half full of water with a tight cover, the potatoes will turn out nice and white and mealy. Crust of bread is improved my wrapping the loaf in a warm cloth immediately upon taking it out of the oven. Gasoline will polish nickel on stoves easily. Kerosene added to stove polish will put a brighter polish on the stove. Could you suggest any occupation for me to follow at home that would pay me well? Mrs. H. F. D."

I hope that some one may be found with an unneeded baby carriage this young mother may have. We are grateful for the household hint, but I feel I must speak a word of caution as to the care which should be observed in using gasoline on nickel trimmings to a stove or kerosene in the polish. Both are highly inflammable and cannot be handled recklessly or there may be a terrible casualty. Can some one suggest paying employment at home to this Cornerite?

Springtime tonic,
Getting low!
Sounds harmonic,
Quite some blow!
Bock is offered,
Spots of mud.
Lots are proffered.
Lily bud!
Fur from Tabby,
This means spring!
Lid is shabby,
In the ring
Springlike fragrance,
U.S. seeds;
Tramps and vagrants,
How it bleeds!

Car off jacks;
"Whoa there Nancy!"
Swats and whacks.
New spring bonnet,
Loving wife;
"Here, doggone it!"
"Such is life!"

Comment by Mme X.

Spring's Ferocity a Spur to Many Indoor Activities.

By Mme. X.

To say that spring is upon us with its usual ferocity is merely an assertion of our annual experience. We know no poet's gentle, flowery spring. Straw hats and fur coats, the feminine uniform of the moment, symbolize the union of hope and resignation which is ours.

However, who cares about the weather? All those that do have gone to Florida, North Carolina, Georgia, or southern California. To the vigorous who remain the strenuous meteorological conditions are merely to spur to an eager grappling with life problems, local and foreign. I am speaking of the women of Chicago whose activities are amazingly unceasing and are one of the redeeming factors of life here.

This sentiment is written in sober, seriousness. In Chicago's outer aspect there is little to cheer one. Our twenty years' dreams of civic beauty are still only dreams. There is no district or stretch of highway to which we can call the attention of the unimaginative stranger and ask for his praise. If Michigan avenue, from Twelfth street to Randolph street, look beautiful to us, it is because we consciously or unconsciously shut our eyes to the ignoble architecture which adorns the avenue from Twelfth to Seventh streets; we no longer see the arid, unsightly stretches of Grant park east of the Illinois Central tracks; we have ceased struggling against the train smoke nuisance, so destructive and distressing. Because of our almost fatuous powers of visioning the nonexistent we are unaware of the still unpleasing effect of the nearer acres of Grant park north and south of the Art institute.

Beauty Only in Eastward View.

We still have a clutching sense of shame and mortification when we traverse the district between Randolph street and the Lake Shore drive, but north of Oak street on the drive we relapse again into that curious mental state which becomes entirely oblivious to the fact that from an architectural point of view this show pleasure highway of ours is a monstrous jumble of hideously ugly apartment buildings and residences which, with a few notable exceptions, are nearly as unornamental as the apartment buildings.

The domestic architecture of the Lake Shore drive symbolizes perfectly the failure of individualism carried to an extreme in any community.

The only part of this parkway of which we may be justly proud is the view to the eastward which has not yet been disfigured by man's handiwork.

The depression engendered in the candid, unbiased observer by a walk from Twelfth street to Lincoln park, however, is gradually lightened by looking behind this unfinished, unsatisfying exterior and realizing that Chicago, like Boston, is after all a state of mind, and what a seething, energetic, dauntless mind it is!

Leaving aside the great achievements and still greater plans of public spirited Chicago business men see what Chicago women—those prominent in society and in other walks of life—are doing at this moment. Politics, reform, philanthropy, study, scientific gardening, business enterprises, all occupy them.

Woman's Club to Hear Howe.

Along the line of the above diatribe is the dinner being gotten up by that really remarkable association, the Women's City club, which is to take place next Thursday evening at the Auditorium hotel, the object of which is to hear a talk from Frederic C. Howe, commissioner of the port of New York, on "The City of Tomorrow." Mr. Howe, who spoke last November before the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, is a delightful speaker and every one who heard him, then in Mrs. John B. Lyon's drawing rooms, will be eager to hear him again.

Miss Mary McDowell, president of the Woman's City club, and Mrs. Frederic C. Bartlett, are chiefly responsible for this meeting.

Maestro Campanini will so far lift the siege of the Auditorium theater next Saturday as to rent it to Mrs. Joseph Bowen and her valiant cohorts for a big noon massmeeting to protest against the spoils system and to adopt a woman's municipal platform.

Mrs. Bowen will be chairman at this meeting which is to have snappy, breezy five minute speeches from Miss Mary McDowell, president of the Woman's City club; Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, president of the Chicago Woman's club; Miss Florence King, president of the Woman's Association of Commerce; Mrs. Ida M. Fursman, president of the Teachers' federation; Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the Women's Trades Union league; and Mrs. James W. Morrison, president of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association.

The meeting is to be thrown open to the public, who don't have to pay for seats. The sale of the boxes pays for the hall, and among those who have bought boxes and who will be present at the meeting are the Mesdames Joseph T. Bowen, Emmons Blaine, Cyrus Bentley, F. C. Bartlett, J. J. Abbott, A. A. Carpenter, P. D. Armour III., Arthur Ryerson, F. C. Letts, H. M. Wilmarth, Medill McCormick, William R. Linn, F. T. A. Junkin, A. S. Peabody, Arthur Aldis, W. V. Kelley, Silas Strawn, George S. Isham, Julius Rosenwald, G. A. Carpenter, Benjamin Carpenter, Russell Tyson, and William Hubbard. Francis T. A. Junkin has bought a box for himself because he is so enthusiastic about the meeting and its object.

Suffragists Pack Fairbank Home.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's new and generously proportioned house was packed to the cornice last Tuesday by the members of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association to hear Robert Lovett discourse on the effect of the war on feminism and Mrs. Medill McCormick explain and discuss the big suffrage parade next June. When the nearly 300 chairs were filled those who came a few minutes after the hour the meeting was called for packed the halls and stairways, while those who arrived still later turned disconsolately away.

Unexpected enthusiasm for the parade was the response to Mrs. McCormick's speech. Money was pledged and also over 1,000 recruits were promised. That is, various women undertook to raise ten, fifty, or 100 marchers. So much for the spirit of Chicago!

New Nurses' Home a Model.

Along the line of already accomplished facts—for there are such here—was the reception held by the woman's auxiliary board of the Presbyterian hospital last Tuesday afternoon in the really beautiful new nurses' home built by money given by those generous, public spirited brothers, the late O. S. A. Sprague and the late Albert A. Sprague.

Mmes. David W. Graham, Edward Blair, John C. Welling, John Timothy Stone, John Drake, Tracy Drake, B. Goodspeed, George R. Nichols, Henry C. Hackney, Miss Helen Drake, and many other women who have labored so faithfully for this great institution, were proud to show this probably the most perfect, complete, and attractive home for nurses in the world.

Europe has nothing like the American system of trained nurses and the wounded soldiers in the warring countries feel themselves the luckiest of their unhappy kind when they fall into the hands of American trained nurses in American hospitals.

Over 200 nurses are housed in the "Sprague Memorial," and, from the immaculate kitchens and thoroughly equipped laboratory in the basement to the delightful, flower decked sun parlor on the ninth floor, the big building is an ideal shrine for our modern counterpart for Roman vestal virgins and medieval nuns. As the ancient Latins cherished their vestal virgins as their choicest institution, as in the darkest dark ages of Europe the good deeds and piety of the nuns shone out with a white light, so today the position of the trained nurse in our scheme of life has a spiritual significance peculiar to the time.

Leads in Charity Patients.

The Presbyterian hospital has, by the way, the largest number in proportion of nonpay patients of any institution of its kind in the city, the county hospital being a public enterprise. The former is the product of Chicago's oldest medical institution, Rush Medical school, founded in 1837. The hospital was largely indebted for its existence to one of our foremost pioneers, the late Dr. Joseph P. Ross, father of Mrs. Robert Holz and Robert Ross.

It is the thought of such institutions as this hospital, the Michael Reese, St. Luke's, the Children's Memorial, the Passavant, the Chicago Lying-in, St. Joseph's, the Henrotin Memorial, the Augustana, the Visiting Nurse association, and their ilk that helps one to see through Chicago's unsightly exterior to the soul within.

Park for Lake Forest.

Not alone in alleviating the misery of the suffering are Chicago women busy. The Garden Club of Illinois, that has its habitation on the north shore, is planning to embellish the life of the healthy and well to do. At the instigation of its founder and first president, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, this club opened a competition last spring for designs for making a little park out of a wooded three acre triangle at the doorway to Lake Forest. The professor of landscape gardening at the University of Illinois was selected as the judge and out of many anonymous designs submitted Mrs. Blake's was chosen.

It calls for an irregularly shaped pool at one side backed by a clump of laurel; also for a tree rimmed village common large enough for Fourth of July gatherings. Color in spring will be given by flowering wild crabapple trees and hawthorn bushes. The other trees will be left as they grew there before the paleface intruded on this redman's domain. Arthur Heun shaped the pool, which will have a flagged border, while Otto Schaeffer, a Lake Forest young landscape gardener, gives his services as superintendent of the work, which is already under way.

What with this new park and the model village square, whose picturesque belfry already looms up west of the tracks, the summer Lake Forester will find this fashionable resort much embellished on his return in May.

Capt. Valerio Much Entertained.

A young Italian officer who is temporarily here selecting horses for the Italian government, and who has been much entertained socially in Chicago, is Capt. Alessandro Valerio.

He was one of ten Italian cavalry officers who a few years ago in England took all the prizes at the Olympia, a great equestrian contest, and astonished the English by their amazing feats in horsemanship. The Britisher rather fancies himself as a rider, but he took off his hat to these Latins who beat him at high jumping, steeplechasing, cross country riding, and at various fancy stunts, such as riding down nearly perpendicular inclines.

Capt. Valerio is a quiet, unassuming young man, as intrepid in English as in the field on horseback, though not so well trained in the ups and downs and illogical eccentricities of our language.

Casino's Season Closes.

The principal social event of the last week was the dinner dance Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sprague gave last Tuesday at the Casino to 126 of their friends. It closed the Casino's gay season, as it was Shrove Tuesday.

On this occasion an innovation was introduced by having in the reception hall a side table, à la Russe, spread with all sorts of appetizers, hors d'œuvres, as the French call them.

The northern nations, the Russians, Swedes, Norwegians, and Danes, always have these tables spread either in the dining room or in the reception room, where they serve dried and smoked fish and meats, sandwiches of all kinds and anything that can whet the appetite and make thirst more eager. These things are washed down with gin, schnapps, vodka, and other ardent liquors. As a rule the women do not partake of these viands, but leave this anteprandial ceremony to the men.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Fortnightly to Finance Needy Music Students.

By Inez Travers.

THE Fortnightly Musical club will give a recital on Tuesday, which recalls the fact that this club will shortly make an addition to its activities. In the nine years of its existence it has been merely social and musical. In the near future it will be philanthropic also. The former policy of the club has been to give fortnightly concerts, members contributing talent. Usually there is a reader, a pianist, and a violinist. Many of the prominent artists of the country have appeared before the club and many of the members are also well known artists.

Eligibility to the club presupposes musical talent and training, or at least an active and contributary interest in music. Seventy-five per cent of the club members are musicians.

There is a special committee appointed for the arrangement of programs in order to have them as varied as possible and to permit of no deterioration in the class of music.

The club has been self-supporting merely in the past, but now it is the object of the members to become able to give scholarships. They have come to realize the need among young musicians for financial help and encouragement. The funds for this purpose will come out of membership fees and from an annual concert.

After the musicals there is usually an informal business meeting, and it is expected that on Tuesday next some definite plans will be made.

At the recital on Tuesday the program will be rendered by John Weiderhirn, pianist; Miss Ruth Lowenberg, soprano; Miss Helen Reinsberg, reader; and Maurice Goldblatt, violinist.

The officers of the club are: Dr. J. B. Sonnenschein, president; Mrs. Milton Rich, vice president; Sidney Lyon, treasurer; Miss Rose Lewis, corresponding secretary; Harry Goldwater, financial secretary.

On the board of directors are: Miss Belle Tannenbaum, Mrs. B. J. Roe, Miss Ruth Lowenberg, Mrs. A. Levy, Miss Pauline Meyer, Miss Jennie Ludgin, Miss Rose Weisskopf, H. Goldwater, and Robert Rosenthal.

The Chicago chapter of the Mount St. Joseph alumnæ will give its annual luncheon and card party at Mandel's ivory room on St. Patrick's day.

The annual meeting of the chapter was held last Sunday and the following officers elected: Mrs. M. E. Finan, president; Miss Teresa Snow, vice president; Miss T. Kelly, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. Wilkins, recording secretary; Mrs. Daniel O'Connor, treasurer.

The chapter has taken up the work of giving a scholarship for some girl who has the ability and inclination to pursue a college education and lacks the wherewithal. The party on Friday will be given to create this fund.

The following will be hostesses: Mesdames William Burmeister, J. M. Burke, Louis Badein, J. Campion, B. Doane, Martin Finan, F. H. Graham, Harry Kipley, Frank McNichols, L. McKay, Ed McLoughlin, Nicholas Nelson, Daniel O'Connor, George Prim, F. Prinat, F. S. Wilson, W. M. Wallace, and J. Wilken, and the Misses T. Ellis, M. O'Connor, Blanche Reeve, and Anna Walsh.

This Does More Than Remove Hair

The razor, pastes, rub-on preparations and liquid imitations of De Miracle act in the same manner. They merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, is the only logical and scientific way to remove hair. It alone contains certain ingredients which are antagonistic to hair and which are quickly absorbed. Therefore it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Avoid disappointment, buy De Miracle by name. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co. or Buck & Rayner's six stores, or order direct from De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. C-27, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

Magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle.

Pictorial Review SAYS: "It has been many years since I have had occasion to speak with such praise of any article."

How to rouse a sluggish skin

A dull, sallow, lifeless complexion has several causes. Whatever the cause in your case, your skin needs stimulating. The following treatment is the most effective you can use.

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and hot water. If your skin has been badly neglected, rub a generous lather thoroughly into the pores using an upward and outward motion, until the skin feels somewhat sensitive. After this, rinse well in warm, then in cold water. Then rub your skin for five minutes with a lump of ice and dry carefully.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of an authority on the skin and its needs. This treatment with it cleanses the pores, brings the blood to the face and stimulates the fine muscular fibres of the skin. You can feel the difference the first time you use it—a promise of that lovelier complexion which the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York, Cincinnati, Chicago.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

New Church for the Methodists at Albany Park.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE corner stone for a new Methodist Episcopal church at Albany Park will be laid this afternoon at 3 o'clock by Bishop W. F. McDowell. He will be assisted at the service by the Rev. John Thompson and the Rev. L. F. W. Lesemann.

The new building, which will cost about $25,000, will be ready for occupancy, it is hoped, before July 1. It will be located at Wilson and Albany avenues and will take the place of the temporary structure which has been occupied for five years under the pastorate of the Rev. I. E. Putnam.

The temporary building is at Albany and Sunnyside avenues, one block from the proposed new building. The lot has been sold, but the temporary building will be occupied until the new structure is ready.

The Rev. Benjamin Fay Mills will preach at 3:30 p. m. today to young people in the community evangelistic meetings in Rogers Park. The young people's rally will be held in the Rogers Park Congregational church, Morse and North Ashland avenues. The coöperating churches are the Rogers Park Baptist, Congregational, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal, and Presbyterian. This evening Dr. Mills will speak on "The Greatest Guest Ever in Chicago." The chairmen of the various committees are: Executive, the Rev. Martin E. Anderson; finance, F. H. Tuthill; publicity, the Rev. J. Hastie Odgers; music, Mrs. C. L. Holzman; visitation, Mrs. E. P. Cain; devotional, the Rev. J. R. Nichols; ushers, J. O. Newton; young people, Dr. N. A. MacDonald. Services are held every day at 3:30 and 8 o'clock except Saturdays.

"Christianity and the Present Crisis" will be the subject of the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. Dr. Cadman was born in Shropshire, England, the son of a minister of the Wesleyan church. He graduated from London university in 1889. His first pastorate in America was the Metropolitan temple (Methodist Episcopal), New York. From there he was called to his present pulpit in 1900. He is the author of "Charles Darwin and Other English Thinkers," "The Three Great Oxford Movements," and other books. He is widely known also as a popular lecturer. In the absence of President Clifford W. Barnes of the club, William P. Sidley will preside. William Hudson Harper will be the scripture reader.

Three Baptist pastors have coöperated in writing a pamphlet on "Conversations on the Christian Life," which is especially intended to help young Christians to better living. The pastors are the Rev. A. H. Gage, the Rev. M. F. Sanborn, and the Rev. F. B. Neal.

The Union tabernacle at Berwyn, which was built largely through volunteer labor under the direction of the Rev. F. J. Thomas of Racine, Wis., will be finished today. The evangelistic campaign will begin next Sunday, but there will be preliminary drilling of the chorus choir this week. The leader of the singing, Arthur Lynn of Glasgow, Scotland, was once a grand opera singer. The evangelist who will preach and direct the campaign is the Rev. Charles Weigle.

Engraved by Gibson Sykes & Bowles

The Rev. Henry Hepburn

The Rev. Henry Hepburn, pastor of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church, Broadway and Sheridan road, is chairman of the committee in charge of self-denial week in the Presbyterian church, which begins today. Dr. Hepburn sent a letter to all the churches of the presbytery urging liberal offerings to make good the deficiency of between $400,000 and $500,000 of the missionary boards, chiefly caused by the war. The withdrawal of other churches from the missionary fields, it was said, lays heavier burdens on the American churches. Dr. Hepburn is preparing to dedicate, in connection with his church, a large Sunday school and social center building in June.

The Disciples are preparing for their congress, which meets in Chicago on April 25-27. Frederick E. Lumley, College of Missions, Indianapolis, is secretary, and J. H. Goldner of Cleveland, O., is president. Leaders of the church from different parts of the United States will be present.

The Rev. Z. B. T. Philips of St. Louis will be the speaker at the Lenten services this week in the Majestic theater, 22 West Monroe street. The services begin at 12:10 and close at 12:30 o'clock. The crowd was so large at the opening service last Wednesday that Bishop Charles P. Anderson experienced difficulty in gaining an entrance, and was obliged to stand through the service after he did succeed in getting in. The speaker last week was the venerable Hudson Stuck, archdeacon of the Yukon.

Church clubs, guilds, or other organizations are being appealed to by the committee on civic coöperation of the Industrial Club of Chicago for the purpose of securing men and women of these organizations to become civic coöperators. The duties of the civic coöperators are to obey the laws of the city and to help others to obey them. They are not for the purpose of finding fault but for constructive and corrective work where abuses exist. Each civic coöperator is furnished with a summary of the city ordinances relating to sanitary conditions and regulation of streets and alleys and for police protection. Groups of coöperators are expected to correct certain abuses without calling on other authority wherever they may be able. When they need police help they are to secure it. Each coöperator is to be registered by number and is to be given a card showing his authority. It is to be a voluntary service without compensation and therefore one which will appeal to the altruistic membership of the churches. The chairman is Angus S. Hibbard, 1105 Bell Telephone building.

Evangelism will be the subject discussed at the Congregational ministers' meeting tomorrow at 10:30 in the Masonic temple. The speakers will be the Rev. B. F. Aldrich, who will have charge of the devotions; the Rev. John Thompson of the Methodist Episcopal church, who will speak on "Pulpit Evangelism," and the Rev. Frank D. Burhans, Park Manor Congregationalist church, who will speak on "Pastoral Evangelism." The Rev. E. Gaylord and the Rev. A. J. Ridings will lead the discussion.

A young people's midwinter campaign is now in progress at the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard. Alkali Makes Soap Bad for Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in; about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

French Charities Benefit from Cubist Party

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Everybody that remains on the rock of Manhattan is still working for charity. You would think to look on the first tee of a golf course in Palm Beach that Manhattan was a deserted village. Five hundred would-be golfers stood in line the other day waiting turns to drive off. Still, a few taxpayers do remain on the rock and among their activities of the week was a benefit entertainment for the Lafayette fund and other French charities.

It was a cubist and modernish vaudeville-dance, with Mrs. William Astor Chandler in command. The party had an element of mystery about it that piqued everybody's interest. In the first place no one seemed to know who, besides his own little clique, was invited. Then he and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman were among the subscribers.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

One of the most attractive models at the fashion show given by the Anti-Suffrage league was Miss Frances Judson. She wore an evening gown of Persian bouquet, trimmed in dull gold lace, with hand decorations of peacock blue in the bodice.

Bridge Prizes Ornate.

Styles in bridge prizes have suddenly taken a turn toward ornateness. Whereas the fanciest reward the hostess of two seasons ago could evolve was a ruffled parasol, women of today are giving bonds and dear knows what all. Read what prize winners will receive who play on March 28 at the Ritz for the benefit of the Animal league: A box at the Metropolitan Grand Opera, several boxes for theaters, a Chow dog, a share of preferred steel stock, a harp.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. James Speyer, and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt are among the hostesses.

It is difficult when telling about smart society to keep one's remarks off Aiken and Palm Beach. Nearly all of the smart world is either at one of these places or the other. The other day Morton F. Plant cubist uniform, and it performed on various musical instruments. A great deal of fun was had and $8,000 was raised. Mr. [illegible] know who he was going to take into dinner. The invitations merely cautioned that guests should leave their [illegible] and company manners at home." It added that "censors, fighters, chaperons, reporters, grooms, people not in costume, and supper depressors will be lined up and shot at the cubist entrance door."

There was some little anxiety resulting from this threat, as well as from the uncertainty regarding dinner partners. On assembling, however, everybody was vastly relieved, as the guests were chosen and paired with great care, and (in brilliant contrast to many of the parties of the winter) all good friends were allowed to sit together.

There was a one man band, wearing a gave a purse of $100 to the winning baseball team, the players in both of which were recruited from the colored waiters in the hotels. The next day two teams composed of our leading New York financiers and sons of financiers played on the same diamond. There is democracy for you. I have tried hard to think of one reason why this should not have been and cannot. And yet I know that some are going to exclaim "How extraordinary!" Russell Colt, Craig Biddle, and Forsyth Wickes were among the players.

Odd Conceit in Sports Coat.

Almost before I have got round to chronicling the fact that one of the many private cars sidetracked outside the big hotel in Palm Beach brought to the lovely place Mrs. William V. Vanderbilt Jr., she is about to depart. If she has not already boarded her car for New York she will do so in a day or two.

She is wearing a sports' coat that has caught attention because of the odd way it fastens. It is of conventional cut and of jersey cloth, which is worn a great deal this winter, but is extraordinary in that it buttons only at throat and belt. She wears a silk hat with it that is trimmed in an Indian border of pointed embroidery over the edge.

Vincent Astor's party sojourning at Palm Beach picked up bag and baggage the other day and sailed over to Cape Haitian. They want to be present at some festivities of the Haytian club. Needless to mention, they were on Mr. Astor's yacht, Noma. He is so devoted to this good little boat, which was his father's that he seldom sets foot on any other.

Mrs. Reid Returns.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, who has taken to crossing the ocean frequently, now that it has become dangerous, came over the other day on the Rotterdam. She went abroad recently to visit her daughter. She says that she does not know which seems more like home to her, England or America. Her daughter is married to an Englishman, and she herself spent so many happy years there, where her husband was ambassador at the court of St. James, that I have the impression that she is inclined to think of the little island as home—in spite of her delightful camp in the Adirondacks, and other strongholds to tie her to America.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and her son, Herrmann, have returned to New York from Palm Beach. Pierre Lorillard, on the other hand, has left the Plaza hotel for a sojourn at the fashionable wintering place.

As you Chicagoans probably know in more intimate detail than I, your own Marshall Field has purchased a site for a winter residence for himself and his young wife. It is in Aiken, on one of the highest points thereabouts. He is said to have paid $20,000 for the ground, on which he expects to build a residence as handsome as any there.

This is the first important real estate deal that has taken place in Aiken since William K. Vanderbilt bought Elmcourt from Joseph Harriman several years ago.

"B. L. T."

To thousands and thousands of bright-minded men and women no day is well begun without the reading of "A Line o' Type or Two" by B. L. T.—the humorous and sarcastic "Colyum Conductor" who is the tabasco sauce of The Tribune's editorial page six days a week.

If you get up feeling blue, B. L. T. is better than any tonic you can take.

If your sense of humor has become near-sighted, cross-eyed or otherwise deformed, B. L. T. will bring you back to normal vision.

If your wits are dull and rusty, B. L. T. will sharpen them.

If you'd like to roast Friend Husband or your "dearest friend" in the crispest, neatest way, study B. L. T.'s masterly manipulation of smooth, velvet-hidden, cutting phrases and you'll soon become an expert.

B. L. T. is the famous author of "A Line o' Verse or Two," a book of scintillating verses you can read with keenest relish when all other forms of reading pall upon you.

He is also famous as the author of "The Pipesmoke Carry," a pocket volume which takes you to the north woods of Canada and gives you a good vacation while sitting at your fireside.

B. L. T. is a dreamer, a poet, a bubbling fountain of refreshing humor, a cold and crusty critic, and a live wire.

SPRING SEASON OF GREATEST AUTO YEAR IS HERE

Disbrow's Wedding Bells Sound Knell of Famous Jay-Eye-See.

By J. C. Burton.

With a full page of motoring news, The Sunday Tribune introduces J. C. Burton as its automobile editor. Mr. Burton was formerly a feature writer on the Motor Age, and is an accepted authority on motor racing, touring, and other matters of vital interest to the car owner.

It is the aim of The Tribune, both daily and Sunday, to make its automobile department an instructive and entertaining feature. Readers will find only up to the second motoring news in the automobile columns of this publication.

The present year promises to be the greatest twelve months in the history of motoring, viewed from the car making, car selling, racing, touring, or any other point of comparison with former seasons, and to keep pace with the progress of the automobile in all of its varied fields of endeavor, the motorist has but to read The Tribune's automobile news.

THE wedding bells that rang for Louis Disbrow, king of dirt track drivers, last Saturday night not only marked his retirement from the automobile racing game after a hazardous and record breaking career of ten years, but also sounded the knell of his favorite mount, the historic Jay-Eye-See, probably the best known thoroughbred of steel in the country.

Although it never won a grand prize, a Vanderbilt cup, or an Indianapolis 500 mile classic, the raucous roar of the Jay-Eye-See's motor and the fire spitting bark of its exhaust, which now are silenced for all time, have been heard throughout the United States for the last four years. In the days of its glory it was the star attraction at state and county fairs. When driven through the streets it has broken up circus parades. On one occasion it pitted its voice against that of Theodore Roosevelt and "got the crowd."

With its driver a sacrifice to Hymen, the Big Bill of automobile competition passes out of the range of the spotlight's glare, passes to the realm of remembered things as have other famous racing cars before it—the No. 8 National, in which Joe Dawson rode to victory at Indianapolis in 1912; the Schroeder Mercedes that in the same race played Ralph de Palma false on the next to the last lap when the Italian almost had $25,000 in prize money in his grimy grasp.

Not only has the Jay-Eye-See lost its driver, but what is more vital, its stamina. It has been doomed to the home for superannuated automobiles where it will have good and reminiscent company in the Marmon Wasp, the Peerless Green Dragon, and the Packard Grey Wolf. It is now on exhibition in the window of a Kansas City motor car agency and for the first time in its strenuous career will be left behind when Alex Sloan, impresario of dirt track racing, and his troupe of barnstormers take to the road next month.

The Jay-Eye-See is a car with a history. It once carried the nameplate of Fiat on its hood, for it originally was built in the Turin shops of the Italian company, where some of the most famous mounts in the annals of automobile racing have been born. Felice Nazzaro was its first driver, flinging a challenge to Time with it on the beach at Ostend, where in 1913 Duray covered a kilometer at a speed of 142 miles per hour, and at Brooklands, the English track on which Jean Chassagne crowded [illegible] within the hour.

It was in the late fall of 1909 that the big Fiat, as the Jay-Eye-See then was called, was purchased for $12,000 by E. J. [illegible], a millionaire sportsman of New York, and brought to America for the purpose of humbling the Blitzen Benz, which was touted as invincible by its driver, Barney Oldfield. Its maiden start in this country was at the Atlanta speedway in November of that year. The late Lewis Strang was at the steering wheel and pitted against him in a three mile free for all were Oldfield and Christie. Both took the Fiat's dust, although Barney, driving the Betsy Benz, got away to a commanding lead.

After its triumphant American début, however, the big Fiat gained the reputation of being an unruly mount with a temperament as fiendish as that shown by Theda Bara in the vampire movies. Ralph de Palma attempted to tame the mechanical monster but it rebelled, blowing off the top of two cylinders in a two mile time trial on the Daytona-Ormond beach the following spring. David Bruce-Brown then attempted to master it, broke the Fort George hill climb record and went back again to the Benz. Early in 1911 Ralph de Palma volunteered to handle the big Fiat for a second time, but with no better success than in his first attempt. In practice for a match race against Oldfield on the Los Angeles motordrome the car again blew off a cylinder head and was abandoned as incorrigible by its disappointed owner and driver, and doomed to a year's solitary confinement in cold storage.

It was in the waning days of 1911 that Louis Disbrow first cast covetous eyes upon the gasoline eating Brobdingnagian. At that time Louis had had his first taste of fame as a result of establishing new American straightaway records from 150 to 300 miles with the Pope Hummer on the Jacksonville course, and was determined to sit on the throne of the dirt track monarch from which Oldfield had been thrown by the contest board of the American Automobile association for participating in an unsanctioned race against Jack Johnson, the heavyweight champion of the prize ring.

Disbrow had the ambition, the skill, and the nerve. What he needed was a car and a manager. He sought out Alex Sloan, then directing the destinies of the Case team, and asked him to be his Frohman. The request was made at Savannah during practice for the 1911 grand prize. Sloan was shy on drivers, Joe Jaegersberger being hors du combat with a broken leg, and Jay McNay having been killed when his car overturned in a fatal workout. In the eleventh hour predicament he offered contracts to several stars, but was turned down, the Case cars being considered hoodoos because of the accidents in which they had figured, and being stamped as dangerous because of weak steering knuckles.

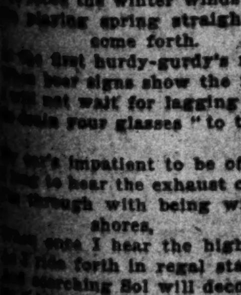
Disbrow, as superstitious as any driver in the game, offered to drive one of the hoodoo cars in the grand prize without compensation; however, provided Sloan would manage him the following year. That offer, which was accepted, led to the Sloan-Disbrow alliance that was terminated by Hymen last week, and resulted in the purchase of the big Fiat by the retired dirt track king.

The Italian car was torn down and rebuilt by Disbrow during the winter, the changes made in it including a new motor and the fitting of an inverted boat body, the latter designed on the theory that water and wind resistance are the same. The Fiat nameplate was torn from the front of the radiator, and the car was rechristened the Jay-Eye-See.

Disbrow's father named the car. He was a horseman and had loaned J. I. Case, the pneumatic tired sulky to which the Racine harvester manufacturer's famous pacer, Jay-Eye-See, was hitched when it stepped its record mile of 2:10 at Narragansett park. The name was most appropriate, as the big car was attached to a stable in which thoroughbreds of steel, made in the plant founded by J. I. Case, predominated.

The reconstructed and renamed Fiat made its first start as the Jay-Eye-See in a two mile time trial on the two mile dirt track at San Diego, Cal., March 31, 1912. It had all of its old speed and power but none of the artistic temperament that forced De Palma and Bruce-Brown to abandon it as untamable. Under the guidance of Disbrow, a veritable pigmy, it covered the distance in :38 2-5 and shattered the American record then held by Oldfield.

With such a mount Disbrow got away to a flying start on the trail to fame. In the four years he has campaigned it he has used the Jay-Eye-See exclusively for exhibition work, with one exception, starting it in a match race against the Blitzen Benz at Columbus last season. Not once in the four years has it challenged Disbrow for the mastery.



Up Parnassus on High

A PLACE IN THE SUN.

I'm not of the Teuton horde, I do not play at war's red game,
I have not drawn a flashing sword and yet my slogan is the same:
I've faced the winter winds that blow, the white battalions of the north;
[illegible] playing spring straight, place, and show, and bid the bashful sprite come forth.
At the first hurdy-gurdy's note, I'll roam by restless gypsy's code;
When beer signs show the rampant goat, I'll be upon the open road;
I will not wait for lagging May her flower scented course to run,
[illegible] drain your glasses "to the day" I take my place beneath the sun.

My car's impatient to be off, a temper'mental steed of steel;
[illegible] to hear the exhaust cough and grasp once more the steering wheel.
I'm through with being winter's thrall, lashed by the winds from arctic shores,
When once I hear the highway's call, I'm monarch of the great outdoors.
As I ride forth in regal state, a playful zephyr bears my fan
And searching Sol will decorate me with a coat of healthy tan.
Of fickle March I have no fear, my fireside touring days are done;
I cannot wait—my day is here—I've found my place beneath the sun.

Porporato Dodging German Shrapnel.

Porporato

JEAN PORPORATO, the Italian race driver, who captured second place and $21,000 in prize money in the Chicago motor derby of 1915, will not play tag with fame and fortune on American speedways during the 1916 season. Porporato has substituted the khaki of Mars for the khaki of Mercury. His skill as an automobile driver was too valuable an asset to be overlooked by the Italian war lords, who have detailed him to pilot an ambulance and race over the mountain highways on the eastern front to the applause of bursting shrapnel.

Jean, the Fearless—a title he earned by his daring in the inaugural event on the Chicago speedway last June—planned to return to America this spring and flirt with a harem of beautiful women, whose profiles adorn American dollars, when he sailed for Europe in December to assist Louis Coatalen, his chief, and the designer of the record breaking Sunbeams, in the development of aviation motors for the British flying corps.

According to a report, emanating from London about a month ago, Porporato was to be put in charge of two new Sunbeam cars that the English makers planned to ship to America for a racing campaign, but a subsequent cable, received in New York yesterday, announced that the Italian had donned a uniform and that his chances of appearing in this country are as remote as the chances of the proverbial snowball to survive the heat of the calorific hereafter.

In his first American campaign Porporato gave promise of giving the American drivers a battle royal for their laurels. Although he failed to finish inside the money at Indianapolis, his maiden start in this country, he came back strong in the Chicago 500 mile race and was the most dangerous challenger of Dario Resta, the victor, from starting bomb to checkered flag.

The Sunbeam car, which he drove in each of these events, was shipped back to England at the conclusion of the Chicago race, however, and Porporato was forced to make a new alliance. He accepted an offer from Finley R. Porter, former engineer of the Mercer company, to take charge of the rebuilding of the Knight motored F. R. P. cars and to captain the F. R. P. team, but he did not taste competition thereafter, spending the remainder of the season in the shops at Port Jefferson, N. Y., in a futile attempt to remedy irreparable defects in the machines that lacked the requisite staying power to even qualify for the Indianapolis, Chicago, and New York contests in the elimination trials.

Albert Guyot, another foreign driver who participated in the Indianapolis 500 mile race of 1913 and 1914, has a new job that might be classified under light occupations. After eighteen months of service as a military chauffeur Guyot has been transferred to the flying corps of the French army and given a Nieuport biplane, capable of a speed of 120 miles an hour, to handle. All he has to do is to chase and bring down German taubes that invade French air. Guyot is an experienced aviator, being the first man to drive a Bleriot machine.

Besides maintaining a bureau of information as to the best automobile routes throughout the country "The Tribune" is prepared to answer all technical questions about automobiles. Address all inquiries to High Speed, care of "The Tribune," Chicago.

Please advise me as to the quickest and most effective method of learning the mechanical side of the automobile trade.
D. S.

The cheapest and best method to acquire a fundamental knowledge of motor car mechanics is to buy a copy of "Questions and Answers Relating to Automobile Design, Construction, Driving, and Repair," by Victor W. Page, M. E. (the Norman W. Henley Publishing company, publisher). The book may be purchased from any of the leading dealers in automobile supplies. If you care to gain a complete, practical education in the subject we would advise you to take a course at the Greer College of Motoring, Chicago, or some other similar school.

Will you kindly advise me where I can procure an automobile traffic signal which, in addition to serving as a tail light, also indicates which way a driver is about to turn, slow down, or stop. Please give me a description of the instrument if possible.
C. E. J.

The device you refer to may be purchased from any automobile supply house. The instrument consists of a metal case with ground glass front, on which appear two arrows, one pointing to the right and the other to the left. It also bears the words, "right," "left," and "stop." The driver of the car presses buttons on his steering wheel or dash and by lighting the proper word signals his contemplated actions to the drivers of following cars.

I would like to know which of the Buick models has the most speed, the big six roadster, model D 54, or the light six roadster, model D 44. How fast are these cars supposed to run at their highest speed over good roads?
J. ROSS SWIGERT.

The Buick Motor company informs us that the guaranteed speed of the big six model D 54 is from seventy to seventy-five miles an hour and that of the light six model D 44 is from sixty to sixty-five miles an hour. In our opinion the cars should be able to attain their indicated speed over good roads.

Kindly publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the best route from Chicago to Berrien Springs, Mich., and to Indianapolis, Ind.
A. J. OTT.

Chicago to Berrien Springs, through Jackson park, Bond avenue, South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Gary, Michigan City, Rolling Prairie, Hudson Lake, Niles, Berrien Springs, 115 miles. Chicago to Indianapolis, through South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Crown Point, Thayer, Roselawn, Aix, Rensselaer, Remington, Wolcott, Montmorenci, Lafayette, Frankfort, Kirklin, Westfield, Indianapolis, 204 miles.

Please publish the best route from Chicago to Logansport, Ind. Are the roads good at this time of year?
E. S. GARDNER.

Chicago to Logansport, through South Chicago, Hammond, Highlands, Crown Point, Thayer, Roselawn, Aix, Rensselaer, Remington, Wolcott, Reynolds, Monticello, Logansport. The roads are in rather poor condition at this time of year, but may be traveled over without much trouble.

Will you kindly give me reference through the columns of THE TRIBUNE to recent complete and comprehensive magazine articles relative to the Lincoln highway? Is the highway excellent for bicycling, and what would you estimate the time required for a bicyclist of the average type to make the trip?
M. V. P. MILLER.

Leading magazines such as the Saturday Evening Post and others have carried articles regarding the Lincoln highway. The dates on which these articles appeared, together with complete information regarding the highway, may be obtained by addressing the home office of the Lincoln highway, Times Trust building, Detroit, Mich. While portions of the highway are excellent, there are many stretches that might prove fairly good for motoring but bad for bicycling. The last sentence of your question is too broad for a direct answer. The time required would depend altogether upon the ability and stamina of the cyclist. It must be remembered that the total length of the Lincoln highway is approximately 3,700 miles.

Exhaust Echoes

By J. C. Burton

The chamber of commerce of Portland, Ore., will be host to the members of the Chicago Automobile club and the Chicago Traffic club on Wednesday evening, when an illustrated lecture on the scenic beauties of the Pacific northwest and the Columbia river highway will be given in the ballroom on the nineteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle. Although only recently completed, the Columbia river highway is a much talked of motor trail and probably will be traveled by many eastern motorists during the coming season.

Because of the constantly increasing demand for service from local motorists during the last year, Manager Gardner of the Chicago branch of the Willard Storage Battery company has been forced to increase the floor space of the service station at 2524-34 Wabash avenue, from 12,000 to 22,000 square feet. This new addition, which employs fifty men, was only recently opened.

Since the success of the South African motor squadron in running down De Wet by means of a convoy of Maxwell cars, South African dealers have been ordering Maxwells by cable, a recent shipment including 122 machines of that make.

The orange colored Case car, christened by humorists "the A. P. A. model with the Sing Sing upholstery," and which attracted so much attention at the New York and Chicago automobile shows, will cast its refulgence over local boulevards soon, having been sold to Otto J. Malina, a Chicago motorist, who specified that the machine should not be delivered until after March 17. Safety first, what?

In a recent hill climb at Montrose, Colo., a Dodge car carried off premier honors by making the top with a 1,760 pound cargo of nine passengers. The hill is only 200 feet long, but has an average grade of more than 36 per cent, and at one place a pitch of 48.25 per cent.

Joe Dawson to Play Role of Come Back.

Joe Dawson

JOE DAWSON, who at the wheel of a blue National captured the most dramatic of all Indianapolis speedway races, the 500 mile contest of 1912, may again put on the armor of Mercurian knighthood and shiver lances in gasoline scented combat during the impending season.

All that Joe needs is a clean bill of health in order to return to the game after a restless and purseless hiatus of two years. A car is waiting for him; so is a year's contract. He must convince the owners of the Indianapolis speedway, however, that he has completely recovered from the injuries received in the Hoosier classic of 1914, when he risked his own life to save that of Lino Bonani, mechanician of the overturned Isotta, who had jumped from the car and lay prostrate on the track directly in the path of Dawson's flying Marmon.

Dawson's heroism on that occasion cost him painful fractures and bruises and a wrenched back that has been slow in responding to surgical treatment. Last season, a year after the accident, he was considered too weak to drive.

According to reports from Indianapolis, Dawson at the present time is as strong as he ever was, and as soon as a physician submits a written report to that effect he will sign up with the Prest-O-Lite team and drive one of the four Maxwells that are campaigned under the direction of Eddie Rickenbacher.

Baron Rick is enthusiastic over his chances of landing Dawson as a teammate, as he has experienced much trouble in securing an eligible driver because of the edict of the Maxwell owners that only bachelors can handle their mounts. The wedding bells have yet to ring for Joe and a leap year proposal is the only thing endangering his eligibility.

The signing of Dawson will complete the roster of drivers that will handle the eight cars owned by the Indianapolis speedway, only six of which will be started in any one race. Rickenbacher and Dawson will be at the wheels of the Maxwells; Johnny Aitken and Rene Thomas, the French star, will chase prize money with the Peugeots, and the Premier Special team will consist of Howdy Wilcox and Tom Rooney, who formerly rode with Gil Anderson in the Stutz.

State Investigator New Peril to Law Violating Motorist.

BOXING, wrestling, and bicycle racing have their masked marvels, and hereafter Chicago motorists will have to dodge the state automobile investigators, who are just as mysterious and probably more dangerous, or obey the rules of the road to the ultimate letter of the code. Like the bogey man that James Whitcomb Riley's "little orphan Annie" told about, the state automobile investigators will "get you if you don't watch out."

There are 100—count 'em—100 in the city of Chicago and Cook county. During the last week they were decorated with shining shields of authority by the secretary of state, Lewis G. Stevenson, and empowered to report to police officials all violations of the state motor vehicle laws. They are the Sherlock Holmes and the Lecocqs of the automobile world. Their identity is to be kept as secret as that of the Russian league of nihilists. Theoretically they are a strong citizen constabulary. Their practicality is an open question.

Plain clothes men of the highway are an innovation in Illinois. Provision was made for them by the amended state motor vehicle law, which went into effect Jan. 1, by the following clause.

"The secretary of state, for the purpose of more effectively carrying out the provisions of this act, is hereby authorized and empowered to appoint special representatives to act as automobile and motorcycle investigators, in such numbers and for such localities as he may deem advisable, and investigators to serve without compensation."

A call was issued for volunteers. In Chicago the presidents of the Chicago Automobile club and the Chicago Motor club and the chairman of the citizens' traffic and safety commission were asked to submit a list of recommendations from which appointments might be made.

According to the regulations and instructions, issued for the guidance of the investigators, the duties of the boulevard rurales and the violations on which they will report are as follows:

"The section of the law most frequently violated, judging from the complaints reaching the office of the secretary of state, is that relating to speed. Fast and reckless driving is responsible for most of the deaths and accidents caused by motor vehicles. Investigators should be on the alert to put a stop to the practice of speeding or racing by taking prompt and vigorous action in every case coming to their attention.

"It should be kept in mind that the law does not authorize a person to drive a motor vehicle at the rate of speed specified in section 10, regardless of circumstances, but simply states that a speed in excess of that rate shall be deemed unreasonable. There are many cases where it would be extremely reckless for a person to drive at the rate specified.

[The speed limits as specified in section 10 are as follows: Ten miles per hour through the business portions of any incorporated city, town, or village; fifteen miles per hour in the residence portion of same; and twenty and twenty-five miles per hour outside of cities and towns.]

"Attention is called to the definition of the term 'chauffeur' in section 13. A person operating a motor vehicle as a chauffeur without a license, as well as his employer, is liable to a fine. It is highly important that no unlicensed or inexperienced chauffeurs be allowed to operate motor vehicles in this state.

"Section 13 also provides that the secretary of state shall cancel the license of any chauffeur who shall operate a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. It is important that offenses of this character be reported promptly to the secretary of state, in addition to the filing of a complaint with the local authorities. The report should show whether a conviction was secured.

'Every chauffeur is required to wear his badge upon his clothing in a conspicuous place when operating a motor vehicle on the public highways.

"Reference to the law will disclose provisions requiring registration of both motor vehicles and motor bicycles with the secretary of state and concerning the use of numbers, lamps, brakes, horns, etc., which are frequently ignored. Investigators should insist on a complete compliance with these requirements.

"Violations of the law of which you have a personal knowledge should be dealt with by filing a sworn complaint alleging a violation of the law and the nature of the violation. Complaints may be filed with any justice of the peace in any township or county in which the offense was committed. The attention of the state's attorney, whose duty it is to prosecute, should be directed to the complaint, and where the offense is committed in some incorporated city, town, or village, it is advisable to notify the police authorities.

"Where it appears that the violation of the law is unintentional, it is suggested that the ends of justice can best be served by calling the attention of the offender to the appropriate provision of the law and requiring him to comply therewith.

"Investigators should insist that the local authorities vigorously and promptly prosecute persons against whom complaints have been filed. Such prosecutions will do more toward securing a compliance with the law than any other form of action. The law makes it the duty of the state's attorney and other local authorities to prosecute these violations on the filing of a complaint.

"Whenever an investigator files a complaint with the local authorities alleging a violation of this law, a brief, informal report should be made to the secretary of state for future reference, showing the name of the offender, the nature of the offense, and the result of the prosecution.

"By the conscientious exercise of the authority given investigators the practice of reckless 'joyriding,' speeding, and racing will be greatly discouraged. So many accidents are traceable to these causes that investigators will realize the necessity of curbing lawlessness of this character.

"It should be the object of investigators to interest and secure the coöperation of local automobile clubs and associations in a campaign of law enforcement. The owners of motor vehicles are as greatly interested in having traffic regulated with more regard for the public safety as is the general public.

"Investigators should lend their energy and influence to the promotion of the 'safety first' propaganda and should actively coöperate in any endeavor to further this worthy movement.

"Investigators are cautioned to exercise sound discretion in enforcing the motor vehicle law. In many cases advice and admonition will be as effective as a sworn complaint. It is my aim to appoint only citizens of standing, influence, good judgment, and reputation, and such citizens will, I am sure, avoid all suspicion of partiality and officiousness in their conduct. It is entirely unnecessary to suggest that best results may be obtained by a judicious and impartial application of the law."

The object of Secretary of State Stevenson in appointing automobile investigators is not to crowd the courts with offenders. Moral effect is the goal he seeks in putting every motorist under suspicion and using a force of nonuniformed drivers, interested sufficiently in law enforcement to serve without pay, to patrol the boulevards of the cities and the highways of the state.

It is highly probable that the campaign will result in more warnings than prosecutions. The vast majority of the investigators are not inclined to file complaints that will lead to fines, as they believe the most of the violations are caused by ignorance of the rules of the road and not by a willful attempt to break the laws.

The investigators, however, are determined to put a stop to reckless driving and the attempts of private owners and chauffeurs to operate their cars while they are under the influence of liquor, therefore they will be on the watch for motorists who do not come to a stop at crossings where street cars are taking on or discharging passengers, who use the boulevards for speedways, and who fail to "watch their breath."

Gossip of the Auto Trade

If Jess Willard lands a k. o. punch on the head or body of Frank Moran in their impending world's title bout, Cole owners will be justified in feeling a trifle proud, for the conqueror of Jack Johnson drives a Cole eight, which he purchased last summer when the Sells-Floto shows, with which he was a star attraction, played Indianapolis.

King Alfonso of Spain is neutral. He has purchased an American automobile, a Willys-Knight, and the first made in the U. S. A. car to be sold to a European monarch for his personal use. In order to ship the car with tires, on which England has placed an embargo, special dispensation had to be obtained from the British ambassador at Washington. Thus red tape has to be unwound even when a king orders an automobile.

A new style of highway map has just been issued for free distribution by the Goodrich national touring bureau, covering Indiana. This map shows only the main or trunk line highways of the Hoosier state. A considerable number of these highways have been surveyed in detail by Goodrich pathfinders during 1915 and route cards with road log descriptions have been issued showing every turn of the road, the locations of bridges, railroad crossings, forks, cross roads, etc., with mileages at every turn. The work of the pathfinders has been directed in particular to the endeavor that will be made during 1916 to signpost these main arteries of tourist travel.

"Peggy," one of the latest Triangle film releases, shows the ever attractive Billie Burke, the star, prominently featured in her cream white National roadster.

Last month showed an extraordinary increase of business for the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company over the total business for the same month last year. To be exact, the increase in the number of cars built and delivered was 117 per cent for that single month over the February, 1915, record.

One hundred and fifty million dollars will be expended in country-wide roads improvement during the next five years, if the coöperation between the national government and the several states, set forth in the measure reported to the senate by its committee on postoffices and post roads as a substitute for the Shackleford house good roads bill, finds approval. Senator Bankhead's committee dissented from the legislation passed in the house in that it preferred a definite sum per year rather than "any amount up to $25,000,000"; believed that the money should only be expended for construction or improvement and not for maintenance, and also included in the distribution to the several states the additional factor of area, besides population and post road mileage. In both bills the states match the federal dollars, but the Bankhead bill definitely calls for $5,000,000 in 1916, $10,000,000 in 1917, $15,000,000 in 1918, $20,000,000 in 1919, and $25,000,000 in 1920. Incidentally the senate substitute requires that a state shall establish a state highway department, though its apportionment remains to its credit for at least three years.

Concerning Our Own Padded Cells; Some Echoes of an Opera Season.

Miss May Peterson

Miss May Peterson, soprano of the Paris Opera Comique, will make her debut in Chicago this afternoon at the Illinois theater.

By Eric De Lamarter.

GREAT zest in life for the nursery these days! Here is an opera season, just recuperating from its ten week debauch; here are directors and managers of various kinds, also recuperating; and a public, recuperating, but that nervous—that nervous! A line o' type hints that Mr. Muratore may not be reëngaged: argument and hysteria. Another tells that no one has been reengaged: argument and hysteria. Egon Pollak, who is only a conductor, has been reëngaged: no attention.

Rumors of plot and counterplot; the days of the Borgias are about to return to Congress street; "delenda est Carthago!" Cleofonte Campanini must go! The deficit swells, and swells, AND swells, in gossip. Detectives haunt the deserted temple of grand opera spooks. Reporters also. The Auditorium is to be torn down. Another company will invade Chicago, with more hysteria, and reëngagements, and hysteria. A lovely time is being had.

Bernard Ulrich resigns. So do Guy Hardy and Richard Pick. Buzz the tongue and wag the ear. The auditor takes the business office chair. More buzzes, more wags. Max Rabinoff steals into town. Business of vast mirage, visions of wonderful diplomacy, talk, talk, talk. He leaves town. Talk, talk, talk.

Letters to "The Voice of the People." Why was "Dejanire" sung on the Thursday night that it rained north of Diversey boulevard? More letters. "Why didn't these critics the papers pay tell us how bad the performances were? Mr. Campanini's goldish trinkets must have been efficacious!" To-whit, to-whoo!

Mr. Rabinoff desires to hire the Auditorium for s'more opera. Mr. Campanini will be scrubbing the second balcony floor at that time, and is sorry that he cannot change his gown and come to the door to receive. Zounds, and egad!

The old locks on the doors mysteriously vanish, and, in the dark of the moon, new ones take their places. Detectives, and shushes, and tin stars, and buzz, buzz, buzz! The bogie man is coming to town; empires are stubbing their toes; "de poipers" are in danger; Eleanora de Cisneros blooms forth at the Majestic theater with a vaudeville act. Hear the blood gurgle from the cut throat of her artistic future.

The lease with Klaw & Erlanger has two names in the place disposed for the party of the second part's signature. It might have had twenty. My dear, have you heard——?

And this is a city of grownups, bursting with culture, rabid in support of all agencies for advancement, a "center" with Bander-log diversions.

Before we go mad entirely let's rehearse for the last time the salient facts of this fussed-up opera record. The "Ring" was a great triumph for any season, and the German opera contingent, as a whole, a surprise, artistically and financially. The French department deported itself admirably, fell upon a few hapless novelties, and presented the best tenor in the history of resident opera—not to leave off the qualifying clause, for modesty's sake. The Italian repertory was sadly mistreated, and also fell upon a hapless novelty.

The "guests," every one, did valiant service, and, in two cases anyway, accomplished the marvels hoped for. The orchestra was excellent, the German stage management superlative, the ballet a joke. The schedule of performances was not a master tactician's planning. Many casts were absurdities—some for war reasons, some for the reason that singers were utterly unfit for a particular type of part. Much gossip bloomed on the ear, as it always does in the vicinity of an opera company. Much money was lost. Too much opera was given.

As an individual I could forgive the premiere of "Zaza," the two local Scarpias (a great strain, but let's be generous, seeing that it's all over for this year), the Saturday night "pop" performances, and the ballet in memory of that Sunday afternoon performance of "Faust," the spoken lines of "Cleopatre," and the thrall of "Das Rheingold!" Any one agree? O, well, let it go.

But the echoes waken again. Some one laughs a derisive "Ha, ha!" and the Auditorium foyer resounds with its defiant cackle. The town giggles. Whispers, nudges, winks. Great business of stagey, sly innuendo. Mr. Campanini eats a soft boiled egg and takes a taxi to the station. Several million necks are craned toward the rising sun; ears quiver; lips are pursed. Selah, again, and shush!

Aha! technicalities of the law! "deponent sayeth not," and sayeth nothing, industriously, generously. Who knows, anyway. Cranking of vast intellects; rumbles of gears worn smooth; honk, honk, honk!

Mind you, the opera season has been dead several weeks, but its spasms live after it, like "the evil that men do."

And how does it live? In swift, cool, sure appraisal of its merits and its demerits? Not so; in a pudding of personalities; in frantic, freakish exploitation of facts which are no truer because they wear the costumes of burlesque; in conjecture so wild that fortune telling by cards is a scientific postulate in comparison. And what is the result of all this?

The results are these: a little easy mirth; a growing conviction in the directly and the indirectly interested public's minds that the one-man-power system is unwisely applied to the management of opera in Chicago; an increasing embarrassment, and a sense of irritation on the part of those most concerned with the maintenance of opera here; an aftermath of cynicism and hilarity which will be a gypsy curse on next year's directorate, whether or not that directorate's emblem be Cleofonte Campanini.

Chicago has made its opera a joke before the eyes of its neighbors.

NEWS of the THEATERS

J. Hartley Manners, author of the austere work of art known as "Peg o' My Heart," announces his indignation over the harmful influence of commercialism in our theaters. He says he is willing to give his time and product to the establishment of art theaters in large cities where great actors, unrestricted, may work out their ideals.

"Taps" has been sounded for Miss Gertrude Atherton's "The Vein of Gold," and it will not be done next week at the Princess. "The Taming of the Shrew" has been substituted, with Miss Anglin as Katherine and W. Lawson Butt as Petrucio. It may be that Miss Anglin will play "Twelfth Night" in the course of the Princess engagement.

It is said by those who have seen it in Boston that Glen Mac Donough's "The Heart of the Heather" is a good show. In this play George MacFarlane engages in such valiant adventures as may befall a Scotch vagabond impersonating a young nobleman. He sings five songs, none of them being "Mother."

Miss Alice Brady is about to be starred under paternal auspices in a play called "Little Comrade," written by Burton E. Stevenson, a novelist of Chillicothe, O.

Mr. Hackett, ill with water on his knee, has ceased playing Macbeth and his theater, the Criterion in New York, will be closed until his production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" late this month.

It is proposed to found in New York a playhouse to be known as the Holbrook Blinn theater, the scope of which will be, briefly, to establish an intimate playhouse, where Mr. Blinn will produce and participate in the production of seriously serious and seriously comic plays of suspected literary and dramatic worth, and to contribute such droll and quaint ideas as will mark it as distinctively original.

If a comedy of the eighteenth century be done, it will be not because it is a classic as literature, but because it has definite present day interest. Or when a play by a modern continental dramatist is selected, it will not be because of its academical value, but because it fits into the idea of a New York repertoire theater of today.

A departure which Mr. Blinn hopes to inaugurate will be the idea of "invitation engagements" extended to prominent players who have perhaps four or six weeks' leisure. Probably two or three such engagements will be arranged during a season, in each case a play being provided in which the artist is anxious to appear.

William H. Crane, reminiscent concerning Eugene Field, recalls some experiences he had with the poet in Chicago just before he died.

"Eugene was the most companionable and charming man that you could meet," says Mr. Crane, "but he was an incorrigible practical joker. I remember the showers of congratulations that poured in on Mrs. Crane and me from all over the country when Field put a story in his column about a new addition to the Crane family in the person of Stuart Robson Crane. Field was delighted at the way in which he christened this mythical infant and enjoyed my discomfiture hugely. For two years every child story that he ran was attributed to this Stuart Robson Crane. Then, suddenly, he published a picture purporting to be a likeness of the youngster, and after that never referred to him again.

"Field loved companionship. Once, when I was playing in Chicago he asked Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Barnabee, Mrs. Crane and me to come to his house in the suburbs and spend Sunday with him and his family. We were told to come in the roughest, oldest, raggedest clothes we had. The whole party obeyed his injunctions implicitly. He took us to the living room, pulled the portieres aside, and pushed the four of us in. The place was crowded with about forty or fifty respectably and properly dressed persons who had been invited there to meet Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Barnabee and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crane. Think of our garments and then picture the tableaux. I discovered later that the guests had been summoned by engraved invitation and that Field had been careful to give the impression of considerable formality. Ten days later he died.

The war has not put a stop to the experiments in the Paris theater called the Grand Guignol. A new program of five short plays there includes one in which a scientist, in revenge, transfers the soul of a criminal to an innocent youth under the influence of drink. The operation is so successful that the victim commits a series of horrible murders, ending by killing the scientist himself.

Miss Grace George is contemplating Shaw's "Capt. Brassbound's Conversion" as an addition to her repertoire. It was acted in this country in 1907-'08 by Miss Ellen Terry, who, however, did not prosper in her essay as a lone star. Moreover, the popular appeal of the part of Lady Cicely in the Shaw comedy would seem to be Miss George's rather than Miss Terry's.

Miss Mae Sullivan of the "Town Topics" ensemble has had her suits for $225,000 damages against Arthur Hoe for breach of promise, etc., dismissed by the Supreme court of New York.

An effort is being made by Mlle. Pavlowa's Chicago representatives to obtain a theater for her use the week of April 24. Whatever may be the outcome of the dispute over the correct manner in which to manage and book the Auditorium, it seems reasonably certain that the matter will not be settled in time to permit of proper preparation for the week's engagement of the Pavlowa ballet and opera company, even should Campanini's refusal to give her time in the big theater be overruled.

Attending "Rio Grande" With the Author, Mr. Augustus Thomas.

Miss Fisher, as the colonel's wife in "Rio Grande," is packing his kit for his expedition against the Mexican bandits, when she sees the evil orderly who knows of her intrigue with the young lieutenant. The other figure in the picture is Miss Amelia Gardner, who as a shrewd, motherly, matter of fact army woman is admirable both in the character she plays and in the way she plays it.

By Percy Hammond.

AFTER inviting Mr. Augustus Thomas to go with me to the theater last evening I asked him to name the entertainment that he thought would please him the most. Mr. Thomas is a gracious and a hospitable host, so, waiving his own inclinations in the matter, he selected "Rio Grande," which is my favorite among the plays here and in New York. Although, as the author of the play, Mr. Thomas has seen it many times, I permitted him to make whatever sacrifice was involved in another view of it, because there were in my mind a few minor doubts that I felt sure he would dispel.

You have, perhaps, attended this army play at the Blackstone, and thought it a fine series of excursions and alarums in "the eternal conflict between love and the law." You have lost yourself in the brooding atmosphere of the frontier garrison, and sat in a sort of hypnosis under the brooding spell of the story which it surrounds. You have found its characters human and its episodes the plausible results of the interaction of organism and environment. And its background has thrilled you, hot from the first page, a veritable herald from a noisy world. Mr. Richard Bennett, a young actor, has further won your admiration by his playing of a middle aged, honest, suffering man of war; and you have been amazed by Miss Lola Fisher's handling of an ingénue, not odious, with a brave, weak, and anguished woman.

Still, since you are always more critical of a good play than you are of a bad one, you have said to yourself, "I think the first act, at the army post, is a bit slow." So, sitting with Mr. Thomas last evening, I said to him, "I think the first act is a bit slow." Remarks like that to Mr. Thomas are the apotheosis of intrepidity, for he is a mighty man of the theater, and no matter how big your circulation was last Sunday you feel that you are talking to a playwright who knows almost as much about the drama as you do. To paraphrase a description I once heard of Dumas fils, Mr. Thomas is a dramatist who can give Scribe and Sardou points and a beating at their own game; a prophet who can bring down new tables of the law from a Sinai hard by New Rochelle; a philosopher, wit, moralist, orator, a mystic, a dabbler in occultism, a man of the world, a politician, and a potential statesman who has never had an opportunity.

Patiently did Mr. Thomas expound the fundaments of the theater. "The greatest play," said he "strikes twelve, and the dramatist of experience distributes the numerals of his dramatic dialogue as far as possible as they are shown on the clock. If he has a four act play, his first act will have relatively the value only of I., II., and III., and his last act will have the numerical pressure of X., XI., and XII. By this I am trying to say that his first act would be comparatively slow. The two principal reasons for this are the necessity to acquaint his audience with the people about whom he purposes to interest them before he acquaints his audience with very stirring events. The second reason is the physical limitation of an audience's attention and the necessity of the accelerated appeal to that attention as the story progresses."

That sort of thing keeps you silent for a time and you begin asking Mr. Thomas about the murderous Mexican who appears and vanishes so precipitately into the umbra of expedients. You listen to him tell of the art of preparation as exhibited in the conversation about the first aid packages, one of which is soon to be applied to the murdered colonel; and you are fascinated by his explanation of the cloud which, painted upon the back drop, is a nimbus pregnant with foreboding. Finally you suggest that the characters seem to accept too casually the violent deaths which bestrew the story; that there is not the excitement or hysteria which such incidents inspire in life.

"The dramatic value of these things," says Mr. Thomas, "lies not in the fact itself, but in the effect of the knowledge of it upon the characters to whom the knowledge comes. This law is true of the introduction of any tragic happening in a play. Between the observing and ignoring of this law lies all the difference between sensationalism and true drama.

"To make much of a physical fact of death is to be morbid and sensational. To make much of its emotional consequences upon those whom it affects is to be truly dramatic. Skilled critics sometimes miss this point and accuse the dramatists who understand it of being too casual in the introduction of tragedy. The Greeks applied this law so rigidly that they never had a death in sight of the audience; and the modern dramatist introduces only enough of the physical entourage of death to make the reports sufficiently convincing."

I seek to record the seriously instructive portion of Mr. Thomas' impromptu discourse on the fundaments of playmaking rather than his flashing comment on the devices thereof, because neither you nor I nor any one who goes to the theater to be illuded therein should know of its tricks. In the case of "Rio Grande" tricks is not the term, because they are the finesse of the theater, the subtle strategies which cause us to believe what we see is true. He told me of the chair, which placed at the window of the colonel's quarters in the third act, reflecting a carefully muffled electric light, gives at the same time the outdoor and the indoor atmosphere. I had surmised previously that it was put there to enable the colonel to make a graceful entrance after his wife had been kissed by the blackmailing trooper. He told me of effective exits, which, stopped by effective entrances, would otherwise have been vapid vanishments from the stage. For every line Mr. Thomas had a reason. "A speech," said he, "must do one of three things or I cut it out. It must develop character; it must advance the story, or it must get a laugh." At that moment Major Lane, taking a drink of whisky in the colonel's house, said to him, "Is this bottled or bulk?" and the colonel answered, "Bulk. I get it from Nicholson's." The lines seemed to me to do none of the things which Mr. Thomas said that a line should do, and just as I was about to tell him so I discovered that it did all of them.

As Col. Bannard was about to read the letter in which his girl wife confesses her explicable weakness with young Lieut. Ellsworth, I said to Mr. Thomas, let us have something less mechanical and more psychological than the mere breaking of a pair of spectacles to prevent his discovering, at once, her infidelity. Let us, as the pundits say, have inevitability. This is a mere bit of arbitrary accident, and we should, in a drama by Augustus Thomas, have something deep-rooted from which the crisis must grow. The broken eyeglasses, said I, are a theatrical cogwheel, a device, machine-fitted to the task at hand. Whereupon a band in the distance began to play a dirge and Mr. Thomas as well as I forgot the little things of the drama. Ellsworth, a suicide, was entering a soldier's grave, and there were three volleys and "taps," and although the colonel shot his lecherous orderly in fine Kipling style, the big figure in the background was the dead young West Pointer. "You thought him," said Mr. Thomas, "a bit flowery in his love making, but shouldn't we keep just a little of that poetry in our plays?"

Well, whatever Mr. Thomas says I am for. Sick of the Willard Macks, and the George V. Hobarts, and the Bayard Villers, and the George Broadhursts, the David Belascoes, and all the other showmen of the theater, I figure that Mr. Thomas at his worst is better than the best of them. And in "Rio Grande," if I am not a fool, he is in his top notch.

Theater Triumphing Over Movies, but Plays Must Excel, Says Brady.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The theater, insists William A. Brady, who is right as often as he is wrong, and thereby strikes a fair average with his pronunciamentos, is coming back. The movies have reached the diagrammatic peak of their popularity and their hold is waning. Galleries and balconies are filling up the country over with amusement seekers, who have decided that if 25 or 50 cents is to be spent for the evening's entertainment, it can be invested more profitably in a regular theater than in a screen theater.

But, he warns his fellow managers, the theater cannot come back effectively with poor plays or cheap productions. No. 2 and No. 3 companies brazenly advertised as containing the original New York cast will never again be able to fool the people of the corn, cotton or wheat belts. They have found the proper antidote in the cheaper movies, and while they prefer to spend their money for the best of the spoken drama, they will not spend it for imitation samples.

Hence the question as to what will and what will not be classed as imitation is a pertinent one. Would these redeemed playgoers, we wonder, consider the four plays presented here last week up to the required standard? Would they, for instance, prefer "The Heart of Wetona" on the stage, where it is confined to two small interior scenes, or on the screen, where it could spread all over the surrounding prairie, and where, in place of three grunting Indians, there would have been a tribe?

Would they have preferred "The Greatest Nation," which is a mauve colored melodrama that deals with an incipient war between mythical kingdoms, to a picture play in which the armies of the two principalities would have been maneuvered about the California parks and foothills to lend color to the scene?

The other two, "Pom-Pom" and "The Road to Mandalay," being musical, are not adaptable for picture purposes, but there is still the open question as to whether or not they would be accepted by the public that is to be won back to the theater. Would they prove more diverting than the falling Keystone policeman or the pie-throwing comedians of filmdom?

"The Heart of Wetona" is a David Belasco production. The play was written by George Scarborough, who started the redlight drama on its way two seasons ago with "The Lure," and later scored a fair sort of success with a tense drama called "At Bay." It is a heap big Injun drama, the story of a Comanche chief's daughter who thought she loved one man, who was wicked, and discovered just in time to save the last act that she loved another, who was good. The type of melodrama that would be utterly impossible in a straight dramatic setting and is therefore shifted to Oklahoma and made an Indian story, in which the probabilities may be stretched with impunity.

No one but Mr. Belasco could have done so well with it. In addition to his fine sense of the theater he has had experience with the Indian drama. He was part author of that old success, "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and he has employed not a few of the same effects in this newer sample—the ominous beat o' distant tom-toms, the pale moonlight over the prairie only half concealing shadowy, silent figures of Indian watchers silhouetted against the skyline.

The tension is felt in the first scene. Lenore Ulrich, playing the Comanche chief's daughter, is just back from the government school and the "higher" civilization, and has confessed hysterically to her father her unfitness to perform the duties of a vestal virgin at the impending corn dance. She had met and loved a white man, who, she thought, was soon to come and claim her as his bride. Meantime she was neither maid nor matron. Peering through the two windows at back are the painted headmen of the tribe awaiting a word from their chief to hunt out the girl's lover and slay him in true Indian fashion, which is to say with a fine collection of old fashioned tortures. Frequently, with an ugh, ugh, they inquire the progress the chief is making in his effort to learn the man's name. Each time he is forced to bid them be patient, for Wetona will not tell.

When, in the next act, she seeks the Indian agent to tell him her troubles, her chieftain father follows, and, seeing the two together, suspects the agent of the deed. Being a good agent, and loving Wetona better than life itself, as is the custom with heroes of his type, John Miltern decides the best way to help the girl is to marry her. Later, when her lover comes for her, he will let her have the divorce she will need.

The lover comes, but it is not marriage he seeks. He is willing to let the agent assume that responsibility. He is, in fact, a good deal of a rotter, which Wetona discovers that very night. And, discovering it, she drives him from her. Soon he learns that the Indians, too, have found him out; that the house is surrounded, and that his one chance of escape is to make a run for it across the open yard to the stable where he has left his horse.

He runs, but he does not arrive. Three shots ring out on the still night air and the lover bites the dust. Then it is that Wetona decides one live and lovable middle aged agent is worth a wilderness of philandering lieutenants.

A Cynic's Tribute to John Drew.

Chicago, March 9.—[To the Dramatic Critic.]—It is good to find that you, while still young, though with a son in Harvard, can sincerely write, as you did in last Tuesday's TRIBUNE, of John Drew: "He is, perhaps, our best impersonator; and we know it not." Most young critics start reviews of new John Drew plays by writing about his clothes, and then, that the public may know they have been comical, switch with a "seriously, however," to explain that he has really never been quite the same since he left Augustin Daly's company, "with its matchless ensemble, its fine traditions, and its perfect discipline, furnishing an inspiration to the actor which, in this degenerate day of the drama, is sadly lacking," etc., etc., ad lib, ad infinitum, ad nauseam.

It takes, of course, a very young critic to express complete appreciation of just how good an actor John Drew was when he was with Daly—a critic of not more than 22 years of age, I should say. Critics of greater age can with consummate safety write about Mr. Drew's clothes. That erstwhile one who is called "Alan Dale" wrote, more than two decades ago, a column or so in terms of men's attire, and so set a fashion in reviewing Drew plays which has been followed to this day by the smarter set of feuilletonists in Johnstown, Pa.; Chicago, Ill., and Johnstown, N. Y.

You can with unqualified assurance, I am at pains to inform you, tell your readers that John Drew is our best impersonator, omitting the "perhaps." He has not, since the death of Charles Coghlan, known a rival in the acting of comedy in this country or England—save, possibly, Mr. H. B. Irving, who, however, has preferred to devote most of his time to another milieu. When in Tuesday's paper you wrote in deprecation of what you called "our selfish determination to make a puppet out of a fine player," you did not give the complete case for John Drew's career as a star. He has been, I should say, at least as much of a progressive as the contemporary playwrights. Isn't this so?

Mr. Drew will, midway next year, have been a star for a quarter century, and under a single management. Without retrospecting into the catalogue, I am certain that he has in that period averaged at least a play a season. Pinero, Jones, Fitch, Barrie, Augustus Thomas, Anthony Hope, Capt. Marshall, and Somerset Maugham—each in the day of his best vogue—have been among the Drew playwrights. It is my recollection that the actor did well by all his authors. In such cases as I have had opportunity to judge as between Drew and the London actor of one or another of the imported plays, the difference has all been in the former's favor.

There would be a measure of compensatory consolation in being authentically informed that, as a result of his activities, Mr. Drew is a very wealthy person; but he has, in his instructions to his press agent, carelessly omitted calling attention to the publicity value of paragraphs concerning this and cognate aspects of his private affairs. We do not even know how much he has refused to accept from the movies, or what his two-a-day wage would be if he would but become a billtopper. Nor does he show much consideration for the bromidic many who inform us, season after season, that John Drew is always John Drew. It would be so nice of him if, for a chance, John Drew would be Al Jolson, or George W. Monroe, or something like.

We must, however, take heart from the mere fact that he is what you have called him—that and all that it implies. He provides, in his coming each season, one of the few reasons why we ought to go to the theater.

Important The value of an immense volume of business is rarely illustrated to better advantage than at our great factories where these pianos are made. Furthermore, The Cable Company build and install in these beautiful Conover Pianos a special Carola Inner-Player action, every part of which is made in our own great plant. This splendid combination of a player which is not mechanical with a piano of unusual excellence is known as the

I AM afraid we shall have to ask Theda Bara when we meet her this question: "What do you mean Egypt?" For frenzied letters have been pouring in since her biograph appeared in the paper claiming that her name is Theodosa Goodman, that her birthplace is a town in our own United States and that—O, a lot of perfectly natural and human things that are not included in the biography. However, we have her word for it in her own handwriting, so we politely request that the blame be not shelved on us, for far be it from us to doubt the lady.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

MAJESTIC.

Harry Cooper and A. Ross Robinson:

"What do you do?"

"I'm a letter carier in an Irish neighborhood."

"I'll bet you have the time of your life."

"Last St. Patrick's day I just had time to get away with my life. Oi, it was a great celebration."

"Did they serve refreshments?"

"Pork, and ham and cabbage—Gawohl! I never ate so much bread in my life."

"Did they remember you in the ceremonies?"

"I should say; they threw flowers at me."

"That was nice."

"Yes, but they forgot to take the pots off of them."

"What is your name?"

"Babe Fitzpatrick Cohen."

"Why the Fitzpatrick?"

"For protection."

"Where were you born?"

"What?"

"In what state were you born in?"

"Naked."

"How tall are you?"

"Five feet eleven."

"O, no, I think not—five feet nine."

"Five feet eleven!"

"Five feet nine!"

"All right. Take me for five feet nine."

"Are you married?"

"Yes, but the expression on my face comes from cramps. Here's a picture of my wife."

"Why, that's a picture of Lillian Russell!"

"Well, my wife looks just like that if you cover up her face."

"How do you like married life."

"Oh, it's too expensive. It's pretty tough when a man pays 30 cents a pound for a steak."

"Yes."

"And when you pay only 15 it's tough."

"Have you any children?"

"Yes."

"Boy or girl?"

"No, a musician."

McVICKER'S.

Knapp and Cornalla:

"I'm a great bear hunter."

"Tell me of a few narrow escapes you've had from bears."

"Young man, if there's been any narrow escapes it's the bears that had them, not me."

"Interesting!"

"I own a hunting dog that never misses a trail once he gets on it."

"Keen after a scent, eh?"

"Yes; he used to belong to John D. Rockefeller. I guess that's the reason."

"Without any exaggeration I can say that living in this town is heaven on earth."

"You don't tell me!"

"Why, yes. We have hundreds of people in this town who wouldn't leave it under any circumstances."

"What cemetery are they buried in?"

"This is also a great country for hogs."

"I noticed that while riding on a trolley car. One man wouldn't give a stout old lady his seat."

"Let her stand on her feet, eh?"

"No; let her stand on my feet."

"And I mustn't forget to tell you this town is also a great railroad center. Fifty trains pass through here every day."

"That's fine."

"But none of them stop."

Robinson and Nichols:

"Whenever the weather looks rainy I eat a salt herring."

"Why?"

"That keeps me dry."

"Who was that elderly man you were talking to a few minutes ago?"

"That was my father."

"How aristocratic he looks with all that gray hair."

"Yes, and he's got me to thank for it."

"I love you."

"I've heard that before."

"I worship you madly."

"Loose talk."

"I cannot live without your love."

"Get some new stuff."

"Will you marry me?"

"Well, now, there's some class to that."

"Why is a mother-in-law like dough?"

"I don't know."

"Because she's so hard to get off one's hands."

"Is anybody taking you out to dinner tonight?"

"No."

"You'll be awful hungry tomorrow."

"How often do you shave?"

"Three times a week every day but Sunday, then I shave every day."

"Will you embark with me on the ocean of matrimony?"

"I'm afraid I might get seasick."

"When a man pays attention to a woman it is generally a sign that he wishes to marry her."

"And when a man doesn't pay attention to a woman it is generally a sign that he has married her."

"Will you love me always?"

"Passionately, my darling."

"And you'll never cease to love me?"

"Never, my darling."

"And will you save your money?"

"Every penny."

"And you'll never speak harshly to me?"

"Never."

"And you'll get along with mamma and papa, and do just what mamma wants you to do?"

"Yes."

"And just what papa wants you to do?"

"Yes."

"And just what I want you to do?"

"Of course."

"Well, I will be yours; but I fear I am making an awful mistake."

"What is a flirtation?"

"Attention without intention."

"Would you be willing to work for a husband?"

"Yes, until I had him."

"I like to kiss a sassy girl."

"Why?"

"Because she always gives me 'plenty of lip.'"

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Army and Navy Reception Gay and Brilliant.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—The official season ended in a blaze of glory with the army and navy reception. While by no means the largest of the winter, it was quite the gayest, and from the pictorial standpoint far and away the prettiest of them all.

At the intervening receptions since the Pan-American, there had been few uniforms of any sort to relieve the somberness of the masculine contingent, but at the army and navy reception, with all branches of the service turning out in full dress, the men were no longer merely the background for the women they accompanied but were equally resplendent.

Be it observed, while swords and spurs, and the other impedimenta of full military dress are admittedly fascinating, they also are dangerous, to one's attire at least, in these days of the vogue of tulle. It is told that at the Pan-American reception a filmy tulle sleeve became impaled on the point of an insignia decorating the sleeve of a distinguished military man, and the wearer of the tulle and the wearer of the insignia were equally distressed at the havoc that seemed imminent as the throng carried them past one another before they could possibly get untangled. But as the lady was swept on she carried in her angel sleeve as a trophy the insignia of a brigadier general.

First and Last a Soldier.

There was some little curiosity as to just where Maj. Gen. Hugh Scott, chief of staff and ad interim secretary of war, would come in. In which of his characters would he be functioning at that particular function. As chief of staff he and Mrs. Scott would head the line of the received; as secretary of war, he would be hovering somewhere back of the line in the blue room, and Mrs. Scott would be the fifth woman in the receiving line, next to Mrs. McAdoo.

It was rather a new situation, and the "precedence sharks" who infest the social swim of Washington in great numbers were interested to see what the etiquette of it would be. Whether it was etiquette or not, any one who knows Gen. Scott knows that he is first, last, and all the time a soldier, and it was quite in character that he preferred his place in the service to any place in the cabinet.

Passing out from that last reception, I said to the colored man who has cared for my wraps so often at the White House that he seems almost like an old family servant, "Well, John, your troubles are over for this season," to which John gravely responded, "O, no, ma'am, not yet. There's the musicales; they gin'rally has them in Lent, you know; and after that there's the garden parties. Leastwise, there always has been, though of course you can't tell what this one will do."

"This one" is apparently running true to form, at least so far as the musicales are concerned. She had the first of them on Tuesday evening. The musicales are smaller and a little more exclusive than the receptions. There are usually not more than 300 to 400 guests for them. These are seated in the east room, after greeting their hosts, on nice little gilded wicker chairs, and are entertained with some good music, and later adjourn to the state dining room and are further regaled with some food, which is not quite as good as the music, perhaps, but still—

Tuesday night's party was a pleasant one. The president and Mrs. Wilson received their guests, about 300 in number, in the green room. Mrs. Wilson wore a charming gown of rose colored chiffon draped over rose colored satin, with a deep girdle of embossed silver. It was most becoming, and was the first time I have seen her in a color that gave the shops any excuse for "the new Edith rose," which they are featuring here in advertisements.

The program, given by Mme. Julia Culp, soprano, and Enrique Granados, was, as usual, selected and arranged by Miss Margaret Wilson. At its conclusion Mme. Culp had a nice little reception all her own in the corridor, with Miss Margaret Wilson making the introductions.

The allies were out in force—the French ambassador and Mme. Jusserand [who have observed stricter retirement since the war broke out than any of their diplomatic colleagues], the British ambassador and Lady Spring-Rice, the Belgian minister and Mme. Havenith, the Japanese ambassador and Viscountess Chinda, and, of course, any number of the neutrals, and a sprinkling of army and navy folk and congressionals, and officialdom generally. The only Chicagoans I recall seeing were the Brittens, who are everywhere.

Society Misses McAdoos.

Everybody missed Mrs. McAdoo and her secretary husband. They are sort of deputy hosts always at White House affairs, and either one a host in him or her self. They had started for Hampton roads, where they were to board the cruiser Tennessee, which is to take the American members of the joint high committee down to Buenos Aires.

The women of the party are probably blessing their stars that they had a president's daughter among them. It has been a rule that no women should be taken on United States battleships except for social functions while in port. But a few days before that party was to start Secretary Daniels issued an order permitting the wives of the American members of the commission to make the trip with their husbands on the Tennessee. On the other hand, newspaper correspondents, who have frequently been taken on naval vessels when there seemed any reason for it, have been refused transportation.

Th Washington members of the commission are Secretary McAdoo, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Peters, Paul Warburg, and Senator Duncan Fletcher. The party was taken down to Hampton roads in the Mayflower and is by now well on its way. They are to be away about two months, six weeks of that time being consumed going and coming.

Meanwhile little Miss Ellen Wilson McAdoo is to be her grandfather's guest at the White House. She has spent a good deal of her short life at the White House, having made a long visit there last fall.

She is a small person, but they say up in the neighborhood of the McAdoo home that her impedimenta came near to filling a large van. Her famous fresh air crib is now installed in a sunny window of the White House nursery, and the young lady is queen of all she surveys.

Rumors of Summer Plans.

By the time they get back the McAdoos will be thinking of packing up for the summer. The rumor that they were leasing a house at Elberon, near Shadow Lawn, which is to be the summer White House, while it had about died out, is given fresh vitality by the announcement that Secretary McAdoo has sold the place at North Haven which he bought only a year ago and with which he and his young wife seemed so much pleased last summer.

As a matter of fact, it's dollars to doughnuts that, being a campaign year, the secretary of the treasury will be swinging around in circles pretty much all summer, and it seems plausible that as he will want to report to and consult with his august father-in-law at frequent intervals, he will prefer to have Mrs. McAdoo somewhere handy to her father's chosen resort. For he is a most attentive and devoted husband, and he has one of the most charming wives who has ever graced the cabinet circle, and one of the most popular. She has a combination of poise and enthusiasm as rare as it is delightful, and is constantly increasing her circle of really ardent admirers.

Everybody gave them dinners and luncheons and things before they went off, two of the smartest of the dinners being those of the assistant secretary of agriculture and Mrs. Vrooman and of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Delano. The Vroomans' entire list seemed to be Chicago people and the Delanos had quite a few—the Charles Hamlins, Judge and Mrs. John Barton Payne, and Charles Page Bryan, among them—to help them wish their honor guests "bon voyage."

Mrs. Field Gives Two.

In fact, for the last two or three weeks everybody has been giving everybody else dinners until one feels that it will take more than a forty days' fast to recuperate. About the smartest were two that Mrs. Marshall Field has given recently, one of thirty-four covers on Monday night, when she numbered among her guests the Spanish ambassador and Mme. Riano, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Houston, the minister of Sweden and Mme. Ekengren, Col. and Mrs. Charles McCawley, and Mrs. Henry Clews of New York, for whom the dinner was given and who is the McCawley's house guest.

A few days earlier Mrs. Field gave a dinner dance of eighty covers, which was especially for the Lansings, and yet was chiefly a young people's dinner. That seems to be generally conceded to have been quite the smartest dinner of the season. It must have been "some dinner," for it made a lasting impression on even so hardened a diner out as Justice McReynolds.

The eighty guests were seated at two long tables, one furnished forth completely in gold, the other in silver. Flowers were in great profusion and charmingly arranged, and after dinner Yvette Guilbert entertained the company delightfully before the dancing began.

Teas with Oriental Flavor.

There are at least a dozen interesting items which must be crowded out, but two particularly interesting teas deserve a little mention anyhow.

The first was a tea dance given by Mme. Ohta, wife of one of the secretaries of the Japanese embassy, as a sort of faraway echo of the Japanese feast of dolls, which was being celebrated in Nippon just at that time. Mme. Ohta is a doll-like little person herself, and at her tea, conceived apparently in a moment of homesickness, she introduced decorations and quaint little ceremonies reminiscent of her native land, and most attractive to novelty loving Americans.

The second was Mrs. Wellington Koo's first reception at the Chinese legation on Tuesday. Mrs. Koo is one of the most attractive little figures in Washington, and such a quaint mixture of east and west. If Kipling ever meets her he'll recognize a perfectly fascinating exception to his "never the twain shall meet." They have met in her person and in her bewildering and piquant clothes, and certainly they met at her party Tuesday afternoon, in a pink and white drawing room [lilies and roses, and deep pink azalea bushes] and a red and yellow [carnations and jonquils] dining room and—but that has simply got to be another story!

THE BUNS OF NOTRE DAME.

I sing the buns of Notre Dame,
  I warb their beamish beauty,
I chaunt their charms with heart aflame,
  For chaunting is my duty.
I strum for all her shining sons,
  Deprived and a-bornin,
Those beamish beatific buns
  We got on Sunday morning!

The crust an aromatic brown
  As fragrant as the Indus.
You should have seen us shuffle down
  As much as they would sind us*.
O, coruscant, collegiate grub,
  O, pabulum adorning
The platter of the veriest dub
  On sunny Sunday morning!

O, Notre Dame, the years have fled
  Since your professors caught me,
And I remember but your bread,
  And not the stuff you taught me.
Your isms, ologies, and ics
  Were nothing to be scorning,
But what are ologies to Micks
  With buns on Sunday morning?

O, yes, the ancient stickers had
  A lot of fancy chefers,
Ambrosia was a snappy fad
  Among Olympic zephyrs,
But for their fodder and their fun—
  Believe a gypsy's warning—
I would not trade the palest bun
  We got on Sunday morning.

*Hibernian rhyme.

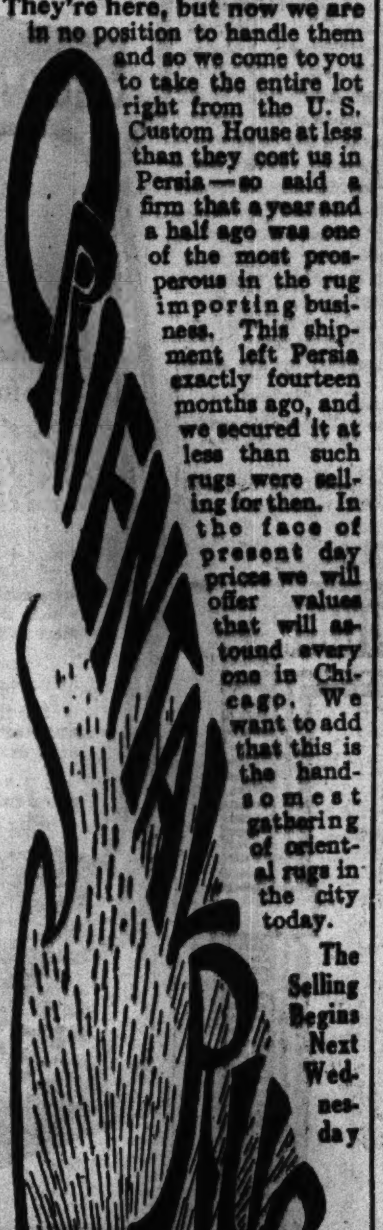
At Last



They're here, but now we are in no position to handle them and so we come to you to take the entire lot right from the U. S. Custom House at less than they cost us in Persia—so said a firm that a year and a half ago was one of the most prosperous in the rug importing business. This shipment left Persia exactly fourteen months ago, and we secured it at less than such rugs were selling for then. In the face of present day prices we will offer values that will astound every one in Chicago. We want to add that this is the handsomest gathering of oriental rugs in the city today.

I Want a Corset That Keeps Its Shape—and so I wear an R. & G. corset; please show me style number F. 324, said a customer last Monday. Do you know why R. & G. corsets keep their shape so beautifully? It's because the makers are always so very particular about each piece of fabric they use and about the care used in putting the various parts of a corset together.

And so R. & G. corsets can be favored by fashion and at the same time bring you comfort and service. Here we thoroughly understand how to select the proper model for your particular figure and fit it to you correctly, so that the most will be made of your natural beauty of line. For this unexcelled fitting service no extra charge is made.

Fashion favors the woman who is pleasingly plump this spring, for fashion says that curves are again in style, but the curves must appear at just the right places and they must not be too prominent, a little roundness at the hips, a slightly emphasized bust, but an absolutely flat front. Your figure will be harmoniously proportioned if you put yourself in the hands of our trained corsetieres. They will give the absolutely straight front and straight back, but a charmingly beautiful curve under the arm, at the waistline and at the side back. If you are short waisted they will give you length of lines. You are again to have a graceful, rounded figure with a delicate incurve to the waist. You are again to regain your trimness of figure. To do this is largely a question of corsets. R. & G. corsets are ideal for this because THEY DO FIT THE WAIST and come in enough styles to fit all types of figures. They have more boning than last year, higher in the bust, smaller in the waist.

R. & G. Corsets, as illustrated, for the plump figure with quite full thighs. Note the long upper lines of this beautiful model, reaching up and artfully framing the bust, the slight curve-in at the waist, the long pliably-boned skirt which molds the hips into gentle roundness. This corset is made of extra firm coutil and is so designed that no bones come over the delicate bone of the hip, a comfort feature you will appreciate. An elastic lacing below the front clasp and over the thighs stretches to allow you ample room to sit comfortably, sizes to 36, at $5

R. & G. Corsets in the Semi-Colonial style, medium high bust with a deep gore to allow the figure to drop instead of being raised when seated; skirt medium long, free hip and a trifle more fullness over hips which will accentuate the "Nip" at waist. Made of very pretty pink dotted batiste, an unusually dainty garment, sizes to 30, at $3

A splendid showing of R. & G. Corsets, $1 to $5. We also feature R. & G. Corsets for school girls and slender women.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH

Nigh to Spring.

HEPATICAS uncurling white, fuzzy stems under the leaves; buds on the viburnum; patches of snow in the shade on the north slopes; a glaze of ice over the ground in the morning; soft under foot by noon; renewed warmth in the sunlight, and newly marked chill in the shadows.

The uniformity of winter broken by shades and distinctions, differences, and contrasts; a new quality in the air, an exhilarant suggestion of processes unrevealed but yet perceived; imponderable but yet indicated to the senses; fragrance making known the imminence of change.

Snow scurries and an east wind; gray days with the brown woods still caparisoned for winter and armored against change, seemingly capable of resisting any urge of sap; of standing in monochrome and lace of bare twigs even into the long June days. Nevertheless nigh to spring, to blooming crocuses, to the song of the wood frog and the peep of the hylas, to the pruning and spraying of trees, to the run of the robin over the grass, to the waddle of the rusty blackbird.

Nigh to spring, but with the hut yet dependent on the coal bin and the diminishing pile of logs. Arcturus showing in the late evening sky as portent of a wheel that has been turned, but a swirl of northeast wind is reminder that in spite of calendar promise and in spite of the exhilarant promise in the air, a month of the intensive indoor life remains before even occasionally casements may be open to the fragrance of a new born out of doors.

ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

"THE WINKING DEMON."

TO find Algol, the Winking Demon, look in the west any time in the early evening. By midnight it is down on the horizon. A line drawn from the Pleiades to the "W" of Cassiopeia will find Algol about half way between the two, a little nearer the Pleiades. Most people know the Pleiades. Such as do not easily can find the misty swarm.

The "W" of Cassiopeia is now, at 8 o'clock, west and a little north of the pole star. It is one of the close circumpolar constellations. It and the Big Dipper are always in sight in their swing about the pole. It is not difficult to pick out the group of stars which make an irregular but defined "W," now seemingly resting on its side.

With these two groups of stars located, Algol can be found as indicated. Algol changes in appearance every two days, twenty-four hours, forty-eight minutes, and fifty-five seconds. Of this period it remains for two days, eleven hours, and thirty minutes as a second magnitude star that is about the brilliance of the pole star. Then suddenly it begins to fade, and in about four and a half hours loses three-fourths of its light. That is why it is called the Winking Demon.

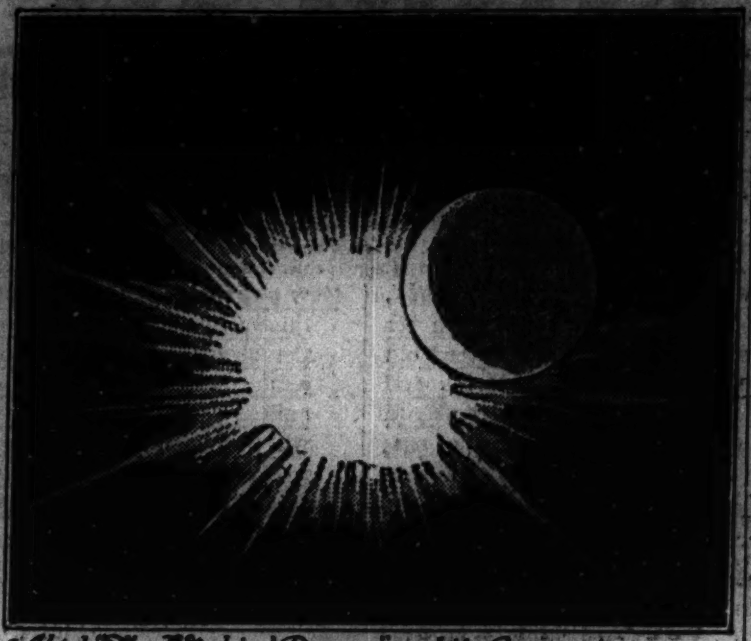
At midnight tomorrow night it will be at its minimum, but a midnight it is low on the horizon. Thursday night at 9 o'clock it will be at its minimum again, and again Sunday night, March 19, at 6:12 o'clock.

With these periods in mind and with Algol located, it ought to be possible to observe this most interesting of the variables, one which presents its changes to the unaided eye in such short space of time as to make a bold phenomenon.



Algol, "The Winking Demon" and its Companion
DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL.

In each period Algol is eclipsed by a dark companion with which it forms a system. The companion is smaller than Algol, the one being 1,054,000 miles in diameter and the other 825,000 miles. Algol is four-ninths of the sun's mass, its companion is two-ninth's of the sun's mass. The distance of the two from each other, from center to center, is 3,220,000 miles.

Algol is in the constellation Perseus. Perseus holds the head of Medusa in his hand and Algol is one of the eyes of Medusa. The Arabs were the first to discover that one of the eyes was "winking," an astonishing phenomenon to simple observers of the constellations. It faded and then grew bright. The spectroscope discovered the dark companion which causes it. As the eclipse approaches, the dark star, which is nearly dead, is coming toward the solar system and Algol going away from it at the rate of seventeen miles a second. After the eclipse Algol is approaching the solar system and its companion going away from it.

Double stars are numerous, if not innumerable, the estimate being that about one star in five is double. A double represents not a sun, but a system of suns.

ART by ANNE ELLIS

DURING the performance of a certain rather extraordinary play I remember sitting totally unmoved and disgusted at my own coldness, for I could see the play was no ordinary one. Twenty-four hours elapsed and then that play began coming back to me—not the lines, not the action, not the plot, not the presentation nor the performance but the atmosphere, the essence. It was a strange and vivid and forceful thing, as insistent as rain.

I recall this experience because it is almost exactly the thing that is likely to happen to one who visits the exhibit of sculpture by Charles Haag at the Art institute.

Mr. Haag is an originalist, an individualist, and a symbolist—and, like all originalists, he is apt to show his limitations before he makes his purpose plain. Once we have realized that his limitations are, like the boundaries of a turbulent stream, subject to change, then the full vitality of his work becomes evident.

At first glance there is his love for the fantastic and a slight tendency towards sentimentality to hamper one's opinion; then there is the fact that not quite yet has he struck the proper balance between beauty and strength to make his distillation perfect. After these things his work is a pure delight—something to appease the eyes, wearied with so much beautiful monotony; satisfy the mind, jaded by so much clinging to standards, and fortify the soul, sickened by so much cowardice.

Mr. Haag wrote to me yesterday asking what I mean by saying his work seems to be inspired by the same spirit that inspired "Peer Gynt." When I said "Peer Gynt" I meant the music of Grieg. I meant that it was the weird and beautiful spirit of their northland, the love of nature; the spiritual and mystical meaning of all things in life, as expressed by both men that seems inspired by the same urge.

REO

Have You Ridden in the New Reo Six?

IF YOU HAVEN'T we think it is not too much to say you have yet to taste the real joys of motoring.

AND WHEN YOU HAVE ridden in this big luxurious equipage—the latest and in some respects, greatest product of Reo experience—you will understand why this car enjoys such a vogue—is so tremendously popular this season.

REO SIX WAS PROCLAIMED the "fashion plate for 1916" by designers generally, from the moment its graceful lines were seen.

AND DOUBTLESS YOU'VE OBSERVED the influence this Sheer Line Reo has exerted on the design of seven passenger cars generally.

BUT YOU MUST SEE IT—must ride in and finally drive it yourself to fully appreciate what a magnificent car and what wonderful value it is at its price.

AND THE CLOSER YOU STUDY the details—the more carefully you enquire into every point of design, of construction, of quality of materials, of equipment and finish—the greater will be your admiration and the deeper your wonderment that it is possible to produce such a car for such a price.

FOR YOU MUST KNOW that this Reo Six is made as only the Reo Folk can make automobiles. It is real inside and out—the Reo Folk do not use substitutes. Real leather in the upholstering and real hair.

BUT THAT STATEMENT is scarcely necessary. For you know the Reo Folk and you know Reo ideals. You know that Reo reputation is built on the most solid of foundations—a good product honestly made and honestly sold and honestly backed up afterward.

SO WHEN WE TELL YOU that this new Reo Six is a Reo from radiator cap to tail-light we have said the most that could be said for any automobile.

AND THERE'S QUANTITY, TOO, if you like to put it that way. This is a big, full-size seven passenger car. Seats seven full grown adults comfortably—luxuriously.

WHEELBASE IS 126 INCHES. But that is increased—or rather the riding qualities are—to much more than it would otherwise amount by the Reo cantilever springs. They enhance the riding qualities of a car immeasurably—especially a big car like this New Reo Six.

BUT, AS WE SAID in the first paragraph, you will have to see and ride in it yourself to fully appreciate. Then remember one thing more:

DEMAND IS TREMENDOUS—always is for Reo cars, but this season more than ever. Only way to get a Reo and be sure of having it for spring delivery is to order well in advance.

NEVER SINCE THE FIRST REO was made and went into the possession of its proud owner has it been possible for us to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

AND NOTWITHSTANDING the Reo plants have been extended from year to year till they now cover nearly forty acres (39.23 to be exact) still, we cannot supply the full demand.

ON MARCH FIRST there were more orders on file at the Reo factory than at any previous time in Reo history.

IF YOU APPRECIATE the shortage there is going to be. If you want a Reo. And if you get us your order now—tomorrow—you will be one of the "lucky ones."

BUT DON'T DELAY—there won't be enough—never have been enough—Reos to go 'round.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store:

WAR.

"Fear God and Take Your Own Part" [Doran], by Theodore Roosevelt.

FICTION.

"The Real Adventure" [Bobbs-Merrill], by Henry Kitchell Webster.

"Those About Trench" [Macmillan], by Edwin Herbert Lewis.

"Felix O'Day" [Scribner], by F. Hopkinson Smith.

"Life and Gabriella" [Doubleday-Page], by Ellen Glasgow.

"The Side of the Angels" [Harper], by Basil King.

"The Bent Twig" [Holt], by Dorothy Canfield.

NONFICTION.

The Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke [John Lane].

STRANGE PIECE OF LITERATURE.

A REAL mystery is bound up in the covers of "Patience Worth" [Holt]. Here are the facts: In July, 1913, Mrs. John H. Curran, wife of a former immigration commissioner of Missouri, and Mrs. Emily Grant Hutchings, wife of the secretary of the Tower Grove park board of St. Louis, were amusing themselves with a ouija board when it spelled out "Many moons ago I lived. Again I come. Patience Worth my name."

This began an association which has produced a really memorable book. Patience Worth has written through Mrs. Curran and the ouija board some of the most beautiful old English prose and poetry that one can find anywhere. Casper Yost, editorial director of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and William M. Reedy, who discovered Edgar Lee Masters, you remember, vouch for the genuineness of it all.

Mrs. Curran has never written anything more ambitious than a personal letter. She has never studied the Elizabethan period. In fact, she would not have recognized the importance of the communications if Mrs. Hutchings, who is a skilled writer, had not felt their quality. Mrs. Hutchings, however, never can receive the communications. They come only through Mrs. Curran. Sometimes as many as six others have sat with Mrs. Curran in one evening receiving the messages which have been spelled out, on the board, letter by letter.

You can't dismiss the book with a sniff. The work of Patience Worth, whoever she is, is noteworthy, and at times rarely beautiful. It is in truth a most mysterious piece of literature.

Our friend and fellow Tribuneite, Burton Rascoe, who is officially the assistant Sunday editor and unofficially a keen critic of literature, greeted me with, "Have you read Wright's—Willard Huntington Wright's—'The Man of Promise'?" He said it with an accent on every word, the way any one does who has made a great discovery. I had to admit that I hadn't—yet. "Well, you want to, right away. It's the best American novel I ever read. I can't think of another American novel that can compare with it. It's realism without any sops to the Pharisees. It's art. I suppose the moralists will say it shouldn't go through the mails. Already the reviewers are slamming it on the ground of morality and overlooking its consummate art." For ten minutes he extolled "The Man of Promise" [John Lane]. He declared it was as tragic as Sophocles' "Oedipus Rex." I have never heard such heartfelt glorifying of a book. It was such a spontaneous confidence that I want to share it with my readers.

"A Book of Belgium's Gratitude" (John Lane) has reached America. According to the announcements it is "designed and published as an expression of the gratitude felt by Belgians for the help and hospitality of the British empire and the United States of America." The contributors include all of the most distinguished Belgians in politics, society, literature, and art, among them the king and queen. The translators are distinguished. There are nine illustrations in color and twenty-four in black and white by Belgian artists. The profits from the book are to be placed at the disposal of her majesty Queen Mary.

* * *

Cyril Harcourt has not only made his charming play, "A Pair of Silk Stockings" [Dodd-Mead] into a novel but he is now at work writing a play, by commission, for David Belasco.

Ida Tarbell in an interview not long ago said that some of our modern writers sacrifice their independence and self-respect for the sake of high prices. "Monetary value is not a just measurement of a work of art," she declared. "When we got a really great author, with a compelling sense of art, he expresses that sense of art whether any one wants to buy what he writes or not. And only when our writers regain the old sense of the dignity and independence of their craft and regard themselves as artists and not as merchants will literature be free from the blight of commercialism."

Marie Van Vorst's "War Letters of an American Woman" [John Lane] is the chronicle of her experience in France. Perhaps you heard her when she was lecturing here on the work of the American ambulance at Neuilly. She has returned to France after a two months' lecture tour of the United States with $20,000 to add to the exchequer of the good work.

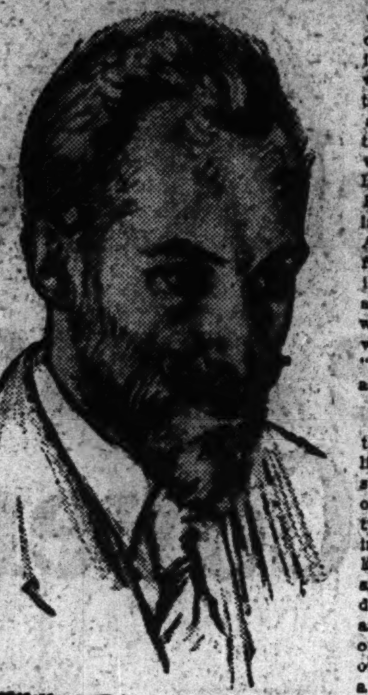
A. Birmingham, whose real name is, you know, Canon Hannay, and whose latest delightful novel is "Gossamer" [Doran], has joined the English army as a chaplain. He is now at a big camp near [illegible]. His elder son, a member of the [illegible] Guards, is soldiering in France.

* * *

Pulitzer, author of "Over the Front in an Aeroplane" (Harpers), tells a story to illustrate the astonishing ability of the German intelligence department: "One day when the Belgian army was being reuniformed in khaki a whole regiment of chasseurs were ordered to leave their trenches right after midnight to march to the rear for the purpose of having their new uniforms issued to them. An hour or two after they had received this order the Germans right opposite them hoisted a big placard above their trenches. On it was painted: 'Good-by, brave chasseurs. Run along to get your new uniforms at seventeen francs fifty apiece.'"

* * *

Since the outbreak of the war E. F. Benson, author of "The Oakleyites" (Doran), has been in London almost continuously as secretary of the S S S., which supplies British sailors and soldiers with smoking materials. In a letter to a friend here he explains the cryptic S. S. S. "This was formed soon after the beginning of the war and we have made it our business to furnish all hospitals in England, France, and the Mediterranean where there are English wounded with tobacco and cigarets. The money we raise from the public, and at the present date we have sent out something like 140,000,000 cigarets and tons of tobacco. We work right up to the front so that the wounded, the moment they leave the trenches, find a cigaret to comfort them. We work with the sanction and support of the war office, and Queen Alexandra is our patroness."



Willard Huntington Wright

Walter Alden Dyer, author of "Early American Craftsmen" (Century), is celebrating the announcement of the identity of David Grayson. Now that the world knows he is Ray Stannard Baker, Mr. Dyer won't be accused of being the author of "Hempfield" (Doubleday-Page). The misconception came about thus: "Hempfield" was supposed, in the minds of many readers, to be Hempstead, Long Island. The people of Hempstead were sure that the fiction they read and the facts they knew corresponded. They recognized themselves and their neighbors in the characters. The author must be some one who lived in Hempstead. The chief luminary of Hempstead circles is Walter Dyer. Ergo, David Grayson and Walter Dyer are one. It got to be terribly embarrassing for Mr. Dyer having his neighbors think he knew all the town secrets.

They're accusing May Sinclair of portraying a w. k. present day writer in the character of Tasker Jevons of her latest novel, "The Belfry" (Macmillan). If she has, who do you say he is?

* * *

Ernest Poole's "The Harbor" (Macmillan), after a pleasant popularity in a Norwegian translation, is now running serially in one of the leading newspapers in Christiania.

* * *

From England comes news of Compton Mackenzie. His "Plashers Mead" (Harper) was published just after he joined the British forces in the Dardanelles, you may remember. He is now in Athens, managing a bureau there that collects statistics about those who ask for passports to Egypt or other allied countries. He's pretty unpopular with the anti-entente press, which not only calls him a dangerous man, but carefully reports everything he does.

Ian Hay's "The First Hundred Thousand" (Houghton-Mifflin) has been proclaimed by five of the most important English papers to be the finest book the war has yet produced. It is the biograph of a Scottish regiment from the days of its early training at home, through the weeks and months of hardening, down to the battle of Loos. Last year the papers appeared in Blackwood's Magazine over the signature "The Junior Sub," and were the most popular articles on the war. Ian Hay, whose full name is Ian Hay Beith, enlisted in the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders as a sublieutenant. In April, 1915, his regiment was sent to the front and immediately was in active service. He was promoted to a captaincy and after the offensive of September, in which his division was badly cut up, he was recommended for the military cross "for some mysterious reason," he characteristically writes.

One of the most notable tributes paid to a man of letters will be paid to William Winter on Tuesday, when a monster testimonial will be given to the dean of America's dramatic critics at the Century theater in New York. The memorial inviting "the honored veteran of our literature" to accept the testimonial was signed by President Wilson, ex-Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Gov. Whitman, Mayor Mitchel of New York, and more than a hundred other prominent names. It sounds like a Who's Who in New York. It must be a great joy to the splendid old man to know that his friends are countless.

W. Somerset Maugham, author of "Of Human Bondage" (Doran), wrote his first novel when he was 21. "I was a medical student then," he says. "I worked all day somewhat unwillingly at medicine; but as the clock struck 9 I closed the book and began to write. I can see now the shabby little boarding house on the shabby London square where I lived, and myself writing night after night, secretly, for fear of the ridicule of friends."

Speaking of tributes, last Monday night a hundred or more of Douglas Malloch's friends gathered together for dinner in his honor. He's the "lumberman poet," you know, one of Chicago's own, despite his and Michigan's passion for one another. He said something about vers libre that you may like to hear:

> There is more good poetry being written now, and more poetry being read, than ever before in the history of the world. But the present popularity of poetry has brought its penalty, too. It was inevitable that it would give rise to a group of writers whose product is without form and void. I have no objection to these people writing prose—if they can—but they must not call it poetry. The poet is an artist, not a blacksmith. Let them bring forth nuggets of thought, but they must fashion them into the filigree of something beautiful before they can call them poetry. They may call their product "vers libre," or what they will; I prefer to call it by the gentle name of "bunk."

France has found its Kipling. His name is René Benjamin and his Mulvaney is Gaspard. For the novel M. Benjamin received the Goncourt prize which is awarded to young writers. It has been called "the only highly significant piece of fiction that has been produced since the beginning of the war." Little is known of the author except the rather uninteresting details of his parentage and the list of practically unnoticed literary work which he has done.

One of the most effective—and true—advertisements of a book that has limned itself on my consciousness lately is this from the Dodd-Mead company: "'Twilight,' by Frank Danby. New York Times: 'As new and startling as a sheeted ghost would be in Broadway at noon.'"

Who is so surfeited with cleverness that a book of parodies cannot brighten a dull and cheerless evening? If you have such a vista before you in the near future rush out and buy Louis Untermeyer's "—— and Other Poets" (Holt). Your evening will scintillate.

The Voice of the Movie Fan.

Owing to the large number of letters from movie fans to Miss Mae Tinee and the limited space for such communications on the "Right Off the Reel" page of the color section some of the letters are presented herewith.

APPROVES OF THE SPANKER.

Dear Miss Tinee: Three cheers and a tiger for the spanking director! Long may he wave! Could you, I wonder, convey to him my supremest admiration, and tell him I'd like to shake on it?

He has uplifted my soul. He has given back to me my faith in mankind—which was dim, indeed. What with papas, and mammas, and the rest who consider that their love for Bobby, and Mamie, and Johnnie consists in letting those irresponsible little animiles kick, scream, talk back, slap, snatch, and anything else that pleases them, to develop their sacred personalities sacred from the rude and withering blight of alien interference—what with all this, I say, it is a blessed relief to learn of some one who can really spank, spank hard, spank to the point. Grab some one else's kid and spank before outraged parents—ah, this is a hero, indeed.

If that spanking director will just please come to our town some day, I guarantee he'll find enough to do in the spanking line to keep him out of mischief.

A SPANKING AUNTIE.

THEY MAKE HIM SNEER.

Dear Miss Tinee: These overly intelligent people who want the producers to put up something good so they, the "intelligents," can go to the movies, too, make me sneer. Will one of them come forth and tell us one branch of amusement that offers such a variety of topics as the movies? And any one that cannot find anything worth while in the movies of today ought to consult a bricklayer about reconstruction of their brains.

Why, nowadays one can go to the movies and see the world's greatest operas acted so we know what they are about, and all the beautiful music played with it, for only a quarter. And we don't have to bring the green eyed monster along, either, to make us sick over other people's diamonds and duds. We can go in our "go to work" clothes and enjoy ourselves to the end. For there is something for every one in the movies. I defy the "intelligents" to contradict me, too.

We must ever remember the one impossible thing in the world, though—the ability to please everybody with the same thing. It would be awfully monotonous to live if it were so. But I think, though, the film producers are doing their best to please as many people as possible. We should not try to make our individual opinion express all humanity by saying a thing is no good because we don't happen to fancy it as individuals. Of course criticism has to be. It inspires us to betterment. But we should be lenient in applying it on modern film producers, because if we all tried as hard to please as they do it would not be selfishness that kept the world going, as it is now.

KARNEY HOBAR.

LACKING IN REALISM.

Dear Miss Tinee: I am a constant reader of your section, and the recent article, "When Is a Photoplay Not a Photoplay?" struck a responsive chord.

I recently saw a photoplay with Marie Walchamp in the leading rôle. The title of the play was "Coral." The heroine goes out in a terrific thunder storm, with lightning flashing and the rain pouring. She was garbed in a skirt and waist, and her golden hair was hanging down her back, and she sits out in the rain on a rock. In the next scene she returns to the house. Her hair was perfectly dry, and her clothes as freshly starched as when she went outside. The picture didn't interest me one bit after that.

I had the pleasure of seeing Mary Pickford in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." I have never seen the slums of London, but according to the critics the play was realistic. But next time will the director put shabby shoes on the characters, especially when the garments worn in the play are ragged? Mary certainly was dressed to the part, but her shoes were brand new.

I could write on this subject for hours, but what's the use? Only, I think the success of any photoplay rests just as much, if not more, on the director than on the players.

FRIENDLY CRITIC.

PLOTS WITH EVIL EFFECT.

Dear Miss Tinee: Not infrequently we see photoplays in which the law errs in its adjudication and imposes punishment on an innocent character. Such subjects, I think, do more harm than good.

What particularly prompted this complaint was a photoplay I saw recently. A girl, afflicted with heart failure by descent, was wrongly held on a charge of murder. The jury's decision upheld the charge, and on receiving the verdict the girl's affliction proved fatal to her.

It seems that such an ending was all that the producers of the play had in mind when making the picture.

Such plots, it is my belief, have nothing but an evil effect.

If you do not agree with my way of thinking, I would be glad if you would endeavor to refute my argument, especially with regard to the play mentioned, or perhaps your readers will.

LAYMAN.

MORE SHORT ONES.

Dear Miss Tinee: This is to be a wail for more good one, two, and three reel pictures! It used to be that when we had a half or three-quarters of an hour to spend we could drop in at almost any motion picture theater and see a good picture and all of it. Now, unless we have a couple of hours, we have to come away having only seen a part of a film. It's exasperating, to say the least. Start a campaign, won't you, Miss Tinee, for more good one, two, and three reel pictures?

MOVIE ENTHUSIAST.

BEAUTY NOT ENOUGH.

Dear Miss Tinee: May I say a few words in answer to "Another Sensible Person's" letter? Well, here goes. This self-confessed "mere man" believes (according to his letter) that a typist or a factory girl possessing a good amount of pulchritude is being mistreated by being paid $6 per, while Mary Pickford and Billie Burke receive thousands.

Now, here's the argument: We'll grant his working girls are beautiful, but did he ever stop to consider that "beauty is only skin deep?" Is there any talent behind these lovely damsels? Experience isn't absolutely necessary, but a knowledge of the rudiments of the game is essential—and how few of us common people possess it!

Yes, I'm a movie fan, and a constant reader of the best movie page in the country. I'm very opposite and adverse to "Another Sensible Person's" standing. I'm not a man, nor do I believe the moving picture art is a "grafting" game. Each one knows that some photoplayers are overpaid; but the actresses he mentions in his letter are not, because no one could pay them what they're really worth.

The best point in this argument is this: If this "A. S. P." is not a movie fan and cannot understand the game, why in the world does he write about it? It has been said that the thing to write about is the thing we know the least of, but "Another Sensible Person" will have to know less about "the game" before he convinces.

FRED T. LEXIN.

NARROW AND UNJUST.

Dear Miss Tinee: I read the letter of "Another Sensible Person," and I do hope you'll print this, so he can read it. As he says, he is a "mere man" and, of course, has his faults, as indeed we all have. But listen, dear man—please don't take offense if I say that your ideas of the movie game are dreadfully narrow and unjust.

Think a moment! If the movie stars did not receive such high salaries would the working girl get any of it? Would she be in any way benefited by it? She would not!

On the other hand, have you ever stopped to think of what made such large salaries possible? If you do, you will find that it is the millions of dimes and nickels spent daily by movie fans, and not one of those fans regrets the price. Even the working girl with whom you sympathize is often an ardent movie fan.

Now, Mister Man, I dare you to come out of your shell and be a fan.

MOVIE LOVER.

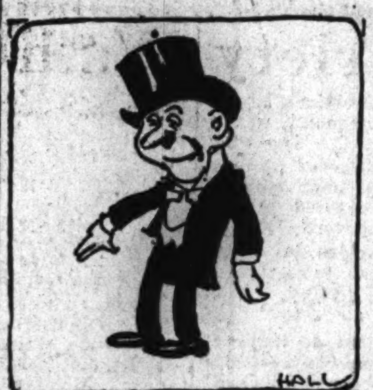
MAJESTIC.

J. C. Nugent and Jule York:

(Nugent plays part of intoxicated man.)

"This must be the doctor's office. I should have seen a doctor in the first place. The trouble is, there wasn't a doctor in the first place, and by the time I got to the last place I didn't need a doctor in the first place."



"How did you get in here? The front door is locked."

"I presume I came in the side door."

"Why should you come in the side door?"

"I suppose I thought it was Sunday."

"Well, what do you want?"

"I want to see the doctor."

"I don't think you need any medicine."

"I don't like medicine. I like patent medicines, but I don't like real medicine."

"What is your trouble?"

"In my knees mostly."

"Is your trouble in the joints?"

"That's where it started."

"In which one?"

"I think it was Hennessy's."

"When did you first notice it?"

"Not until after we got to Murphy's."

"Then you are paralyzed?"

"Not now; but I was earlier in the evening."

"Do you want me to treat you?"

"What have you got?"

"Come into the consultation room."

"Bring it out here; I've got an opener."

"Here, drink this water."

"Be careful and don't spill it. They say it's very nice to skate on when it's hard."

"Your case seems to justify emergency methods."

"Don't call a patrol."

"I wish to test your motor reflexes."

"She thinks I'm a flivver."

Chicago Solvay Coke

"The Fuel Without a Fault"

"Yes"

Says Gates, The Hatter, 446 South State Street

In an unsolicited letter to us he writes. "I have used everything in the fuel line with varying satisfaction, and now find the ideal in Solvay Coke. Am through experimenting and have forgotten there is such a thing as fuel trouble. I consider Solvay the cleanest, most efficient and economical fuel on the market. My store is heated by a stove burning and is now always comfortable and little attention is required. I am pleased to recommend Solvay as a remedy for heating troubles."

No. 1 Nut

Thousands have had the same enjoyable experience with Solvay Coke, and you owe it to yourself to investigate.

British Ruler Enjoys Dinner with Friends.

By Lady Mary.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—I hear the king dined quietly with the Granards the other night. His majesty's movements are not chronicled these days, but he does now and again go out to dine with the persons he likes, but, of course, every one is sworn to secrecy, as you may say. When he does dine out he spends the night.

The Lady Moira Forbes is growing apace and I am told she insisted upon being allowed up to see his majesty, who is fonder of little girls than of boys. The little lady has a wonderful suite of rooms at Forbes house and some one was telling me she already shows her mother's passion for jewels.

As Beatrice Mills, twin daughter of Ogden Mills, she had the most wonderful gems of any young unmarried girl of her day. I remember when she used to stay with her aunt, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, at Dorchester house, Park Lane, and at the great parties which took place there she used to take the palm from every other guest with the splendor of her jewels.

Walter Put at Ease.

I lunched at the Charlton near Lady Dufferin, formerly Miss Davis of New York, and witnessed a pretty little incident. A waiter let something, I think it was a fork, drop into her lap. Instead of looking severe she smiled.

A moment later some official came up who had apparently seen the incident and looked severely at the culprit. But Lady Dufferin smiled again, and what a smile she has! I heard her deliberately say to the cross man:

"It was I who did it!"

What a nice person is the one who now and then tells a white lie to save some one! It is a pity there are not a few more such people about. We who looked on decided Lady Dufferin was a dear.

The Marchioness of Dufferin

I believe she is thinking of going south soon, to San Remo or somewhere where the sun shines, though really we have the most wonderful winter and are so hot sometimes that we have to open all the windows and fan ourselves.

American Girls Passe?

There is nothing doing in the Anglo-American marriage way these days. Here are two of our great and enormously wealthy peers marrying real Britishers. I mean Lord Savile and Lord Mexborough. It is being said that the American woman is a bit out of fashion just now on this side.

A year or two ago it was on every one's lips that Lord Granby, future Duke of Rutland, a bridegroom of the immediate past, would marry a pretty American, a great friend of his sisters; especially of Lady Diana, but I was told she said his face was too solemn; others say other things—as they will in these cases.

He takes life fearfully seriously and likes old fashioned girls—whatever that may mean.

Gift of Coal Sent Lipton.

If you declared Sir Thomas Lipton was the most popular man in sporting circles here or in the United States you would not be overdoing it. His correspondence since he has been ill is enormous and the things he has been sent "for luck" and "to make him well" after his attack of fever caught in Serbia, which was more serious than most of his friends realized, proves what an innate affection there is for him.

Perhaps the gift that touched him most was that from an old Irish peasant woman, who sent him a little box of coal! The Irish are of opinion that coal is the luckiest thing you can give any one. The old lady had a son who was employed on one of the "Shamrocks."

Since Sir Thomas' illness he's lean and lank, but he's always a fine figure and that smile of his would light up the darkest backway in London when the Zepps are expected. And he's twice as good looking since he's got so gray.

Funny, how gray locks make even ordinary men and women good looking. But Sir Thomas is never, never going to marry, and there's no love affair in the background, either. Strange, but true.

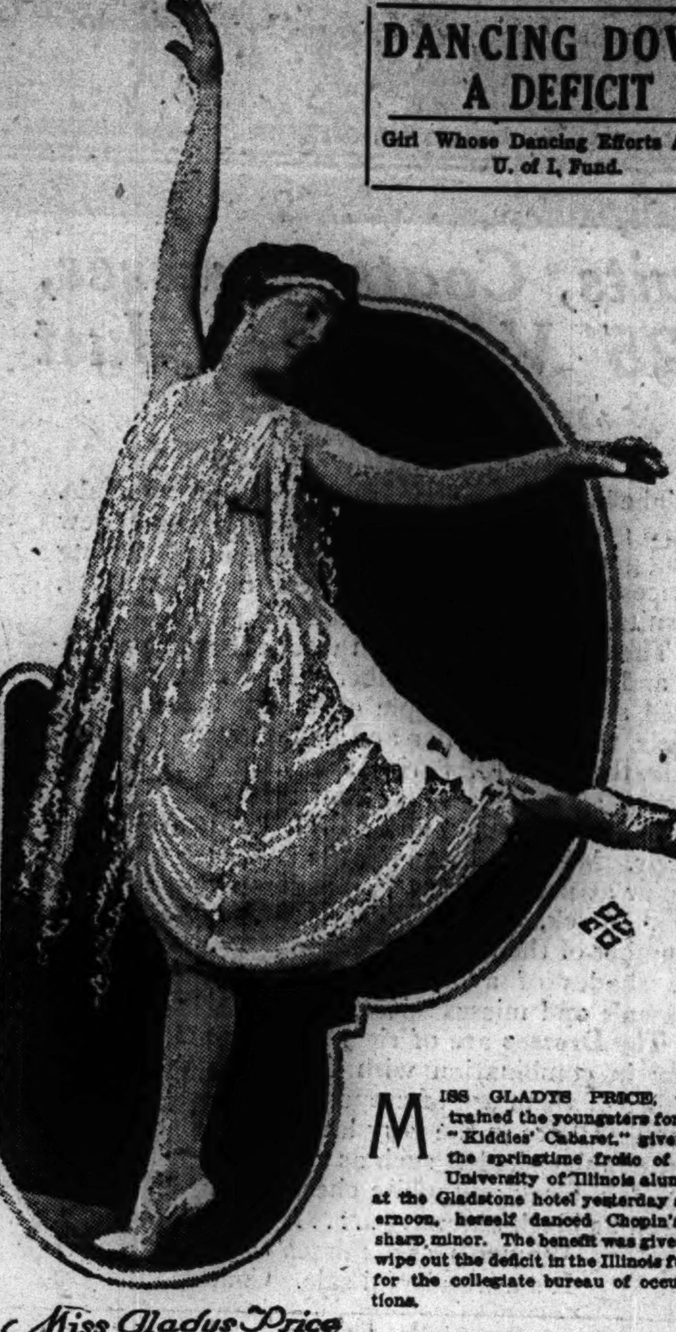
DANCING DOWN A DEFICIT

Girl Whose Dancing Efforts Aided U. of I. Fund.



Miss Gladys Price
MOFFETT PHOTO

MISS GLADYS PRICE, who trained the youngsters for the "Kiddies' Cabaret," given at the springtime frolic of the University of Illinois alumnæ at the Gladstone hotel yesterday afternoon, herself danced Chopin's C sharp minor. The benefit was given to wipe out the deficit in the Illinois fund for the collegiate bureau of occupations.

Complete Motor Cars

IN addition to the element of convenience, motoring can and rightly should be a pleasure and recreation—free from the endless annoyances due to inadequate equipment.

It is true that electric starting and lighting systems, demountable rims and other refinements can be purchased and added to the car that lacks these devices. But experience has shown that to buy the entire and finished car from one manufacturer is not only less expensive, but much more satisfactory in that responsibility for the whole product can be centered in one institution.

Maxwell Motor Cars, being otherwise designed to earn and retain the approval of particular people, are, of course, provided with every accessory of established merit that would add to the convenience and comfort of their owners.

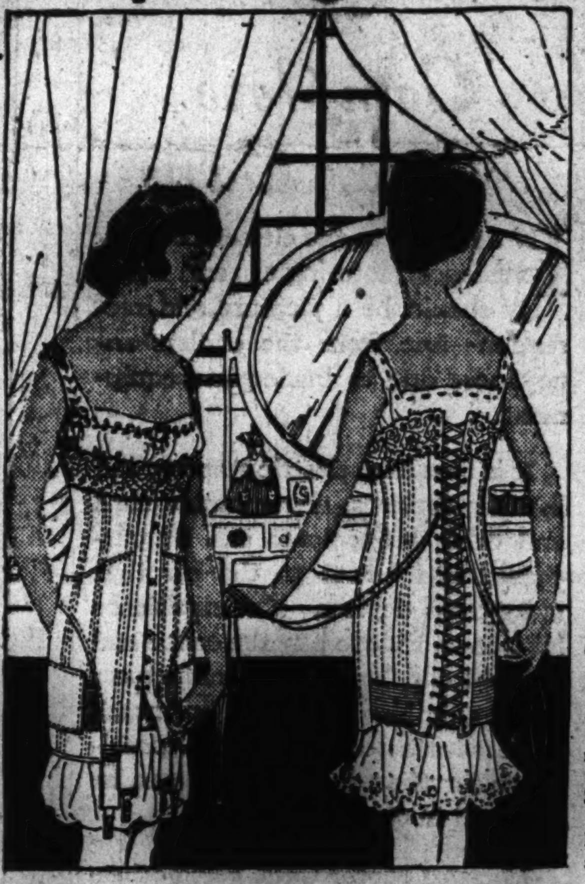
Rengo Belt Spring Corsets Ready



So many thousands of women are now wearing Rengo Belt Corsets that we are obliged to hold this special opening sale and make a regular Rengo Belt announcement at the beginning of each season.

It is hard for a woman of medium or stout figure to be without a Rengo Belt Corset and still have a good figure. Or perhaps it would be better to say that any woman who wears a Rengo Belt Corset has a good figure.

Among the scores of models we are showing we quote the following:

Style 215 is for the average, evenly proportioned figure. The elastic band in the back molds the figure perfectly below the waist. This Corset is of good quality coutil. The price is $2

Style 319 is especially attractive to stout and medium figures, for it has the double strength, extra heavy elastic webbing and the double watch spring steels, guaranteed not to rust. It also has the exclusive patented Rengo Belt Abdominal feature. It will positively give support and reduce the excess flesh at the back, hips and abdomen. Price, $3

Style 320 is for average figures which are well proportioned above the waist, but have large thighs and back. This model is strong enough to correct such figures and still keep its own shapeliness. And this, don't forget, is important. $3

Style 213 is a low bust model for average figures. It has the elastic gores over the abdomen, it is long over the hips and flat in back. An exceptionally good model. $2

Style 87 is called the Military Corset. It has the graduated front steels which add to its strength and reduce the abdomen. And it is so modeled as to give support to the rest of the figure as well. Price $5

We are training stenographers—of 2 to 10 years' experience—to be better typists. Your success should be more complete by enrolling with us. We offer copyrighted expert touch typewriting. Why Own Ten Acres?

TEN ACRES in the Swigart Tract means to a man and his family what people strive for in this world—independent living, good health, good food, and the comforts of life.

FOR STOCK OR GRAIN FARMING we would recommend not less than 40 acres and 80 acres would be still better, but TEN ACRES here in the center of Michigan's Fruit and Clover Belt makes an ideal farm for poultry, truck, and fruit, and, devoted to these products, supports a family nicely and yields a surplus.

FROM THOUSANDS OF ACRES which I own I have set aside a choice tract and subdivided it into ten acre pieces, which are handy to transportation and local markets, and I offer them for $10 down and $5 per month. They are gently rolling to level and well drained, high and dry, and each ten faces a road. The value given in quality and location is not equaled for the price anywhere else. The demand during the past two weeks was such that I have had to add additional land to this subdivision.

WRITE OR CALL at once for information about these tens and ask for my free literature about the district and plat of the tens from which you will see how well they are located.

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1,000 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM.
WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF $5.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,000 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes, $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $5.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the orinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

CAPITAL—IF I'M TELLING THE TRUTH YOU CERTAINLY WANT TO KNOW IT; AND IF I'M LYING YOU WILL SURELY FIND IT OUT.

NO, IT'S NOT MINING, MANUFACTURING, MERCHANDISING, BANKING, or FARMING; it's more certain and safer than either of these. [Read this again.]

Can you invest $300 to get an income of $300 a month, for at least ten years?

Don't say "IMPOSSIBLE!"; it's being done right now, and has been done for the past five years; and it's the SAFEST BUSINESS ON EARTH. [Read this again, also.]

This means more to YOU than it does to me. If you don't buy some one else will, and YOU will be the loser. It is limited and going rapidly, as all good things do.

Don't answer this unless you mean business and can take at least one of these $300-units; cash or four payments.

See our bank, business, and commercial indorsements and government reports.

INVESTIGATE THOROUGHLY and AT ONCE. DON'T BE AFRAID!

Address K A 362, Tribune.

CAPITAL WANTED—IF YOU HAVE A clean, successful business record this is an exceptional opportunity for you to buy the controlling interest in an Illinois corporation [capital stock $50,000] which has just perfected and patented a wonderful mechanical specialty superior to anything of its kind now on the market. This company has worked long and hard at great expense creating and perfecting this article. All experimental work is completed and fully paid for. The company is free from debt. Working capital is now required and some cash is necessary to take advantage of an unusually attractive short time opportunity to absorb inventor's liens and buy one stockholder's interest, which is sufficient to give investor control. Product is now ready for manufacturing. Can be made for $2, retailed at $6.75. Factory can be properly equipped for $2,500. If you can immediately raise $20,000 IN CASH, investigate this proposition without delay. We are not brokers and prefer dealing direct with principals. If you can't qualify, please don't waste your and our time answering. Address H S 157, Tribune.

CAPITAL IS SECURED WHEN A PROPOSITION is properly presented. The investing public must know exactly what you have to offer. Present your proposition in a well written prospectus. Give all the facts in a plain, readable story. It must be easily understood by an outsider. Tell the truth emphatically. Leave some things unsaid. It is difficult to write a GOOD prospectus. Not many people can do it. It is a waste of money to give out a poor one. Many undertakings fail for that reason. I have had 14 years' experience in writing prospectuses. I know how. It will pay you to have me write yours. Address K A 494, Tribune.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

JUNEAU, ALASKA CAPITAL, A REAL AMERICAN CITY

Political and Commercial Center of Territory—Streets Are on Stilts.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

JUNEAU, Alaska.—Juneau, the capital of Alaska, is the biggest city of the territory and its political, financial, and commercial center. It has the residences of the governor and the chief officials.

It has a pretentious frame courthouse of two stories with a little dome on the top and a city hall with a cupola that reminds one of the head of a pearl diver in his diving suit ready to drop into the sea.

Most of the houses of Juneau are of frame. The country about is covered with timber and there are great sawmills at the wharves that supply the building materials. Of late they have been putting up some concrete structures, and the era of stone has begun. There is one building of five stories and a half dozen of two and three stories, each constructed of concrete.

5,000 Persons in Juneau.

The Juneau of today has only 5,000 inhabitants, but its streets are as lively as those of a city of four times that number in the United States proper. Every man in the town is a hustler, and the place hums with politicians, lawyers, tourists, and miners.

Many of the men wear clothes of the latest cut of Broadway or Fifth avenue, and others have slouch hats, mackinaws, and trousers of khaki. Some wear boots that reach to the knees and now and then you meet one in white rubber pantaloons to the waist.

Juneau has thirty motor cars, and a motor stage runs from it to the mining town of Thane, three miles down the channel. At that place are the mills and reduction plant of the Alaska Gastineau gold properties. Nearby are the Juneau gold mills, and on the other side of the channel, in plain view, are the Treadwell mines, with the towns of Treadwell and Douglas, each having 2,000 or 3,000 population. Juneau is a great mining center and a fishing center; it is the chief port of Alaska, and it does business with every part of the territory.

Surrounded by Cliffs.

Juneau is in the heart of southeastern Alaska. It is 900 miles north of Seattle and 1,800 miles from San Francisco. It is farther from Nome than from Salt Lake to New York, and its distance from Fairbanks is greater than that from Boston to Omaha. The town lies on the mainland, at the head of the Gastineau channel, a narrow strait which separates it from Douglas island.

Juneau is right on the water, with wooden piers extending out into the Gastineau channel. It lies in a nest in the mountains, which rise almost perpendicularly behind it to a height of about 2,000 feet. They are covered with a vegetation as green as the valley of the Nile. They are so steep that it would seem as though the trees could not find rooting places. But they cling to the precipitous cliffs and are so imbedded in moss that they give the place a background of verdure.

The city is cut out of the rocks, or, rather, it is propped up by them. The most of the houses and streets stand upon stilts. The irregularities of the rocky foundation have been leveled by a trestlework of piles. The wharves are on piles, and from the channel as the tide falls they make you think of an army of centipedes tramping out to the ocean.

Permanent Roads Planned.

It is now planned to give the city a substantial foundation by filling in the space between the piles with the tailings from the mines in the mountains behind. These contain great masses of low grade gold ore, and the waste rock dust from the gold mills will be run under the city to build up a foundation of rock.

Juneau has about ten miles of planked roadways that run up and down hill. The streets are about thirty feet wide. Upon the earth and stone cross beams or rafters are laid, and three inch planks are nailed to them, running from one side of the street to the other. They are fitted together almost as closely as flooring. Upon this foundation a second layer of planks is put down with the boards running at an angle to the first layer, the whole forming a substantial wood pavement six inches thick.

The street has also sidewalks of plank and the central roadway and sidewalks are so tipped that the water runs off into gutters of wood. Such streets are costly. They need constant repair. The plan is to gradually eliminate them and make macadam streets of the tailings.

All Kinds of Stores.

The business section of Juneau runs parallel with the channel. Close to the docks are sawmills, lumber yards, sheet metal works, and machine shops, and further back are long streets devoted to stores, banks, and shops of all kinds. There are twenty-four stores handling groceries, four handling hardware, four jewelry stores, five drug stores, two shoe stores, and three devoted to furniture, three department stores, a music store, several cigar stores, three bakeries, three millinery stores, and a number of photographic and curio stores.

The town has up to date barber shops, cigar factories, and steam laundries. It has a brewery and bottling works. It has two daily newspapers and three job printing establishments. It has three banks with resources of about $2,000,000 and annual bank clearings of something like $26,000,000. The bank deposits run into the millions, the pay roll of two of the Juneau mines averaging more than $150,000 each month.

The best residences of Juneau are on Chicken ridge. This is the aristocratic part of the city. The houses are pretty two story structures built on patches cut out of the rocks. The richest man in the town has a lawn about as big as three bedquilts, and tourists are taken to see this as one of the sights of the city.

Has Little Cold Weather.

The chief complaint is the long nights and short days. In midwinter the electric lights have to be turned on two or three hours after noon, and it is not daylight until 9 o'clock in the morning. In midsummer there are but few hours of real darkness. One can go anywhere until 10 p. m. without lights, and the dawn comes between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

The winter climate of Juneau satisfies even the Negroes, who are supposed to be the children of the tropical sun.

Before I started to Alaska I was warned that the only fruit and vegetables I would be able to get were those that "grow out west in cans." The provision stores of southeastern Alaska are as good as those of the states. This afternoon I stopped in front of a grocery and made a list of the vegetables on sale. There were fresh turnips, lettuce, onions, celery, and new potatoes from the gardens adjoining the town, and fresh cauliflower, green beans, green peas, ripe red tomatoes, bleached asparagus, green cabbages, red beets, yellow carrots, and green corn on the cob.

Fruits Galore in Stores.

The stores had all sorts of fruit. There were raspberries, salmon berries, and huckleberries, fresh picked from the Alaska bushes, and Alaska strawberries ranging in size from an English walnut to the average hen's egg. There were ripe peaches and apricots, cherries, red, black, and white, and plums and loganberries. There were cantaloupes and watermelons from California and also the fruits of the tropics.

The citizens here are enthusiastic about the food possibilities of the country. Said Grover C. Winn, one of the lawyers of Juneau:

"Alaska is the hardest of countries to make a fortune in and the easiest of countries to make a living in. As to the matter of good living, you can go into any grocery store at the beginning of winter and buy $30 worth of flour, bacon, and condiments. You can take them into the woods, and with the addition of the fish and game you can catch you can come out in the spring as fat as a partridge."

Some of the other items of the cost of living in this part of Alaska are as follows: House rents range from $10 a month for a single unfurnished room to $25 a cabin, or a four room flat. Four room cottages may be had for $35 a month and larger houses command higher prices. Living expenses per day are said to average from $1 to $1.50, exclusive of lodging, which may be obtained for about $20 per month. The demand for labor about equals the supply, and the wages range from $3 for common labor to $5 or $6 a day for skilled mechanics.

DRUG USERS GROW FEWER, COUNTY HOSPITAL REPORTS

Report of Night Warden Indicates Wholesome Results of Harrison Anti-Narcotic Law.

The habitual use of morphine and other drugs in Chicago has been greatly reduced, and is rapidly being terminated. The Harrison drug act, in effect less than a year, has accomplished this result, according to physicians who have been gathering data on the results effected by the law.

Dr. Philip Vaughan, night warden of the county hospital, is preparing an article on the subject for a medical magazine.

"There is no longer a cocaine fiend problem for Chicago," he said. "We are getting fewer and fewer cases of morphine habit.

"The time was when it was surprising if three days passed without a morphine case being brought to the county hospital. Now three weeks often elapse without one."

Dr. Anna Dwyer, physician in the Morals court, confirmed Dr. Vaughan.

"We do not get any more girls addicted to the cocaine habit," she said. "And we are getting fewer and fewer of the morphine fiends. The Harrison drug law is getting results."

BUSINESS IN WAUKEGAN SETTING A BRISK PACE

Business is brisk in Waukegan. The American Steel and Wire company, employing 2,200 men, is working night and day. Demand for barbed wire in Europe is credited with having augmented the orders.

The Wilder Tanning company is building a little city of its own just north of Waukegan. It employs about 400 men, but as soon as the new factory is completed it will give work to from 3,000 to 5,000 men, and will be the largest tannery in the world.

In 1914 the leather market was so glutted through business depression that leather was selling at a price lower than the cost of production. Through the demands of the automobile trade and the European war, leather is now advancing steadily.

The Cyclone Fence company, the Pfanstiehl Electric company, and the Marshall Ventilated Mattress company are busy, the latter company having orders that will require an additional 500 men.

Purchases and leases in connection with proposed building projects probably were the most conspicuous features of last week's real estate market, which, taken as a whole, made an encouraging showing. While the aggregate of the trading was the largest for many weeks, according to the figures of the recorder's office, it was along rather narrow lines, being confined for the greater part to apartments and residences, to a lesser extent to outside business property and acres, and, as stated in the beginning, with much buying for building purposes.

There was nothing doing in the downtown district, except in the way of leases of building space, with nothing of any particular interest doing in manufacturing property. Operations in this field continue on restricted lines, despite reports of considerable doing in the way of negotiations. Prospective buyers, however, show but little interest, with the result that deals are exceedingly difficult to close.

Apartments Still in Lead.

As has been the case all along, the great bulk of the new building projects announced last week was in connection with apartment buildings, although one interesting west side project is of a business character. But it is mostly apartments; and operations in this field continue on such a huge scale as to lend color to the growing belief that they are greatly in excess of the requirements and are anticipating future needs for a long time to come. For 1915 the total of the permits issued was nearly 50 per cent in excess of 1914, with an even greater proportionate volume for the present year.

Matteson Flats in First Place.

In point of cost, the big apartment building to be erected by De Forrest A. Matteson at the northwest corner of Yates boulevard and Sixty-ninth street, opposite the South Shore Country club, holds first place. Mr. Matteson purchased from Franklin A. Luce the 250x 274½ feet of vacant at that point for a reported $62,500, which is at the rate of $250 a foot. He plans to improve the corner with a twenty-four flat building to cost $150,000 and the north 150 feet with a thirty flat building to cost about $200,000. Frank H. Lang represented both parties and will have charge of the properties.

Probably the most important event, both in a building as well as business way, was the announcement of the plans for the erection of a high grade seven story building at 618-26 West Jackson boulevard by Mrs. Mary Corwith Baker for the occupancy of the Converse Shoe company of Salem, Mass. The company will occupy the building, which will be used as western headquarters and distributing center of the company, under a lease for a term of twenty-five years on a 5 and 6 per cent basis.

Term Rental $472,500.

The annual rent will approximate $18,900, or a total of $472,500. For the first five years the annual rental will be 5 per cent on a valuation of $145,000, for the succeeding fifteen years $150,000, and for the remaining five years $155,000.

The lease also provides that the lessee company is to pay taxes and insurance. John R. Magill & Co. represented the Converse company, and Dibblee & Manierre represented Mrs. Baker. The transaction is said to have been a profitable one for Mrs. Baker, as she purchased the ground from the estate of Peter Fahrney, through Dibblee & Manierre, in 1913 for $113,000.

Rogers Park Apartments.

The construction of two large apartment buildings in the Rogers Park district by Frederick Becklenberg, the builder, are involved in connection with the purchase by him from Nicholas J. Mann of the vacant 122x204 feet at 5044-54 Ridge avenue, also the 102x195 feet at 1250-56 Bryn Mawr avenue, for a reported consideration of $35,000. Mr. Becklenberg has had plans prepared for two three story and basement court apartment buildings, one to contain thirty-six apartments of four and five rooms, to cost about $125,000, and the other to contain thirty apartments of four and five rooms, to cost about $100,000. Both have sun parlors. Floyd E. Miller of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties.

A twenty-four apartment building to cost $100,000 is to be erected by William Bertha on the vacant 100x158 feet at the southeast corner of Ellis avenue and Fifty-third street, which he has purchased from Henry F. T. Vehmeyer for a reported consideration of $17,000. Work will begin at once. James E. Bistor of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties.

The A. O. Slaughter estate has sold through H. G. Howard & Co. to B. L. Coolidge the fifty-one and one-half feet in Forty-ninth street, near Grand boulevard, and has begun the construction of a fifteen apartment building, to cost about $45,000. The consideration in the purchase of the land was $5,000.

Floyd E. Miller has purchased from August Hanson the 45x130 feet of vacant at 1133 Pratt boulevard, between Sheridan road and the lake, for a reported $9,000. Mr. Miller will improve with a high grade three flat building to cost about $30,000. The apartments will contain eight rooms with sun parlors and sleeping porches and will rent at $150 a month.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR CHICAGO

Two attractive buildings are being erected at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Bryn Mawr avenue by Charles H. Kusel, which will be known as the Bryn Mawr buildings. The corner building will be three stories high and will contain eight stores and sixteen apartments of two and three rooms, with baths, kitchenettes, and sun parlors. The inside building will contain six apartments of four rooms, with baths, kitchenettes, and sun parlors. The cost of the buildings is placed at $88,000, and S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a bond issue loan of $47,000. Ralph C. Harris is the architect.

The lower building is the one which Mrs. Mary Corwith Baker is to erect at 618-26 West Jackson boulevard for the Converse Shoe company of Malden, Mass. It will occupy 100x100 feet, will be seven stories high, and is expected to cost about $110,000. It will be the western headquarters and distributing plant of the Converse company. The company will not occupy the entire building at first, and will rent some of the upper floors through John R. Magill & Co., who will have charge of the building.

BROKER AWARDED HIS FEE AGAINST UNLUCKY OWNER.

A broker was awarded his commission where the purchaser refused to take title because of a restriction against tenements and nuisances, says the Real Estate News. This restriction was held unreasonable because an apartment could be built. Here the unfortunate owner was obliged to let a buyer escape because of the strength of the incumbrance, but had to pay the broker because it was unreasonable of the buyer to refuse to complete the purchase on so flimsy an excuse. A restriction against nuisances was held immaterial in a foreclosure sale, there being no evidence that the restriction affected the value of the property. But on resale and reappeal evidence was produced showing that the value was affected.

FIGURES SHOW BUILDING IN CHICAGO ON A BOOM.

The February figures of the city building department furnish convincing evidence of the great building boom which is now on. Thus, there were 606 permits for a total cost of $7,354,200 for the month just closed, as compared with 579 and a total cost of $4,791,500 for February, 1915. For January and February there were 1,144 permits, with a total cost of $15,472,400, as compared with 1,055 permits and a total cost of $9,029,400 for the same months in 1915. Chicago leads all the cities of the country in the volume of February building, with a gain of 56 per cent, while New York shows a decrease of 40 per cent.

NORTH SIDE HOTEL PLANNED

Report has it that still another hotel is planned for the outlying north side. This time it is Tom Chamales who is to build a ten story structure at the southwest corner of Broadway and Lawrence avenue on a lot 144x144 feet, which is to contain 1,500 rooms. There also is to be a theater with a seating capacity of 1,400. The property is across the street from the Green Mill gardens.

SIX ACRES SOLD IN ROGERS PARK

Old Ludes Homestead Tract Brings Record Price for That Vicinity.

Rogers Park furnished the only acre transaction of the week, and it was of much interest for several reasons. It comprised the old Ludes homestead tract on Albion avenue, and a peculiar interest attached to the transaction for the reason the father of the grantor is said to have been the first white settler in that section, coming here over eighty years ago.

The tract sold comprises approximately six acres, with a north frontage of a quarter of a mile on Albion avenue, extending from Ashland avenue on the east to the Northwestern tracks on the west. It extends south about 190 feet and fronts about 380 feet on both sides of Clark street, which intersects it.

The tract was sold by Michael Ludes through William L. Wallen & Sons to Orrie E. Gallup and John A. Schiesswohl for a reported consideration of approximately $60,000, which is at the rate of $10,000 an acre, said to be the record price for acres in that vicinity. The property already has been subdivided and placed on the market, and it is stated that Wallen & Sons have sold nearly $30,000 worth of frontage to builders and others within the last thirty days.

As indicative of the advance of values in this vicinity it is interesting to note that when Mr. Wallen purchased a thirty acre tract about two and one-half years ago, now known as William L. Wallen's addition to Rogers Park, and adjoining this property on the north and extending to Columbia avenue, he paid $100,000 for it, or less than $3,500 an acre. Mr. Wallen still owns about one-third of this property.

An interesting feature of the Ludes sale is the statement the father of the grantor was the first white settler in that section, coming here over eighty years ago.

JOHN M. ADAMS ESTATE BUYS JOHN M. SMYTH PROPERTY.

At the partition sale of the John M. Smyth properties at the rooms of the Chicago real estate board on Friday the bulk of the offerings were bid in by the estate of John M. Adams, representing it. It was appraised at $135,000, and is said to be under contract of sale to Charles T. Luckow for $135,000. The two story store and flat building at Madison street and Hoyne avenue went at $24,700; the two story store and flat building at Adams and Halsted at $100,000. It was appraised at $150,000. The six story building at 1014-1018 Madison street went at $40,000; the twenty-one flat building at 1039-51 Jackson boulevard at $60,000; the southeast corner of Madison street and Racine avenue, 125x120 feet, with one story store building, at $44,000. It was appraised at $62,000. The premises at 1037 West Adams, 141x200 feet, with residence and barn, went at $40,000, with an appraisal of $60,000.

FEBRUARY DEED RECORD SHOWS REALTY HEALTHY.

Transfer figures for February, as given out by Recorder Joseph F. Connery, furnish substantial evidence of greatly improved condition in the real estate market. Thus, there were 3,810 deeds with a total consideration of $10,179,776 filed for record, as compared with 3,341 with total consideration of $6,394,189 for February a year ago. There was also a gain of eighty-six in the number of deeds filed for record under the Torrens system, the figure being 329, with $302,170 consideration, as against 243 with $279,018 consideration for the same month a year ago. There was also a gain of three in the number of applications for initial registration.

ACTIVE MARKET IN APARTMENTS ALL OVER CITY

South Shore District Furnishes Leading Deal in $147,500 Sale.

Apartment house property maintained again last week the strong showing it has been making for some time. There perhaps were not as many big transactions as was the case during the previous week, but this was more than compensated for by the large number of medium sized deals which were reported or made matters of record. It continues to be, as it has been for a considerable time, the most important feature of the market.

The new south shore district furnished the most important transaction of the week in the purchase by a nonresident, Frank W. Scanling of Chrisman, Ill., of the high grade thirty apartment building at the northeast corner of Coles avenue and Seventy-third street for a reported consideration of $147,500. The building occupies a lot 186x110 feet, the apartments containing four and five rooms with sun parlors, the five room apartments also containing two baths.

Building Completed in July.

The building is a new one, having been completed last July. It was acquired from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, and the sale was subject to an incumbrance of $87,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a farm of 1,000 acres in Johnson county, Ill. H. G. Howard & Co. were the brokers.

Robinson to Isador Sabath and Royston Oliver of the twenty-four court apartment building on a lot 100x158 feet at 5417-23 Ingleside avenue, for a reported consideration of $85,000, subject to an incumbrance of $65,000. The building has a gross annual rent of over $12,000, and the transaction was a cash one. Samuel H. Fridstein & Co. were the brokers.

The Wauban apartments at the northwest corner of Thirty-ninth street and Ellis avenue, a seven story structure on 96x127½ feet of ground, has been conveyed by Katherine Underwood to Ensley J. Case of Peoria for an indicated consideration of $115,000, subject to an incumbrance of $65,000.

Hurter conveyed to Carl Ekstrom the property at the northwest corner of Indiana avenue and Sixtieth street, lot 99x161 feet, with apartment improvements, for an indicated consideration of $65,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. Mrs. Hurter first acquired it from Jerome L. Deimel for an indicated consideration of $65,000, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000.

The property at the southeast corner of Humboldt boulevard and Edgewood avenue, lot 50x124 feet, improved with a twelve apartment building, has been conveyed by Paul Windmueller et al. to Israel Cohen for an indicated consideration of $41,500, subject to an incumbrance of $21,500. Leases and Loans.

There was considerable doing of an important character in downtown building leases, although not to be compared with the big State street building lease of the previous week. There were three or four really noteworthy leases, however, and in this connection it may be said that the consensus of opinion among brokers operating in this field is that the situation steadily is improving. This is generally attributed to the improved tone of general business. The office building situation, particularly in some of the older buildings, is not good, but there is not as much complaint as a few months ago.

There is little change in the mortgage loan market, but among brokers of broad experience in this field, the opinion is that the tendency is toward slightly stronger interest rates. Building loans are being freely made, and, unfortunately, too many of them are on too liberal a basis, if current report is to be believed.

One notable downtown lease covered space in the Bay State building at the southwest corner of State and Randolph street, comprising the store at 130 North State street, together with the entire second, third, and fifth floors, which were leased by Thomas A. Hall & Co. for the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the owner of the building, to Edward Burnham for a total term rent of $126,000. The second and third floors when rearranged will be devoted to manicuring and hairdressing business, and the fifth floor will be used exclusively for a ladies' bath department. New store fronts will be installed and the entire building remodeled at an expense of $25,000.

The same agents have leased for the Harrison Trust agreement to the Rapid Addressing Machine company 4,000 square feet on the second floor of the new building at the southeast corner of State and Harrison streets for a term rent of $21,000. This fills the building above the store floor.

Another lease covered the second floor of the Masonic temple, State and Randolph streets, which was leased to the Grossman Shoe company. The space taken comprises 8,000 square feet and it was leased for a term of ten years at a reported term rent of $125,000. Willoughby & Co., who represented the Masonic Temple Trust, the lessor, have charge of the building.

A noteworthy downtown lease covers the entire second floor of the building at 318-20 South Michigan avenue, which formerly was occupied by the Ferguson company. It comprises about 9,000 square feet and has been leased by the Leschin Company, Inc., to Charles H. Wentworth, who will occupy it with a popular priced cafeteria. The lease is for a term of ten years at a reported term rent of $90,500. Mr. Wentworth, who was the first manager in Henrici Cafeteria company, has since devoted his time to his own cafeteria in the Hearst building. Both parties were represented by Isador Ferguson.

W. H. Suchier & Co. have leased for William H. Oliver and the Gulbranson-Dickinson company to the Independent Candy company, the three story and basement building, 32x180 feet, at 1217-19 East Monroe street, for a term rent of $12,000.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company is trustee in a bond issue loan of $70,000, two to six years, at 6 per cent, to Edward M. Bertha on the new thirty-six apartment building, lot 100x161 feet, in Michigan avenue, near Fifty-sixth street.

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company has made a loan of $100,000, five years, at 5 per cent, to William R. Manierre, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Water and Rush streets, north front, 120 feet to Rush street.

The Central Trust company is trustee in a loan of $100,000, five years, at 6 per cent, to William L. Crafts on the property at the southeast corner of Western and Austin avenues, 318x204 feet, with 254 feet on Kinzie street.

C. R. Gleason has given a trust deed to S. W. Straus & Co. to secure a loan of $125,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, secured by the new apartment building on Ellis avenue 210 feet north of Forty-first street, lot 100x183 feet, west front.

A. S. Peabody is trustee in a loan of $95,000, six years, at 6 per cent, to David H. Jackson on the property at the northwest corner of Greenleaf and Forest avenues, 150x171 feet, with flat improvements.

REALTY COMPANY TO BUILD 10 STORY NORTH SIDE HOME.

It is announced that the Bowes Realty company will erect a ten story building at the southeast corner of the outer Lake Shore drive and Ohio street, instead of a seven story building, as originally planned. The building, which will occupy a lot 109x158 feet, will be of fireproof construction, and will be devoted to publishers, mail order houses, and those desirous of securing office space at lower rentals than in the downtown district. The building, which was designed by Architect Samuel N. Crowen, will be completed about Jan. 1 next, and is expected to cost about $350,000. It is expected the Lincoln park commissioners will repave and landscape the Lake Shore drive at this point during the coming summer.

Outside Store Property Shows Improvement Over the Previous Week.

As has been the case during the last two or three weeks, there was not much doing of an important character in outside business property, although the volume and character of last week's business in this field showed a marked improvement over that of the previous week.

A noteworthy transaction closed late in the week is of special interest for the reason it involves the erection of a [illegible] bank, store, and office building by the Southwest Merchants' State bank at the southwest corner of Ashland avenue and Fifty-first street. The lot, [illegible] feet, was under a lease for twenty-five years, from Jan. 1, 1914, from Frank Deschauer to Marcus M. Haebsch, at a graded annual rent from [illegible] to [illegible].

Gets Extension of Lease.

The bank acquired the Haebsch lease and also has secured from Deschauer an extension for seventy-four years, following the expiration of the lease at an annual rent of [illegible] for the first twenty-four years, the rent for the remainder of the term to be fixed by appraisal.

The work of razing the present improvements will begin on May 1 next and the work of construction begin. The bank, which was organized in June, [illegible], will occupy the bank floor, and it is stated the store at the corner has already been leased at a monthly rent of [illegible]. The bank is at present located on the opposite side of Ashland avenue.

Buys Kedzie Avenue Property.

Hiram De Camp has sold to Dr. [illegible] Bloomenthal the new three story building on a lot 50x125 feet at [illegible] Kedzie avenue, known as the Kedzie building, containing stores, offices, and flats, for a reported consideration of [illegible], subject to an incumbrance of [illegible]. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at the northwest corner of Western avenue and Taylor street, lot 49x125 feet, improved with a four story building, for an indicated consideration of $20,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000. M. Klein represented both parties to the transactions.

The leasehold interest in the [illegible] of ground and the four story store and business building, containing stores, offices, and apartments, with two [illegible] adjoining, at the northeast corner of Madison and Sheldon streets, has been purchased by Clarence Artebury of [illegible] county, Ill., from Max Michel of Chicago for a reported consideration of [illegible]. In exchange the purchaser conveyed a farm of 160 acres in La Grange county, Ind.; also a farm of 240 acres in Gallatin county, Ill. George W. Stewart represented both parties to the transaction.

Sale in Lake View.

An interesting transaction in Lake View business property made a matter of record is the sale by Milton [illegible] to Ameria S. Lazarus of the property at the southeast corner of [illegible] and Broadway, lot 60x148 feet, improved with a row of one story white tile front stores, for an indicated consideration of $55,000, the purchaser assuming an incumbrance of $25,000, paying [illegible] cash and giving a purchase money mortgage of $10,000.

C. S. Haffenberg has conveyed to Alexander O. Mason the property at the northwest corner of Milwaukee avenue and Green street, the lot, which has [illegible] improvements, being of irregular shape, with a northeast frontage of [illegible] by 131 by 77 by 116 by 25 feet, for an indicated consideration of $25,000.

The property at the southwest corner of North Robey street and Wabansia avenue, lot 100x80 feet, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by W. E. Barry to Virgil B. Mayo for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $28,000.

Charles Schubert has sold to Alfred E. Nelson the property at [illegible] North Clark street, improved with a store and flat building, for a reported consideration of $21,500, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. Both parties were represented by Wallinder & West.

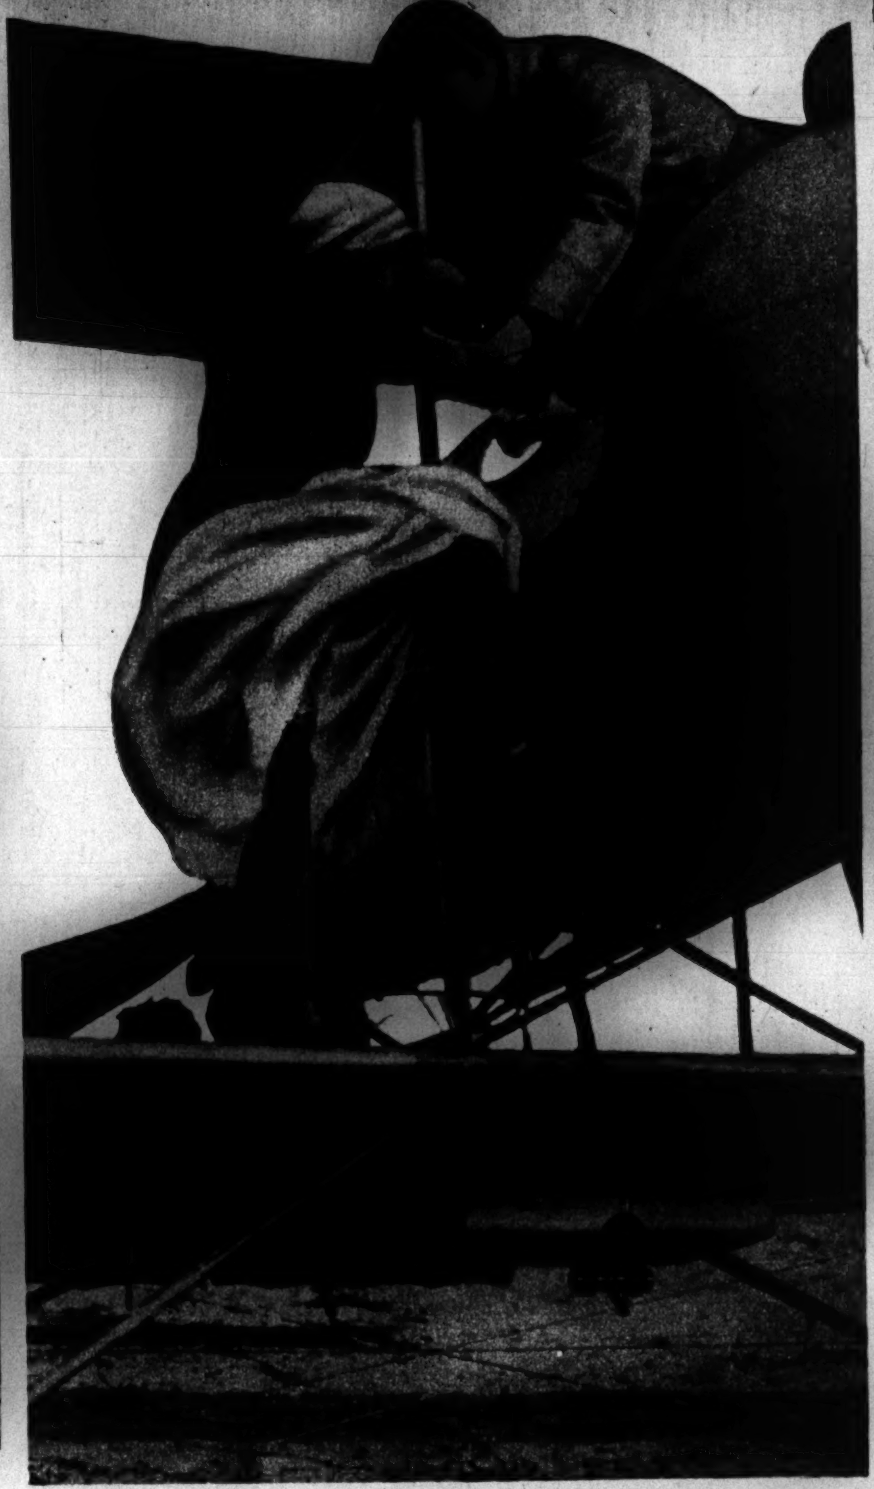
AUSTRIANS DIGGING A SINKING HORSE OUT OF A SERBIAN MARSH—James O'Donnell Bennett, Tribune war correspondent with the German armies, who sent this picture, writes on the back of it, "The difficulties which attended the Austro-German advance in Serbia were largely caused by villainous roads. 'Why this road,' said an Austrian officer as we stood ankle deep in mud on a street in the environs of Belgrade, 'this road is a ballroom floor compared with most highways in Serbia.'"



FRENCH WAR NURSE MOUNTING AN AEROPLANE—The aeroplane is in general use along the various fronts as a means of transporting nurses to and from the scenes of operations. Most of the war nurses have become inured to danger, whether encountered on the battlefield or in the risky business of flying.

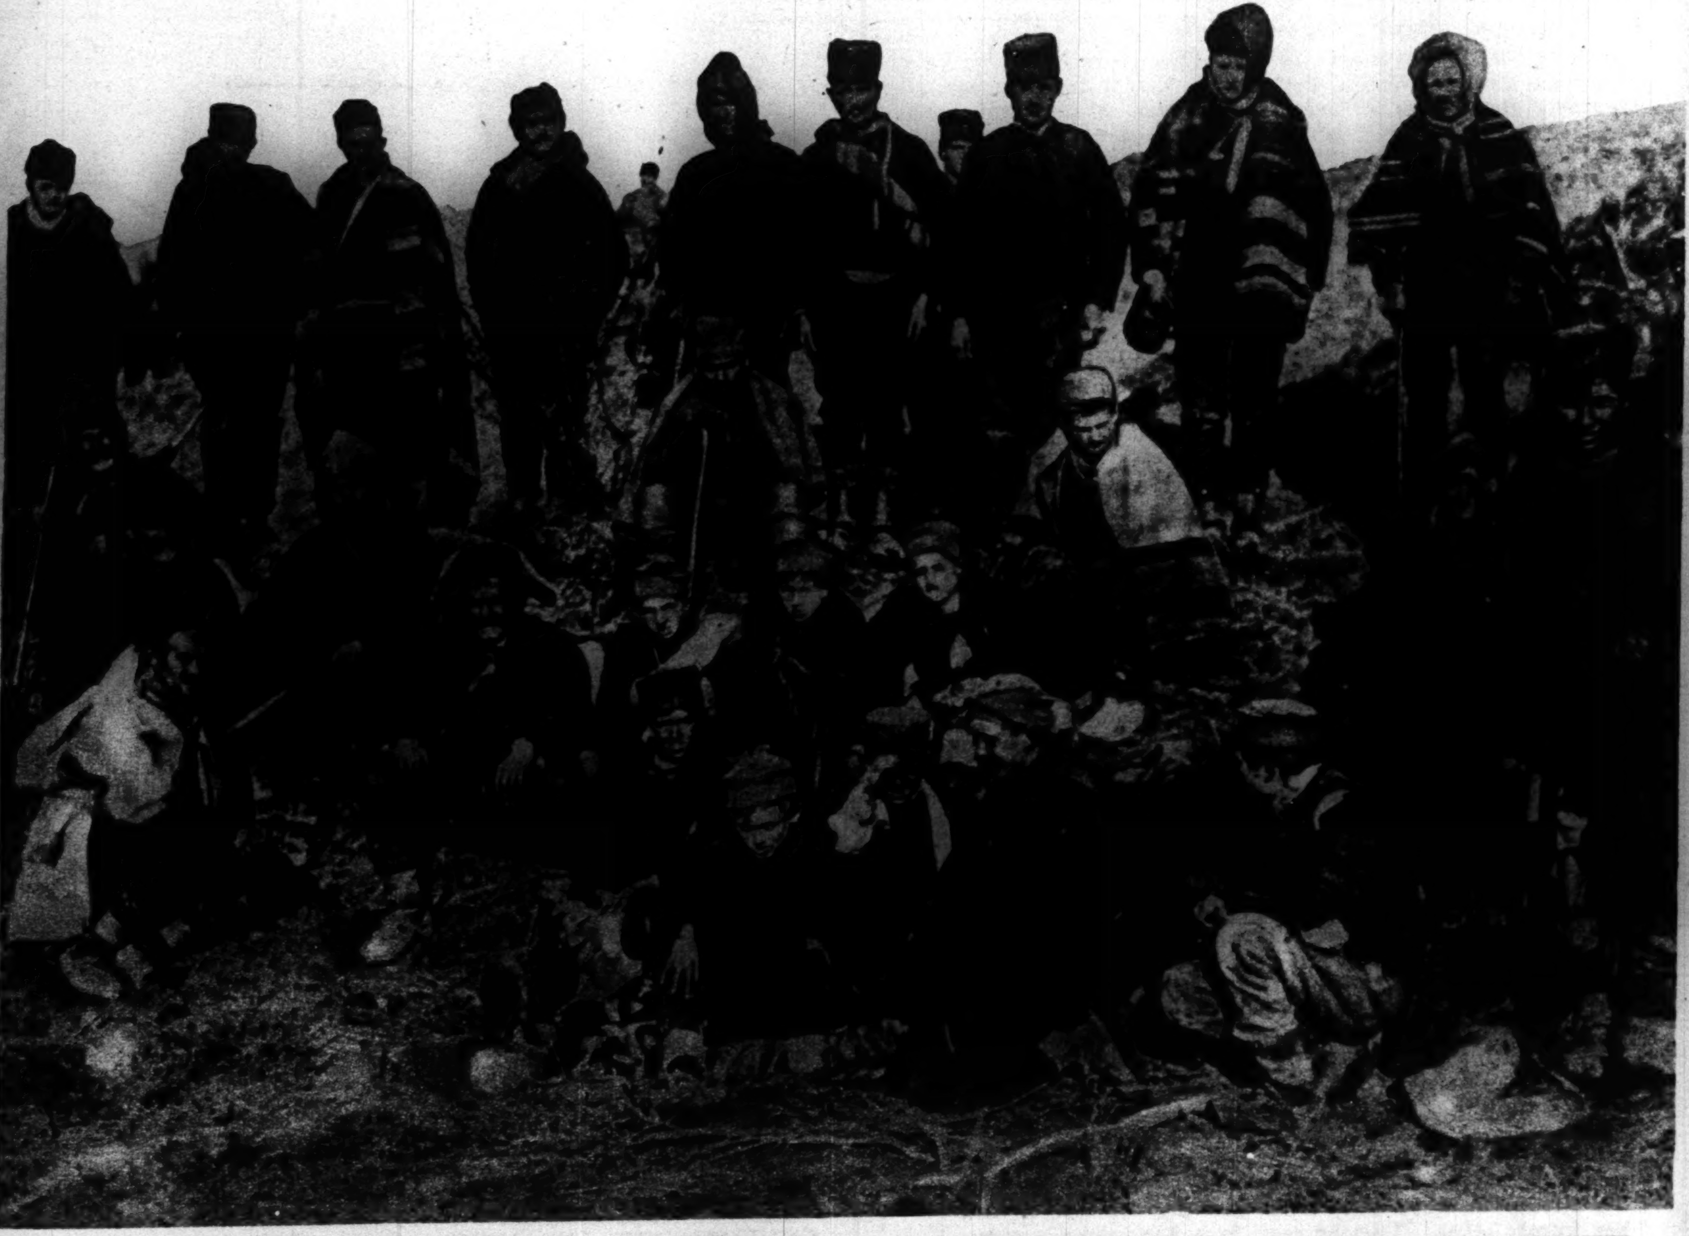
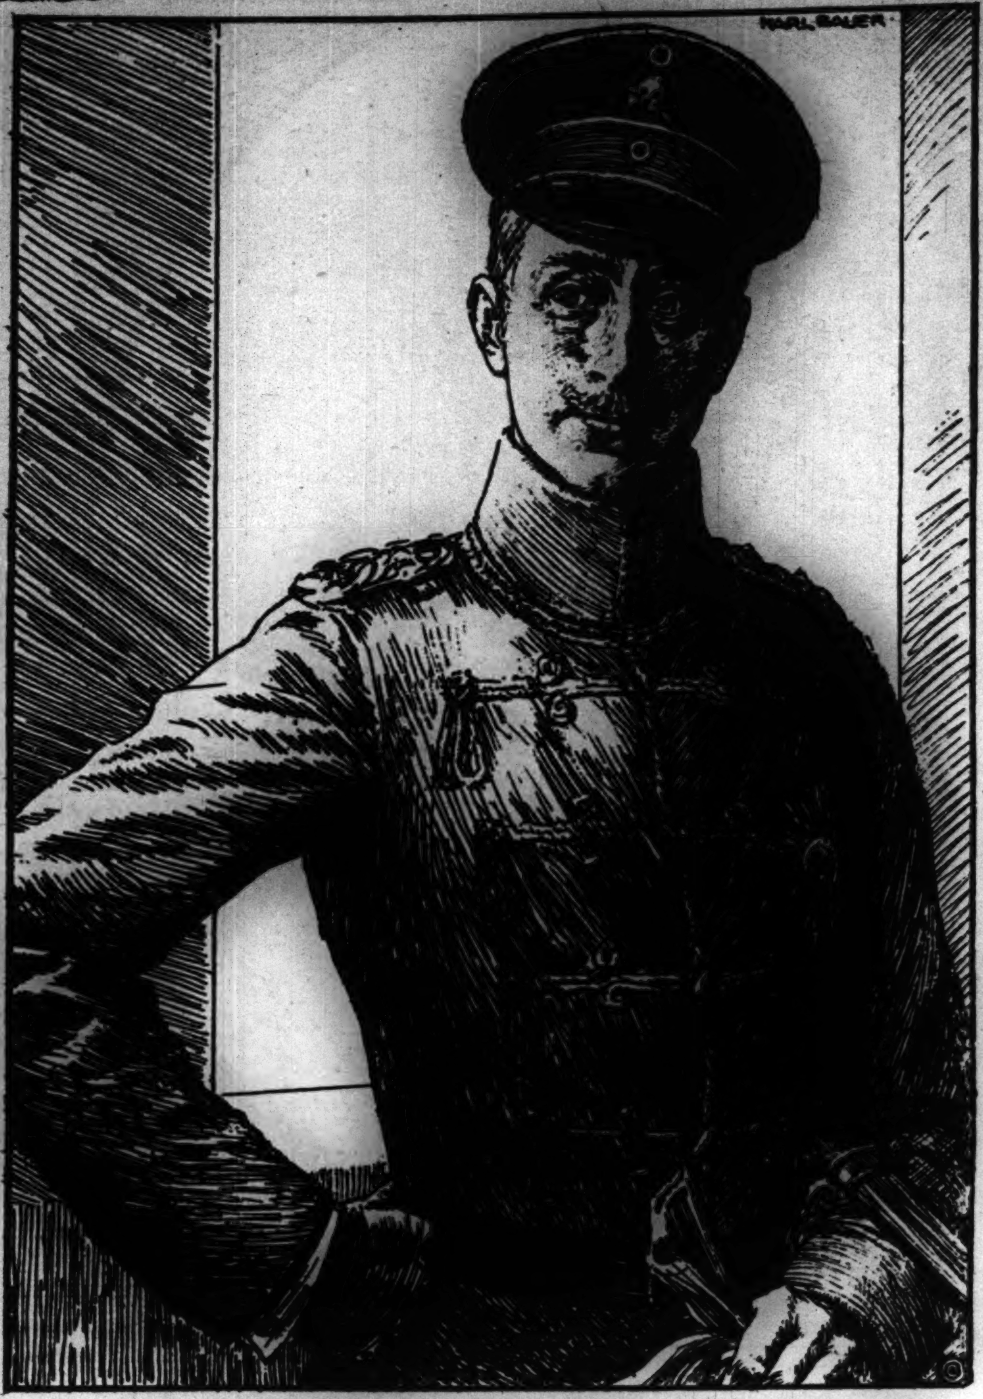
WITH THE AUSTRIAN MOUNTAIN ARTILLERY IN MONTENEGRO—James O'Donnell Bennett, war correspondent for The Tribune with the German armies, who sent this picture, wrote on the back of it, "Bleak is the word for the Balkan landscape in December—bleak and monotonous and cold. Here and there a few huddled villages, then a long stretch of farm land, and then a dark line of forest. It is the kind of country that takes the heart out of soldiers."



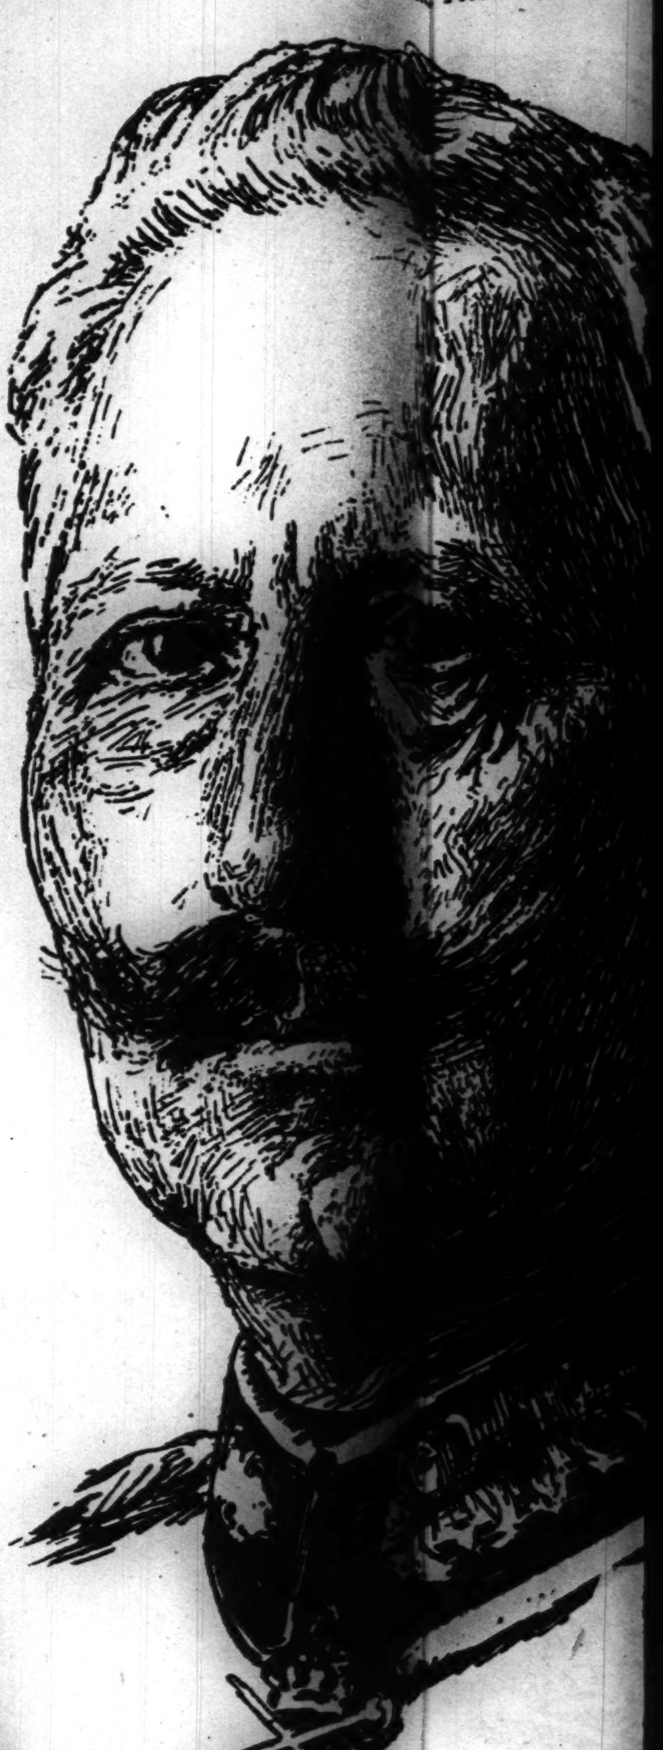
SERBIAN CIVIL PRISONERS—James O'Donnell Bennett, Tribune war correspondent with the German armies, who sent this picture, writes of it, "The Austrians say that the Serbians are good natured fellows who make faithful, willing servants and kind masters. They are by nature a cheerful people and not combative. The Bulgarians, on the contrary, would rather fight than eat."

LATE SKETCHES OF GERMAN

Supplied by James O'Donnell Bennett, Tribune War Cor



CROWN PRINCE FREDERICK WILLIAM has command of the army of 280,000 troops which besieged the great fortress of Verdun. When his wife, Crown Princess Cecile, gave him a daughter last April he was winning renown as an army commander in the Argonne region. He has led armies on both the eastern and western fronts. He is 34 years old.



Wilhelm II
Emperor of Germany

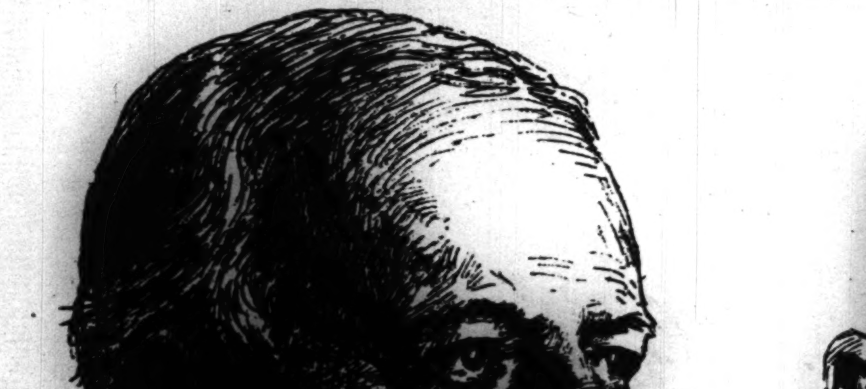
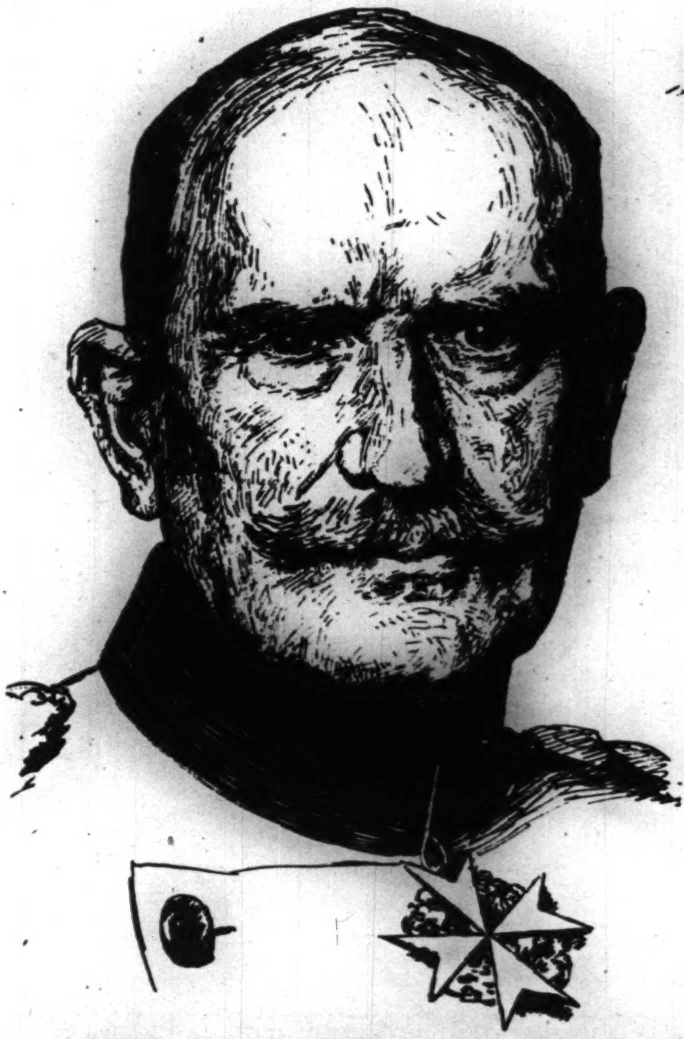
Mr. Bennett wrote on the back of this
"Very good."



COUNT BUELOW, one of the shrewdest statesmen in all Germany. Count Buelow's most trying task was his attempt to keep Italy from entering the war against her former allies. That he may have been more successful in his efforts than appear on the surface, it is said by some critics, is shown by the fact that Italy has never declared war on Germany. He was ambassador to Italy when the war broke out.



GENERAL OF INFANTRY VON BESELER. James O'Donnell Bennett, war correspondent of The Tribune with the German armies, writes: "General von Beseler is called 'Battering Ram Beseler.' He took Antwerp and Novo Georgievsk."

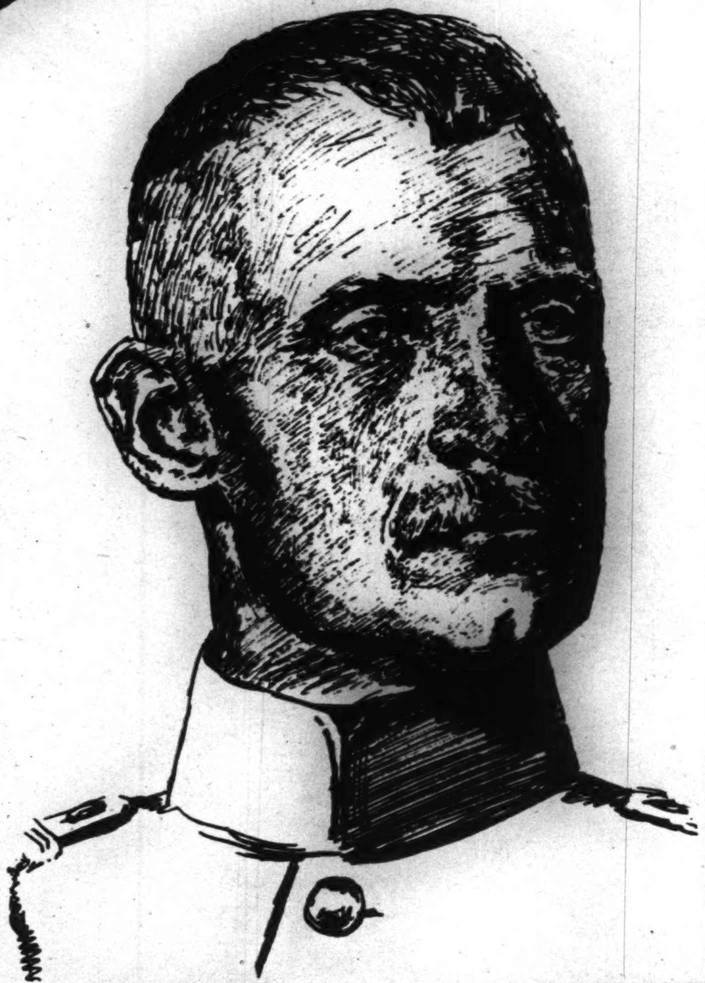
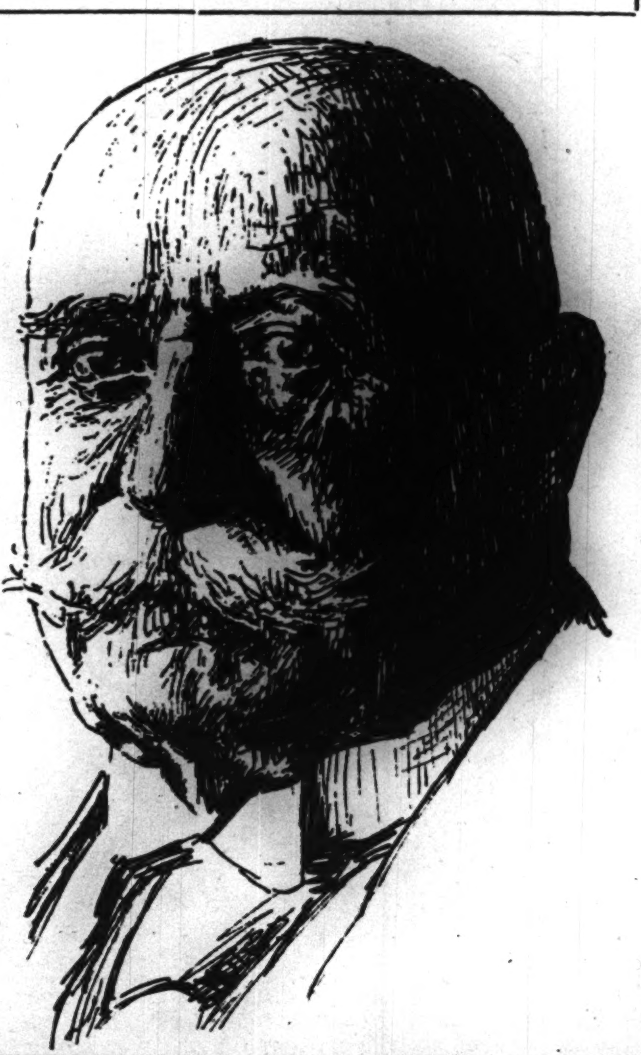
GENERAL OF INFANTRY ERICH VON FALKENHAYN, CHIEF OF THE GENERAL STAFF—Of him Mr. Bennett writes: "He is a delightful talker, democrat in manners, loves to visit, speaks English, laughs a great deal and is vehement and cheerful, yet he probably carries a heavier burden of responsibility than any other man in Germany. The emperor is very fond of him. This sketch is exceptionally good of him."



CROWN PRINCE RUPPRECHT OF BAVARIA, of whom Mr. Bennett writes: "He is a very simple, courteous gentlemen, who has no airs and makes fun of his own English." Crown Prince Rupprecht has led army divisions against the French in Alsace-Lorraine and against the Russians in the Warsaw campaign.



COUNT ZEPPELIN, father of Germany's air craft, designed all of Germany's airships, and it is from him that they get their name. He has personally planned air raids on English coasts, and even in his old age he is constantly at work striving to improve the Zeppelins.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE OF FRANCE, who will be 90 years old in May. The one picture is a portrait of her as the bride of Emperor Louis Napoleon, painted by Winterhalter, and the other is her most recent photograph. When Eugenie, daughter of Count de Montijo, was 13 years old, in Madrid a gypsy fortune teller, so the story goes, predicted that she would be a queen and would live to be nearly a hundred years old. Prosper Merimee, the author, secured tickets for Eugenie and her mother to Louis Napoleon's reception when he was president of France, and it was there that they fell in love with each other. After the battle of Sedan, in 1871, the empire of Louis Napoleon, founded by a coup d'etat in 1852, was disrupted; the emperor was exiled; he later died, and the ex-empress has lived to see a repetition of the struggle on the Franco-German border.

POLITICS AND THE WAR

By Herbert S. Hadley

Ex-Governor of Missouri

WHAT will be the effect of the European war upon the political campaign of 1916? This is a question which occupies a position of first importance in every political discussion. Any answer must of necessity partake of that uncertainty that belongs to all predictions and particularly to political predictions in times of war. The influence of the European war upon American politics will depend to a great extent upon whether the war continues, as it now seems probable it will, until after the close of the campaign of 1916. That it will have, in that event, a direct and important, if not a controlling influence upon our next Presidential campaign, seems entirely clear.

In the first place, there is to be considered its influence upon the attitude of the American people toward those important economic questions which the war has brought to the forefront of public discussion. Among these, the most important is the tariff. It is the opinion of our best informed statesmen and economists that we must, following the close of the European war, face a fierce foreign competition in manufactured products. The idea that the European nations now engaged in this titanic conflict will be too exhausted to be dangerous as commercial competitors is entirely lacking in substantial facts to sustain it. When the eight million fighting men who are now engaged in the work of destruction shall turn to the works of peace, it is entirely clear that they will produce manufactured products far beyond the necessity of their own markets. It is also known that while the working men of Germany have been engaged in fighting her battles, many of her factories have been operated by the old men, women, children and prisoners, producing manufactured products far beyond the need of home consumption. These products have been stored, awaiting the day when German ships can again carry them to our markets and the markets of the world.

These conditions should work to the advantage of the Republican party, for they will strengthen the opinion that we will need in control of our National Government a party whose position in favor of a protective tariff is clear and unequivocal.

THE issue of National preparedness is another question, which the European war has made, for the first time in the lifetime of the present generation, a subject of National discussion. Outside of a group of Pacifists whose number is by no means inconsiderable, but small in proportion to the entire population, there is an overwhelming public opinion in favor of a better condition of National preparedness both on land and on sea. But when it is asserted that a large majority of the American people favor a "reasonable" or an "adequate" degree of preparedness, it is necessary to understand that there are almost as many different opinions as to what is "reasonable" or "adequate" as there are persons discussing the question. The burden of responsibility for dealing with this question rests upon the party in power and its difficulties are evidenced by the marked difference of opinion that exists within and without its ranks. There is on the one hand, Mr. Bryan, whose influence and following are still considerable, who is apparently opposed to any increase in our army or navy, and, on the other hand, there is the Naval Board, which represents the best expert opinion, recommending a navy greater than that of any other nation. If President Wilson and the Democratic party can deal with this problem in a way that will appeal to a substantial majority of the people, they will have accomplished a real achievement in statesmanship, which will be rewarded at the polls. But on the basis of probabilities, it is much more likely that President Wilson will find himself, so far as this question is concerned, in the position of the public official who discovered that by his official conduct he had made a lot of "[illegible] friends and warm enemies."

ANOTHER way in which the war is likely to have an important if not a controlling influence upon the next election is in the prejudices it has aroused in favor of or against the different political parties, on the part of those who sympathize with Germany and her allies, or with England and her allies. The attitude of those who favor Germany seems of the most importance, because more evident and concrete. At the present time, the prejudices of the German-Americans and their sympathizers are strongly against the present administration; but this may or may not be an element of weakness. In this regard, at least, the Republican party has no advantage over its Democratic opponent. A large majority of the German-Americans are Republicans and their vigorous opposition may bring to President Wilson a larger measure of support from those opposed to the German cause than he will thus lose.

The Republican party faces the difficult situation of adopting a platform which will unequivocally meet the demands of those who, like Colonel Roosevelt, think the present administration has been grossly neglectful of National duty in not effectively protesting against the invasion of Belgium and more vigorously resenting the killing of American citizens upon the high seas, and that considerable portion of the party which protests even against what the present administration has done. If the Republican party equivocates or attempts to compromise upon this proposition, it will confront the danger to itself of Colonel Roosevelt's again leading the Progressive party, with an issue of Americanism, upon which he may be able to appeal more effectively for the support of the American people than he did with the issue of social and industrial justice in 1912. And, on the other hand, the defection of the German-American voters who constitute a considerable portion of the Republican party in a number of doubtful states might well give the election to the Democrats, even though those votes were cast for some other party than the Democratic party or were not cast at all. To increase the difficulties of the Republican party in its attitude toward the present administration's handling of international problems, Mr. Taft and other influential leaders have from time to time commended practically all that President Wilson has done in this regard, except in the dealing with the Mexican situation.

Altogether the political situation as affected by the European war is a complex and complicated one. About the only safe prediction that can be made concerning it is that that party will deserve and receive the support of a majority of the American people which asserts without equivocation or hesitation the primary obligation of every citizen to be, first of all, an American; of our Government, to at all times be prepared to protect American citizens on land and on sea, and to perform unflinchingly the obligations which it has assumed by treaty for or against other nations, whether weak or strong.

Lower part for Reading

Near and far sight in one pair of glasses

Can you see distant objects clearly through your reading glasses? Or are you compelled to take them off every time you look across the room or at a distance? Then you need KRYPTOK Glasses.

Many thousands of middle-aged men and women who need glasses for close work only, are putting up with the inconvenience of constantly removing and replacing their glasses—and are unconsciously straining their eyes when they look through their reading glasses at objects three or four feet away—simply because they do not know about

KRYPTOK GLASSES
THE ONLY INVISIBLE BIFOCAL

KRYPTOKS combine near and far sight in one solid lens. The lower part gives the necessary correction for close vision while the upper part is adapted for natural far vision.

KRYPTOK Glasses cannot be distinguished from simple lenses yet they enable you to see both near and far objects with perfect clearness and distinctness. No troublesome removing of glasses.

The smooth, even surface of KRYPTOK Glasses is absolutely free from the disfiguring, age-revealing, vision-blurring lines, seams or shoulders of old-fashioned bifocals. KRYPTOKS are the only perfect bifocals without lines or blur of any kind.

GIVING EYES TO THE BLIND

By William Martin Richards, M. D.

Schools are full of neglected, near-sighted and far-sighted children

Emerging from darkness they were like six magpies chattering for joy

IT IS said that most of the discoveries of benefit to mankind have come about through accidental circumstances. Generally, of course, the accident happened to a person who had already been studying the problem, but it took the accident to switch his thoughts into the path which led to solution. So it was in my case. Although I had been for a long time studying the problem of how to help the nearly blind, if Alexander had not recently come into my office, so soon after Stephen, it is probable that many near-blind school children would not be studying their lessons today with their eyes instead of with their fingers.

Oculists differ on several important questions of method, but all, I believe, accept the doctrine that reading lenses which focus nearer than ten inches cannot safely be prescribed, as they will overstrain the muscles which turn the eyes toward each other. I had a theory that nearly blind children should be given glasses to keep them from going entirely blind.

Extreme nearsightedness is generally confused with blindness. As long as there is any sight, it should be stimulated with glasses and the eyes made to perform their function; for disuse of a function occasions atrophy, and finally total loss of that function. On the other hand, correction of near sight by the proper glasses progressively decreases the near sight, and a nearsighted person whose eyes are regularly examined keeps getting less nearsighted. Though this theory is held by oculists, most of them draw the line at the nearly blind. Their sight is considered hopeless. I believed that the large majority of nearly blind could be given an amount of vision which would keep them from being helpless, and in common with other oculists I knew that without the proper glasses, the little vision they had must decrease until they became totally blind. I thought there must be some way, if we could only discover it, to give them not only vision which would render them less dependent, but vision which they could work with. The trouble was that reading lenses for the nearly blind would have to focus at less than ten inches, and I saw no way to get around that. Meanwhile I kept on studying the problem and went into the blind classes in the public schools.

STEPHEN is sixteen. His head was run over by a wagon when he was three, and almost total blindness resulted. Yet he had persisted at his lessons until he was now in High School. In this school there was a blind class in which there were twelve children, two of them whose cases the teacher did not consider hopeless, and these two she proposed to send to my office. Stephen, with optimistic determination, told the teacher he thought it very hard that she was going to try to do something for the others and not for him. She believed him to be past helping, but wishing to show her appreciation of his spirit, she brought him to my office. The other two boys I made able to see well enough to go into a sighted class, but I could not give Stephen glasses which would enable him to do so. The best I could get gave him only seven per cent vision in one eye, and fifteen per cent in the other. I told him sorrowfully, for I too was struck with his sturdy character, that these would enable him to see slightly, but not enough to do any book work or to see the blackboard. I said good-bye to him, and tried to forget his cruel disappointment.

Stephen was considered a hopeless case

At twenty-six she began to read

Shortly afterwards, in another public school class for the blind, I found Alexander. He brought Stephen sharply to my mind. He too was sixteen, had grit, and his good eye had the same amount of vision as Stephen's. But his other eye was glass. I found that with the proper lens I could give Alexander a distance vision of fifteen per cent, precisely the amount of Stephen's. But since he had only one eye, I was also able to give him a reading lens which focused at three and a half inches; and with this he could study his lessons. So Alexander with his one eye was much better off than Stephen with his two, even if one of them was exactly as good as Alexander's sole eye. It seemed a tragic joke played by fate. Suddenly the solution flashed over me. Why not make Stephen one-eyed for reading only? I did not dare give him two reading lenses, but I could give him one! So I covered the lower part of the glass over his poorer eye with a black wafer, pasting it on just as a reading lens is pasted upon the distance lens in a bifocal glass; and I fitted the other eye with a reading lens which focused it at three and one-half inches. There would now be no more strain in reading for the other eye than if it were artificial like Alexander's, for that eye could not, covered up while reading, see the letters. And with his better eye Stephen now studies from his books, and can now read from the blackboard in the sighted class of which he is a member, while his other eye doesn't mind it at all. And I have since done the same for many other children in the public schools of New York City. They owe the fact that they can now study with one eye in the sighted class instead of with their fingers in the blind class, to Stephen's splendid persistence and to the happy chance that Alexander had a glass eye, which made me think so ruefully of Stephen's illogical fate.

So far I have examined in the so-called blind classes one hundred and fifty-one children, and I find that ninety-nine of them can be made to read from their books. All of these children were thought to be practically blind. They could distinguish light from darkness and some of them could see large objects, but their cases had been pronounced too hopeless for glasses. My experience has taught me that two-thirds of the so-called blind people in the world had a little vision left when they were children, and this vision could have been much increased with the proper glasses. So long as so-called blind children, having no glasses, are kept in classes for the blind and taught to use their fingers instead of their eyes, they will inevitably become blind, through atrophy of what little vision they possess. Their sight must diminish unless they wear glasses, and improper glasses will accomplish blindness more quickly than none at all. With the proper glasses their sight will progressively improve.

It took three months for Stephen to learn to do sighted reading, and now he can perform all the work of his class—that is, not only read from books, but work on the blackboard and see from his seat the blackboard work of others. The time required for this readjustment was due to the fact that he had to get acquainted with his new machinery. Although a bright boy and in the High School, he did not know the shapes of letters.

For the blind, Braille's system of raised dots now takes the place of the cumbrous raised letters formerly in use. The public school teachers experienced in dealing with the blind think that it will take children about two years in a transition class to become familiar with the shapes of written words. Their minds must translate the letter into dots first—just as when we learn a foreign language we must translate each word separately into English before we can group the idea together. "Think in Braille," recommends the teacher to the nearly blind child who first opens the book of lettered words and begins to piece the letters together one by one. Stephen's case, however, gives room for hope that a child's stay in the transition class need not be so prolonged.

I HAVE a case of a woman of twenty-six who learned her small letters in three days. The capital letters she was familiar with because she had learned to know them on the advertising signboards in the streets. As she had never seen the small letters, she knew only by hearsay that there was another kind. When I fitted on her new glasses, with the bifocal lens, and handed her a newspaper, she picked out and named the capital letters at once. And when she saw how much of the page was in small letters and how great was the new world thus opened to her, she cried.

This soul-stirring little drama of making the blind see has been enacted in my office many times. Each grown-up actor has his own form of expression, abandoned to joy yet struggling for self-control. This woman of twenty-six had been partially blind since she was four days old. She has now an artificial eye and an artificial pupil in the other eye, her total visual apparatus consisting of one retina and a corner of a cornea. With this she could distinguish light from darkness and make out large objects. As a blind student she had worked through Perkins' Institute, Boston, and graduated from Columbia University. Compelled to earn her own living, she had sought a place as teacher for the blind; but she had been told she would be of little service in spite of her education and her knowledge of the psychology of the unsighted, because she would not be able to see what a child was doing at the back of the (Continued on page 678)

THE FALL OF A NATION

A Story of the Conquest of America

By THOMAS DIXON

CHAPTER XXX.

THE Governor General received Virginia in royal state. He led her to a seat in the great library and closed the doors. The royal guard took his stand outside.

"I told you, Miss Holland," he began eagerly, "that I had high ambitions. You see that I am a man of my word. Of course, the thing that happened was inevitable. It was written in the book of fate. Had I not seized the reins—another would. Conditions made my coup possible. For the excesses of the Imperial Army I have no words in palliation. Such is war. Had I known the peril of your father and mother I assure you I would have hurried to their rescue—you believe me when I say this?"

"I am sure of it, now," she answered promptly.

"I hurried to Babylon the moment I learned that the defense had collapsed and our troops were victorious——"

He paused and leaned closer.

"I want to apologize for the unpardonable blunder I made the last time we met in this house. I did not realize then how deeply and madly I love you. In anguish I learned it too late. But I have bided my time. I have lived to prove my devotion in the hour of your peril and I have only begun what I wish to do for you——"

Again he paused, his eyes appraising the beauty of the girl.

"I had rather win you than rule the empire that's mine—I would win as a man woos and wins the one woman he loves—you believe me when I say this?"

"Yes," was the frank reply. "I believe now that you are in earnest."

"Good. I don't ask if you love me. I know that you do not. I do not ask you to marry me immediately. I know that I must first win your regard. I prize you all the more for this reason——"

"Man-like, of course," Virginia interrupted with a smile.

"First, I wish to pay you personally the highest tribute a man in my position can give to any man or woman. I am going to offer you the second highest place in the Imperial province. Your fortune has disappeared in the wreck of war. You shall rebuild it ten-fold through the work I shall place in your hands. My first ambition now is to really pacify the country. It can be done through our women.

"I appeal to your reason. Here is the situation. The last hope of successful rebellion has been stamped out. The millions of America, completely disarmed, are helpless to resist our army of occupation. I wish, not only to complete the crushing of the last hope of insurrection; it is my ambition to convince the people that the Central Monarchical and Aristocratic form of Government is the only natural order and therefore a divine law.

"The quick intuitions of women have been always more open to this truth than the more brutal and anarchistic male mind. Women have always been the bulwark of aristocracy and Imperial Monarchy. Man is an anarchist—woman a royalist by instinct.

The American Democracy was only an accident of Time and Space. The oceans are now the King's Highway and he owns them by right of eminent domain. Democracy can never survive this bringing of the ends of the earth together. Democracy can not live because when brought face to face with the monarchical form it is not worthy to live. The United States of America gave the human race the one supreme example of a weak, corrupt and contemptible government. The like of it was never known before in the history of man.

"Democracy is a disease—a form of crowd egomania which drives millions of people mad with the insane delusion that they have been called of God to do something for which they are utterly unfitted.

"All government worthy of the name must be conducted by a few able minds—divine leaders—presided over by a supreme leader whom we call Emperor or King. This is true in so-called Democracies. The people only pretend to govern—imagine that they govern. They do not. A few master minds and brutal wills do it for them. Hence the system of bosses whose foul record we have ended forever.

"NO nation can have an art or literature unless monarchical and aristocratic. America has never had a literature. It will have one only when its conscious life is reincarnated in the soul of a sovereign who takes his crown from God, not man.

"In Central Europe Government has long been reduced to a science. Their cities are clean—their life as orderly as the movement of the stars.

"The monarchical form of government only can answer the questions of Socialism. Germany did this a generation ago. When the world war came the Socialists were as loyal to the Emperor as the proudest prince of the blood.

"The conquest of America has been the best thing that could have happened. Its battles were of minor importance. Had not a powerful Imperial Government come to our rescue we would have been deluged in blood by a second French Revolution within this generation.

"The noblest minds in America have felt this for years. They have gradually been turning in disgust from our corrupt legislatures, our corrupt courts, our corrupt municipalities, our rotten boroughs, our stupid Congress. I tell you this to show you that I have been led by no weak or vulgar ambition into a betrayal of the liberties of a people. I believe in what I have done—believe in it with every ounce of my manhood. We owe the progress of the human race to Aristocracy not Democracy. Democracy is the great leveller of the world—the destructive force that presses humanity downward and backward. Aristocracy is the inspiring power that leads, uplifts, creates and beckons onward and upward——"

Waldron stopped suddenly and gazed on the placid waters of the Hudson.

Virginia watched him with genuine astonishment. He had revealed a new side of his character. She had not dreamt that his philosophy of life had been so logically wrought. She had not believed, since his betrayal of his country, that he had a philosophy of life at all.

"You astonish me beyond measure," she said at last.

He smiled coldly.

"I understand. You did not think me capable of such thoughts or such close reasoning—confess it!"

"It's true, I didn't——"

"You know now that I am in earnest in my political ambitions also?"

"I'm thoroughly convinced——"

"Good. You are a woman of intelligence and high ambitions. It is therefore easy for me to speak, now that you know that I am sincere——"

He held her gaze in searching silence.

"I may trust you now, I'm sure, with a secret that is not a secret if I should be accused. You will know that I mean something very definite when I say that this nation is too great, its resources too inexhaustible to remain forever a conquered province of Imperial Europe. Am I not right?"

"At least I hope so," was the diplomatic reply.

"Exactly," Waldron answered confidentially. "In other words the day will come when a political leader of supreme genius will win the utter loyalty and confidence of the soldiers who hold these millions in leash. The man who does that will ascend a throne in Washington in a palace worthy of an empire washed by two oceans—you understand?"

"I see!" Virginia breathed.

"Remember then, dear Miss Holland, that I am your servant from to-day. If I have high ambitions and glorious dreams for my people and my country, I dream new glories for you——"

"And the commission you would offer me?" she asked steadily.

"That you organize the Women of America into loyal legions who will sustain the government against the possible forces of anarchy and rebellion. If you will consider the offer I will place unlimited means at your command. The old regime is gone forever. You can help me now to organize a nobler one on its ruins."

"And my reward?"

"I shall lay at your feet all that I am and have and ever hope to be. I offer it now without condition, if you will accept my hand in marriage——"

"Your commission I accept at once," was the prompt reply. "If I succeed we shall meet on terms more nearly equal."

Waldron sprang to his feet, seized her hand and pressed it to his lips.

Could he have interpreted the expression of her face as his lips touched her flesh he would not have smiled as he led her to the waiting car.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE jails were crowded with our leading statesmen. The President and his Cabinet had been transferred to Fort Warren at Boston before the capitol was destroyed.

The Hon. Plato Barker, for reasons deemed sufficient by the Governor General, was placed in the Government Penitentiary at Albany. In spite of his mania for Peace Waldron thoroughly mistrusted him. His passion for oratorical leadership he knew to be insatiable. What fool scheme he might advocate in secret could not be guessed. In vain Barker offered to take the imperial oath. He could not endure the silence to which he had been doomed. His mind began to break under the strain. He was saved from madness by an order which permitted him to preach to the prisoners on Sundays.

Pike proved to be another proposition for his captor. He became so peevish and sullen that his task-master went out of his way to make his life unendurable. The bow-legged one not only continually repeated Pike's former expressions on the dangers of being armed and the wickedness of being prepared for defense in the presence of the preacher while he danced attendance as a waiter at his headquarters, but he added insult to injury at last by forcing the advocate of peace to become an expert shot by daily target practice.

When Waldron ordered the doughty Cavalry Commander to St. Louis, he dragged Pike with him to continue his systematic torture. He piled the last straw on the little man's back the day after their arrival in the new quarters by ordering him to don the uniform of the Emperor, join a firing squad and shoot a deserter.

The preacher refused point blank. To have his fun the general ordered two guardsmen to bring the rebel to his room and force him into the uniform—his horse was standing at the door saddled and ready to gallop to the field and watch Pike crumple under the ordeal.

The General roared with laughter at the little man in infantry uniform. The guardsmen in their shirt sleeves were laughing too. He had struggled manfully to prevent the outrage and they had only drawn the clothes on him by main force. It took the hostler at the door to win the contest finally.

"Cheer up Cuthbert, we see your finish!" the Commander cried.

The boys roared.

With a sudden panther-leap Pike was on the General, snatched his automatic from his belt, shot him dead and killed the three men before they recovered from the shock.

With a second leap he was on the waiting horse, and galloping through the camp before the guards discovered what had happened.

He found his way to General Wood's headquarters in the Sierra Nevadas and reported for duty.

"Keep your uniform!" laughed the American General. "We'll need it for scout work."

"Sure I'll keep it," the preacher snapped—"and use it myself, sir! I'll show them that my name's Pike—not Piker!"

The General despatched him to the coast on an important and dangerous mission.

CHAPTER XXXII.

VIRGINIA HOLLAND'S conversion to the open advocacy of the principles of Monarchy and Aristocracy was Waldron's first sensation in the campaign he began to destroy the American conception of liberty. Her confession of faith was a liberal outline of the ideals which the Governor General had proclaimed in his library. Waldron was elated at his triumph.

Her brief statement and appeal to the women of America to support her movement of loyalty he ordered printed in every newspaper in the country. It duly appeared on the front pages accompanied by a portrait of the distinguished young convert.

Her first year's engagements in organizing the Woman's Imperial Legion of Honor took her to the principal cities of every state.

Her appeal had been received by the women of America with secret rage, amazement and horror. The Government had commanded their attendance on her lectures. Her reception at first had been cold and formal. But her magnetic personality turned the tide. Within a month there was no hall large enough in America to hold the breathless throngs of women who hung on her words. And strangest of all, they cheered her with an enthusiasm that amazed Waldron.

His agents reported this enthusiasm with oft repeated praise of her uncanny genius.

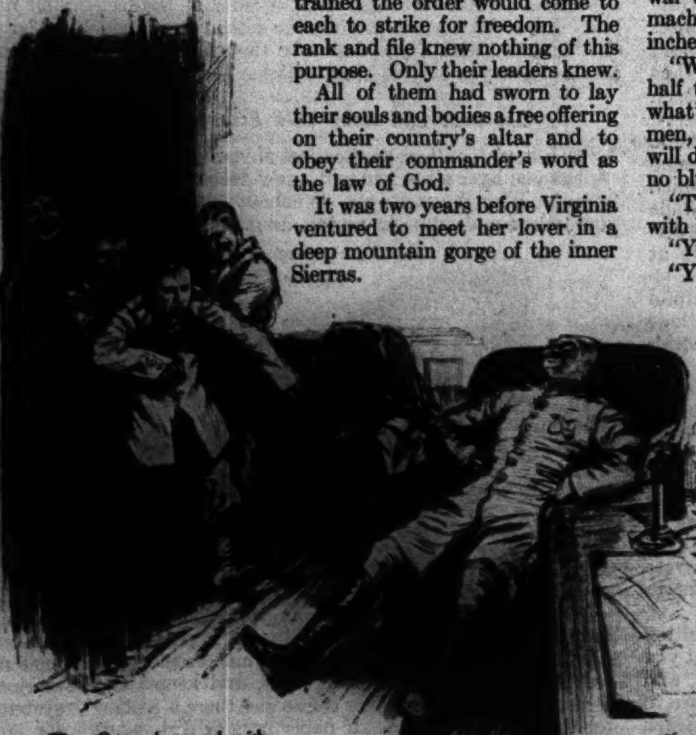
The secret of her popularity they had not dreamed. In each town she took into her confidence but one woman on whose love of country she could depend with absolute certainty. This woman she swore in secret to organize an inner circle whose name to them was The Daughters of Jael. The spies who followed her tour to report to the Governor General never reached this inner circle. In it were taken under solemn oath those whose love for liberty was a religion.

The Daughters of Jael comprised only the wisest women leaders and with them the strongest and most beautiful girls of twenty to thirty years of age.

They were taught in secret two things—to keep their lithe young bodies hard and sun-tanned and learn to wield a steel knife whose blade was eight inches long, slender and keen. They were taught to bury this knife to the hilt in a dummy at a single stroke. When a million had been sworn and trained the order would come to each to strike for freedom. The rank and file knew nothing of this purpose. Only their leaders knew.

All of them had sworn to lay their souls and bodies a free offering on their country's altar and to obey their commander's word as the law of God.

It was two years before Virginia ventured to meet her lover in a deep mountain gorge of the inner Sierras.



The General roared with laughter at the little man in infantry uniform.

Their embrace was long and silent. At last they spoke in low half articulate sounds that only Love could hear and understand.

When the first paroxysm of emotion had spent itself —she asked him eagerly:

"Your last invention—the aerial torpedo?"

"A failure like the rest!" he answered sadly. "Great inventions that revolutionize warfare have all required years to perfect—the ironclad a generation—the submarine ten years—the aeroplane ten years. They required the geniuses of hundreds in their experiments and the lives of thousands. The hope of miraculous inventions in an hour of crisis are only the vain dreams of the novelist. We have ceased to hope for such deliverance. We are training men to master the already perfected mechanism of the submarine—thousands of them. Lake, the inventor, is an admiral. We have a model at work six thousand feet above the sea. I command The Eagles Nest, and the camp on a great mountain plateau where we are training hundreds of aviators. On another peak among the stars we are teaching men to use the range finders and swing big guns to strike a target at twelve miles. Most important of all we are teaching each and every man how to use cold steel at close range——"

"You fully accept my scheme then?" she interrupted.

"As an inspiration of God! The staff has toasted it with a hundred hostile suppositions. It is sure to win if you can train a million girls to wield a knife with deadly power and steel their hearts to do the deed. The only question is can you get those girls?"

"I have them already——"

"A million?"

"And more—I had to stop. I could have sworn another million."

"We will be ready in three months——"

"You can have four——"

"You have fixed the date?"

"Yes. There can be but one—the Emperor's birthday——"

Vassar clasped Virginia in his arms.

"Dearest—you're inspired—I swear it!"

"Every officer and every soldier in the ranks," she went on eagerly, "will be in his cups that night. A Belshazzar's Feast with Waldron as their toast master!"

"And not merely in New York"—she added—"but in every city in America—on every ship—in every aviation hangar and on board every submarine. Once their guns are in our hands——!"

"We'll take them—never fear"—she cried.

"If we can only get our hands on half their rifles, half their machine guns, half the ships and half the air craft, we'll win! The fiends of hell never fought as we shall fight! We'll get them too——" he stopped, overcome with emotion. "It's the knife at close quarters in the dark man to man, muscle and steel and dauntless hearts that will turn the trick. Gods! How little we've travelled after all our boasted science! It will come down to this, as it did in the trenches of the great war when cannon, Zeppelins, aeroplanes, sword, rifle, machine gun and bayonet at last were dropped for six inches of steel hand to hand in the dark!"

"We'll give your men more than half their rifles, and half their machine guns," Virginia promised. "And what's more we will annihilate their trained artillerymen, aviators and submarine experts to a man. We will detail two girls for each of these men—there'll be no blunder——"

"There's just one thing I don't like——" he broke in with clenched fists.

"Yes, I know, dearest!" she smiled.

"You've got to make love to those brutes, flatter and cajole them for weeks. You are risking what we hold more precious than life——"

"We have sworn to give as God has given us—all——"

"I don't like it—I don't like it!" he protested savagely.

She slipped her arms about his neck. Her eyes sought his with the yearning of eternity in their depths.

"Never speak or think that thought of me again, my own," she whispered. "I, too, know how to die as well as you. This is the third and last lesson we shall teach the Daughters of Jael before the Day dawns! Those who give their honor will scorn the cheaper gift of life. The new sun will rise on a clean and glorious womanhood, redeemed by sorrow and humbled by a divine passion for country we would learn in no other school but this!"

She held him at arm's length and slowly slipped her hands from his and waved him back.

"No more—until the Day dawns!"

"Until the Day dawns, my love!" he breathed tenderly.

She leaped on her pony and galloped into the solemn night alone—to deliver her orders to the Daughters of Jael for their third and final lesson.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE preparations for the first grand celebration of the Conqueror's birthday by the people of America were complete to the last detail at noon on the day preceding.

The Governor General was determined to make this event an example in promptness, glorious display and perfect efficiency. How prompt and efficient its real managers were going to make it he could not dream!

Every suspicion of disloyalty had been put at rest by the eager enthusiasm with which the Woman's Legion of Honor, with its five thousand chapters, had acted under Virginia's direction. For three months the most beautiful girls in America had vied with one another in courting the favor of the Army for the approaching Festival. From the Governor General down to the sailors of the fleet our girls had eyes only for Imperial Army uniforms.

The artillerymen, the aviators, and the submarine experts were the favorites. The conquerors began to feel a contemptuous pity for the poor native devils their charms had put out of the running.

Even the chauffeurs and railroad officials were everywhere courted and Making the Most of the Garden

By Edward I. Farrington

HORACE GREELEY used to say that the potatoes he grew cost him a dollar apiece. He seemed to think they were worth the price, too; and that was all very well for a man who was riding a hobby and could ignore the expense. Most people who make gardens, though, want to get as much out of them as they put in and a little more, even while appreciating the fact that such corn and peas and melons and strawberries as they grow in their little back yards can not be purchased at any price. That is easily done if one makes the most of his garden, which means, above all, careful planning, after which comes the choice of tools and the adoption of all new methods which are found practicable and labor-saving.

Summer showers are always on tap

You can't expect to wait until planting time before you order your seeds and then get satisfactory results. The only right way is to sit down for an evening with the catalogues long before the snow is off the ground. And it is safe to say that it will be midnight before you get to bed, for the modern catalogue is more fascinating than a novel to anyone who is garden-wise.

Spread a sheet of wrapping paper on the floor and map out the garden just as you would draw the plans for a house. Allot the proper amount of space to each vegetable and assign such tall growing kinds as corn and pole beans to the back, where they will not shade the lettuce and the root crops. Most of the seedsmen issue bulletins on the growing of different crops which contain invaluable information. It is worth while writing for some of them when you send in your order. A postal card to the department of Agriculture at Washington asking for farmer's bulletin No. 94 on "The Vegetable Garden" will also bring a very helpful little pamphlet. There is a whole library of these bulletins, by the way, and most of them are decidedly worth while.

YOU can just as well get two crops off the land as one, if you plan a proper rotation and use an abundance of fertilizer. Do you do that? Or do you plan for only one crop at a time and use only enough fertilizer for that one? Many a man has blamed his seed for a poor crop when the real trouble has been a lack of manure.

"The details of fertilizing are not agreeable," wrote Charles Dudley Warner. "It is much pleasanter to fertilize with a pen, as the agricultural writers do." Forgiving the slur, even we of the agricultural writing craft must admit that Mr. Warner was right. Yet you cannot have a good garden unless you feed it, and there is nothing in the world like barnyard manure to make things grow. Put on all you think the garden plot ought to have and then give it another load for good measure. If barnyard manure is not to be had, buy pulverized sheep manure at the seed store. It is really easier to handle and almost as good. Under some conditions it may be better to use less manure and supplement it with commercial fertilizers; in which event it is best to ask for a ready-mixed garden brand. Some bone meal should be kept on hand for the flower garden and the lawn and it is well to have a few pounds of nitrate of soda to apply after the crops have started. This is a wonderful stimulant for lettuce, spinach, Swiss chard and tomatoes. The way to use it is to put a teaspoonful or less at the base of each plant, making a shallow trench but not touching the stem. The first rain will wash it down to the roots and results will be seen in a few days.

Transplanting with paper pots is as simple as it looks

To make the most of the garden by keeping it occupied, arrange for two short-time crops in the same place. As soon as the early peas have been cleared away, the space they occupied can be given to late cabbage and Brussels sprouts. Early radishes may be followed by beets, early lettuce by peppers, early beets by carrots, spinach by turnips and so on. Turnips may be planted wherever an empty row appears up to the middle of Summer. Radishes and lettuce may be tucked into odd corners. Japanese cabbage can succeed any early crop. There are many combinations, but such vegetables as squashes, melons, onions, potatoes and tomatoes will need most of the season. Make several sowings of radishes, lettuce, beets and sweet corn to prolong the season and finish out half rows with crops that take the same kind of care as those you started them with.

Hot Beds and Baby Cold Frames

YOU simply can't make the most of your garden unless you have a hot bed and a few dozen baby cold frames. Why depend upon somebody else to grow your lettuce and cabbage and tomato plants and so on?

Baby frames made of water-proof paper

Of course you can use the back of the range and the kitchen window, but that may mean getting a new cook or some pointed observations from your wife. A hot bed or even a 3 x 6 cold frame will make it possible to start lettuce, beets, onions, celery, corn and melons, as well as cabbage and tomato plants, and keep them growing until warm weather comes and there is a place for them in the garden. If paper pots or dirt bands are used, the work of transplanting becomes simplicity itself and the plants sustain practically no shock.

The baby frames are supplementary but exceedingly useful. They are about a foot square and may be made of light boards or of waterproof paper and a light of glass is placed over the top of each for protection, being partly removed as the weather grows warmer, until it is dispensed with altogether. Such frames may be made at home, using boxes from the grocery store. They are not expensive and make it possible to start corn, melons, cucumbers, lettuce and other crops in the open ground much earlier than otherwise would be the case.

There is also a place in the flower garden for these frames. They can be used to protect all sorts of flowering plants that are set out early and are splendid for forcing bulbs into early bloom. When warm weather has become established, these frames may be stored until another year, but in the vegetable garden they are often left several weeks longer, a square of wire fly screening being substituted for the glass. Adopt this simple plan and you can laugh at the striped beetle and other insects that delight to feast on tender melon and cucumber vines.

Tools That Cut Out Backache

IT is certain that you cannot make the most of your garden unless you have the right kind of tools to work with. Some tools on the market are not worth carrying home, but a few are indispensable. First of all, you will need a good, old-fashioned hoe. There is no use dodging the issue; you will have to tickle the ground with the hoe if you want to make it laugh with the harvest. By all means get a hoe that you can use with pleasure, one that has just the right feeling in your hands and is neither too heavy nor too light. Then keep it sharp. Carry a file in your pocket and apply it to the under side of the blade every time you think of it. Then you will save time, keep your temper and not lift a pound or two of earth when you pull the hoe out of the ground.

Of course you will need a wheel hoe, too, if you have anything larger than a handkerchief garden. It is the greatest labor-saver ever invented for the use of the garden maker. With it you can weed and cultivate. You can open furrows for the seed at planting time and fill them up again when the seed has been dropped. You can do the work yourself that you used to hire a man to do. You can avoid no end of stooping and getting down on your knees. The wheel hoe is the article which has taken the backache out of gardening.

If you have an acre or so to plant, a seed sowing attachment will be worth while, but with only a little garden you will seldom use it and will do better to use your money for a Warren hoe, a useful, [illegible] implement, and a scuffle hoe for making a dust mulch and uprooting incipient weeds. You must have a level garden in good tilth, though, to handle a scuffle hoe to advantage.

Nature is bound to fill your garden with something and it is for you to decide whether it shall be vegetables or weeds. If you try, you will keep the weeds out but you will get no end of exercise. Weeds travel both under and above ground. The wild onion, as John Burroughs says, multiplies at both ends. No wonder he further declares that weeds are the tramps of the vegetable kingdom. You must deal with them harshly, but it helps to plant a scattering of radish seeds with such slow-germinating kinds as parsnips and carrots and even with beet seeds coming up quickly, the radishes will mark the rows, so that you can begin to cultivate at once. Another plan calls for mounding the earth slightly over the rows, and germination can often be hastened by wetting down the soil in the bottom of the furrows before the seed is put in, especially if lukewarm water is used.

Rain Makers That Never Fail

OF course an abundance of water is indispensable if you are to make the most of your garden, although diligent cultivation is a great help. Somebody has said that a good hoeing is worth a shower, but it is much easier to supply the shower when one of the modern systems of irrigation is used. For some years market gardeners have been using the perforated pipe system, but now this system has been made available for any ordinary back yard garden. It does away with bursting hose, with the carrying of water in pails and the lack of water in a dry season. It puts the water just where you want it and in a mist that cannot wash out the most delicate seedling. The pipes may be set up permanently or they may be moved about on a set of wheels and the whole garden may be watered at one time. With such a system, you need not worry about rain, and your crop yield will be increased a third in an ordinary season.

It would be foolish to enthuse over this new system if it cost so much that only the rich could afford it, or if carrying water was a kind of exercise that everybody needed. As a matter of fact, the cost is no more than that of enough good hose to do the same amount of work. And the pipes will last a lifetime, while the hose is of course good for only a few seasons. A rain-making feted by the fair ones. Every railroad agent, conductor, dispatcher and superintendent was an officer in the Imperial Army. These men who had rarely shared the glory of the regular army were particularly elated at their triumphs with the girls.

When the Day dawned every great terminal and every train in America was decorated with the royal flags. The spirit of abandonment in a strange subdued mania swept the nation. Beneath it beat the throbbing hearts of a million sons of the new revolution and a million Daughters of Jael.

Angela received her final instructions at the Holland home at six o'clock. The magnificent display of fireworks would begin at eight-thirty—the dancing at nine-thirty, the banquet at eleven-thirty.

"You have a girl with every chauffeur?" Virginia asked sharply.

"Si, signorina——" Angela paused and smiled. "And they have learned to drive too—yes—they have had some fun these three months!"

"At the Seventy-first Armory, a girl for every sailor of the fleet?"

"For every one——"

"At the Twelfth Regiment?"

"For the aerial chauffeurs—I have two—very prettiest girls—two for each, signorina——"

"At the Seventh Regiment?"

"A girl for every waiter to help them serve. My girls they help the waiters everywhere——"

A look of fierce triumph overspread the dark features of the little mother. Her eyes grew misty. She fumbled in her bosom and slowly drew out the blood-stained flag her boy had worn on his breast.

"And I have the flag, signorina! When I tear the red crown from the staff I wave this one and shout for my bambino!"

Virginia merely nodded. Her mind was sweeping the last possibility of accident.

"You haven't been able to reach a single man among the wireless operators of the Woolworth tower?" she asked dreamily.

"Not one, signorina. The old devil up there don't like the girls. He is not human——"

"There's no help for it then," she answered. "We'll try another way—when all is ready attend me at the Palace of the Governor General. When the signal flashes from the Metropolitan tower I want the car I always drive to be at the door instantly——"

"Si, signorina—my chauffeur he like me very much—I must think of my bambino when I strike!"

"You will not fail?" Virginia sternly asked.

Angela touched the little flag and shook her head.

"Do not fear—I shall not fail!"

With a quick pressure of her hand Virginia hurried to enter the car of state which was already standing at the door.

The streets were thronged with thousands who talked in subdued tones. They had felt the iron hand on their throats too often during the past three years to abandon themselves to the occasion.

There were no screeching horns, no riotous boys and girls hurling confetti. Such crude expressions of liberty were forbidden.

Beneath the outer quiet slumbered the coming volcano.

Virginia drove to the Waldorf-Astoria, sent her card to a distinguished guest and was ushered into his parlors.

A tall dark foreigner with VanDyke beard bowed over her hand.

"Your Lordship had a pleasant trip across I trust?" she asked.

The door closed and they were alone.

With a smothered cry she was in Vassar's arms murmuring foolish inarticulate sounds.

She freed herself with quick decision.

"There's not a moment to be lost," Virginia whispered. "I've failed to reach a single man in the Woolworth tower."

"It must be taken then!" he answered firmly. "I have ordered the other stations destroyed. We must hold that before you strike in the banquet halls. I've made my plans to call our cavalry and automobile orders from there. Our first line of men must mobilise and be on their way within five minutes after the searchlight signals from the Square——"

He paused thoughtfully.

"There's not a moment to lose. I'll take that tower myself. Send three of your girls to meet me there at nine o'clock dressed as country folks on a sight-seeing trip to the city——"

"Armed of course?"

"Yes—with automatics, if you have them. I'll find a way to get them up to see the fireworks."

At nine o'clock a noisy group of country louts succeeded in reaching the room that led by a narrow winding stair to the upper room of the Woolworth tower. They were singing loyal songs for God and Emperor! Their pilot was drunk but good natured and was determined to show them to the pinnacle.

The cautious red-faced captain in charge of the wireless, who had been celebrating a little on the quiet, had thawed to a genial mood.

"Tree cheers for the Emperor!" the jovial pilot from the country shouted.

The captain laughed and joined the chorus. He glanced contemptuously at the giggling girls.

"Say cap," the leader cried, leaning heavily on his shoulder—"my girls gotter see the fire works—from the top—tip top! I promised 'em I'd take 'em to the very tip top—gotter make good——"

His legs wobbled.

The captain laughed.

"Think you could climb these winding stairs?"

"Surest thing you know!"

The man staggered to the steps, rushed half way up, slipped and fell sprawling to the floor.

The captain roared.

"Try again!" he shouted. "I'll let you go, but not these women!"

The girls joined in the laughter while he made another ludicrous effort and slipped again.

The two operators left their instruments and peered down the shaft.

"Go back to your places—this is my show!" the captain called.

The staggering countryman watched them withdraw, with wagging head but keen eye. He saw there were only two. He knew his task now.

He made another desperate effort to climb the spiral, turned a complete summersault and came down head foremost.

The captain slipped to a sitting posture weak from laughter.

"Shay, pardner help me!" the seeming inebriate pleaded.

"No—this is my show—it's too good to lose—I'm the audience—help yourself!"

The countryman tried it backward this time holding first to the rail.

The captain wiped the tears from his eyes and bent again to laugh as the lout reached the last step and waved his triumph. He turned and staggered against the wall feeling his way to the door beyond.

The girls crowded about the captain.

"Please let us go too!" they pleaded in chorus.

The captain was adamant. They kept up their parrot cries until the crash above came. They heard the blow that felled the first operator—the shuffle of feet, the tiger spring—the smothered cry.

It was all over with the captain before the cry. Three athletic girls had plunged their dagger hat pins into the captain's side at the same moment. They bore him to the floor and held his writhing body until it was still.

"All right!" Vassar called. "Stand guard now at the door leading from the elevator—inside the door. Let no one pass!"

The leader of the guard touched her hat in salute. He took his place at the operator's table and answered a call from the tower of the Governor General's palace.

"Your wireless stations have all answered?" the machine sang.

"All"—was the brief answer.

"I'll give you the signal for the Emperor's toast on the stroke of twelve."

"Good!" Vassar answered with a grim smile.

room. Now, in my office, the wonderful new world of the printed page detained her only for a moment. She dabbed her tears briskly, and cried to her aunt sitting on the other side of the room, "Auntie, do something quick, quick!" Her aunt put up her hands. "Oh, I can see you!" she cried. "You are touching your hat. Now I can get an appointment to teach!" Then turning to me, she said: "Oh, why don't they give glasses to people who are nearly blind? Why have they thought our cases hopeless!"

But the children generally laugh. If you had ever heard the laughter of a child who suddenly receives vision, you would never forget it. It comes in a burst and ends in a shout. And then they begin to talk deliriously. My, how they talk! I found in Brooklyn a class of six supposedly blind children and discovered at my office that I could make every one of them see. Their experience in the chair and my assurances had taught them what to expect. But naturally they could not believe or grasp it. They came for their glasses in a body, and sat in the anteroom waiting to be fitted. They all sat on the lounge in a stiff row and in absolute silence, waiting tensely. One by one they came into my office for their glasses. The first returned to the others and I heard her chattering like mad. None of the others said a word. The second returned, and I could hear the two pounce at each other and shrilly compare the objects in the room they could see. I went in and found the others sitting in their places, mouths open and smiling but fidgeting in silence. The last little girl waited for her turn with a face twitching between laughter and tears, but she hardly made a sound. When she returned and the little group was complete again, the sofa became a cage of magpies and you never heard such a chatter in your life.

Sometimes, however, a child can say nothing. His feelings are too deep for expression, or he takes his experience with a blank and dazed mind which cannot at once readjust, or he is unable to break the habit of dumbness which has so long possessed him.

FRANK, whose teacher had never been able to make him volunteer one word, was brought to my office for his glasses by another boy. When he put them on, I could tell from his face he was seeing things he didn't know existed, but he only said "Thank you" in a hushed and reserved voice. But his companion told me that his tongue never stopped a moment every second of the way home. Sometime afterwards he lost his glasses and his mother was too proud to ask me for another pair. It was a considerable while before I visited his class again, and I found that he had once more relapsed into dumbness. But when I gave him another pair of glasses, he at once found his tongue.

The boy who brought Frank over offers a case peculiar and yet not unusual. He told me that whenever he studied it hurt him and that he had made up his mind not to try any more, and to pay no attention to what was going on in school. When he refused to try to read anything at all, naturally he was sent down to the blind class. The regular teachers, he said, all "had it in for him," but he liked his new teacher very much. This, of course, was entirely subjective—he had been released from studying with his eyes which hurt him, to studying with his fingers, which did not. Children who are sent down into the blind class almost always become devoted to the new teacher, and think that the others were harsh and unjust. This boy I gave sixty per cent vision with glasses that didn't pain him, and back in the regular grade, he has changed his mind about the teacher. But I found one boy of fourteen who was so in love with his new teacher that he actually refused to see. He feared he would have to go back into the sighted class if he did, and he naturally could not foresee that if he returned there his eyes would no longer hurt him, and would give no occasion for the harsh treatment he had imagined before. So every lens I gave him he lied about, and purposely read all the test letters wrong. When I removed the lenses from the frames, he read them correctly. "There!" he said, "you see I can do better without them than with them!" But his tone of triumph confirmed the suspicion I had already formed that he had quickly memorized the letters and was lying. I made him think that I was putting back into the frame the lenses I wanted him to have, but at the same time I inserted with them another pair that converted them into plain pieces of glass. And as I expected, he protested that he could no longer see a single letter. He is not yet fitted with glasses, for his teacher has not yet been able to persuade him to give me truthful responses. He fears to be sent away from the only person who is not making exactions upon him that he cannot meet. In a way, a case like this is more poignant than all the rest.

But, wretchedly enough, I have met other obstacles in my work than those implanted by nearly blind children who are grateful to their teachers. You may have perceived that these cases I have been citing are confined to the public schools. I have not been able to coax or club my way into any of the private institutions. Perhaps a little bit of history will relieve me from the charge of being unduly prejudiced about my own methods or of being unaware of any personal objections which can be brought against the way I conduct my work.

SEVERAL years ago a movement was started in New York City to have the blind children in the State and City institutions placed in the blind classes of the public schools. Here, it was urged, they could associate with normal children and thus become better fitted for life. The movement was bitterly opposed by these institutions. It was pointed out that they received from the State or City so much money for each inmate, and the income thus derived was indispensable for carrying on the rest of their work. The Board of Education, however, finally succeeded in making their point—but only by means of a compromise. It was forced to leave in the hands of the institutions enough of the child's education to technically enable them to receive money for each one from the city. Although the institutions know that my work has enabled many of the so-called blind to see, I have been able to get into only those homes for the blind which the Board of Education has supervision over.

Such work as this is much hampered also by that strange and elastic thing known as professional ethics. A physician wrote me that he was amazed and indignant that I ventured—even in a paper before a medical society!—to criticize my fellow-physicians. So far-reaching and powerful are professional ethics that even the Board of Education seems to have been made to feel its compelling tentacles. As time went on, my work became invisibly handicapped; and teachers who had been most helpful told me that they regretted they found themselves in a position where they could do no more for me. The Board of Education also showed signs of restlessness. It may have felt that, in the sensitiveness of parents about such matters, it might come in for criticism for putting children with some vision left into classes for the blind. Doubtless, they have been so criticized, for parents—especially the careless ones—are always ready to blame doctors for not anticipating the discoveries which must be slowly made, and only by experience. No sensible person could blame the Board of Education for putting a nearly blind child into the only class which could teach him anything at all. The attitude of most of the teachers has been in magnificent contrast to that of the private institutions. Although they must have felt that the positions of some of them would be at stake if the blind children were decreased by two-thirds, most of them have been eager to assist my work, cost them what it might.

For a decrease of two-thirds of the blind classes is what we may reasonably expect, and also a considerable decrease in what are called ungraded classes. There must be in them a large number of children who are not feeble-minded at all—rather, they are only partially blind, and as study hurts and exasperates them, they have relapsed into a sodden state easily mistaken for feeble-mindedness

On all the children I have spoken of, and on all of the ninety-nine who out of the one hundred and fifty-one examined I could make see, the ordinary methods of refraction had been already employed. Much of the failure to provide glasses which would help them is doubtless due to the hasty way examination in the public schools must take place under the present conditions. But I think my results justify me in saying that the chief part of the failure must be due to the method. Without medicine in the eyes, lenses given the children can, in my opinion, never be worn without strain.

This is my advice to people who are so nearly blind that their cases have been pronounced hopeless. Go to an oculist who uses medicine when he examines the eyes, and get the distance lenses you can see best with. Then have your eyes examined, without drops, for reading. Have the lower part of the lens over the poorer eye covered with a black wafer, and take the best lens you can read with on the better eye, to wear as a bifocal all the time, with the black wafer pasted permanently over the corresponding place in the other lens. The distance glasses will constantly stimulate what vision you have, and the bifocal for reading work will increase it. When your eyes begin to hurt you, after some months of wearing, it is because your sight has now improved, and you need a weaker glass.

But not only two-thirds of the so-called blind can be made to see. Most of the stone blind need not have become so. The instances of children born blind are so rare that they can be practically disregarded. Barring accidents, most blind children have become blind shortly after birth through ophthalmia of the newborn (venereal in origin, immediate or remote). A two per cent solution of nitrate of silver dropped into the eyes of all new-born children will prevent most of these from becoming so. Yet everywhere there is blindness in spite of this simple remedy. I saw the other day a perfectly healthy and normal infant who will never see, and the mother told me the physician in attendance had not used the nitrate of silver solution. Yet if one criticizes such physicians one is said to lack professional etiquette! There is a wide belief that the nitrate of silver is now used at birth as a matter of course, but it is not regularly done when a mid-wife acts, and not always when a doctor is in attendance. Nothing can be hoped from the doctors who, in face of knowledge, have continued to neglect this simple precautionary measure. There is only one other course, or rather two, which should work together. All mothers should know and insist upon it, and the law should impose a stiff penalty when it is not done. Total blindness in infants for any other reason is so rare that it might almost be taken for evidence that the precautionary measure had been omitted. And total blindness in children or in adults is, as my experience with ninety-nine out of one hundred and fifty-one patients shows, largely avoidable also.

Conclusive Evidence

WHEN Senator J. Ham Lewis of Illinois was a struggling lawyer in the state of Washington, he represented the Northern Pacific R. R. Co. in a suit for damages brought by the widow of Ole Olsen, a Swedish laborer.

Ole had been killed by a freight train. No one was prepared to deny that. But the defense was attempting to prove that he had been drunk, and it was important to shake the testimony of Hans Petersen, the only witness to the tragedy.

"You say that you were walking down the railroad track and that Olsen was some fifty yards in front of you," shouted Mr. Lewis. "Now, tell us truthfully whether you saw him killed, and if he tried to get out of the way."

"Well, it ban this way," answered Petersen cautiously. "I wanted to catch up with Ole, when I hear a train coming and step off the track. The train goes by and I step back on to the track, but I don't see Ole. I walk on a little way, and I find between the rails the leg of a man. That ban kind of queer, and soon I find another leg. Still I walk on, and as I go I see first an arm and next another arm on the ground. Then I stop and rub my head.

"'Something must,' I say to myself, 'by Dang, something must have happen to Ole!'"

ALADDIN HOMES SAVE MONEY

How to Beat the Lumber Price Raisers

The timber and lumber associations tried to throttle us—tried to shut off our supply of timber and forest products. But they failed. They have raised prices from $4 to $10 per thousand for 1916. You will have to pay the increased profits unless you buy direct. Aladdin is the only lumber manufacturer or Readi-Cut house manufacturer in America that has not raised prices this year. Compare last year's lumber prices with the prices asked now. Up, up, up the price has gone, and up it is still going. But Aladdin's prices are the same, and Aladdin is still guaranteeing a Dollar-A-Knot. The same guarantee, the same quality and the same prices.

HIGHEST AWARD WORLD'S FAIR

Dollar-a-Knot Quality

Aladdin's astounding Dollar-A-Knot Guaranty has stood the test of two years and again backs up our 1916 sales. It speaks plainer than volumes of evasive "lumber grading rule" guarantees. Knotless lumber has been made famous by Aladdin. Knotless quality was originated by Aladdin, as was the wonderful Readi-Cut system of construction. Remember—"If it isn't an Aladdin—It isn't a Readi-Cut."

Save Four Profits

Buying direct from the forest—from Aladdin—saves you four profits. You save a profit on the lumber, on the millwork, on the hardware and on the labor. You can build your own home. A big Aladdin catalog tells all the facts you want to know, gives photographs, floor plans, prices and descriptions of a hundred modern homes. Send for it today.

Double Duty In The Sick Room,

Roses the Summer Long

By Edward I. Farrington

THERE is no rose for the amateur like the hybrid-tea, for it blooms all summer long. No class of roses is more satisfactory for the home garden, in city or country, for the flowers are wonderful in size and color. And no roses are more acceptable as cut flowers, for they last a long time and most of them are delicately perfumed. With all these qualifications, it is not strange that hybrid-teas have become the most popular of all garden roses, and that new varieties should be welcomed with enthusiasm as soon as their merits have been established.

Never have finer novelties been offered than those which are being put out this season and most of those mentioned below have been given thorough and careful tests in this country. And it is an interesting fact that a particularly large number of yellow roses are to be introduced this year, meeting the popular demand for roses of that color. Among these yellow varieties is Imogen, the center of which is orange yellow, shading away to a paler tint, and turning to creamy white at the outside. Gorgeous is a deeper yellow, as its name would indicate, and is flushed and veined with copper in a most unique and interesting way. As this is a vigorously growing plant, with large, splendidly formed blossoms, it is likely to meet with high favor. The yellow of Iona Herdman is a clear, orange flame, wonderfully deep and beautiful. This is an excellent rose for garden use, as well as for cutting, blooms freely and has an exquisite perfume. The yellow of Margaret Dickson Hamill, a splendid new rose from across the water, is really a delicate straw color, while the backs of the petals are flushed with carmine. This is a very sweet scented rose, too, and doubly to be prized because of the beauty of its bronze-green foliage. Even more generous with its flowers is Mrs. Ambrose Riccardo, an extra large rose for its kind, with a soft rose suffusing its delicate yellow base. Mrs. Archie Gray is a light canary yellow, but the long, pointed buds are cream yellow. This rose also has shiny, handsome leaves and is a strong and upright grower. Coming to Mrs. MacKellar, we are introduced to one of the finest of all the new yellow hybrid-teas. It is very liberal with its large, full flowers, and makes a strong growth, while the light lemon-yellow tinting of its petals is exquisite. The delightful scent of the real tea rose is found in Mrs. Maud Dawson, and the color of the flower is a brilliant orange carmine, making this a most desirable rose, especially as it blooms all summer.

In time the growing popularity of the yellow rose may make it the fashionable flower of the day, but so far the "red, all-conquering rose" has maintained its supremacy, and among the new hybrid-teas there is a red rose which has rightly been christened Brilliant, for its intense scarlet is the brightest color yet obtained by rose growers. It makes a good branching growth and is especially desirable as a bedding rose, giving the garden a dash of color which is most pleasing. While less free-flowering than some of the others, the new H. V. Machin, scarlet-crimson in color, is extremely large and a rose which will interest all growers who raise exhibition flowers. Another splendid red variety is Edward Bohane, free-flowering, very fragrant, and crimson scarlet in color, with a velvet-like texture which is nothing less than fascinating. The markings of Muriel Dickson are quite different, for the long and pointed buds are reddish copper, changing to cherry red with coppery shadings as the blossoms unfold. The distinct and handsome tints of this rose assure it of a warm welcome. Of all the new red roses, however, none can surpass a variety which comes into the market this Spring for the first time and bears the name of National Emblem. The trial tests made with this rose mark it as one of the finest ever produced and the dark velvety crimson flowers, shading to vermilion at the edges, are borne in the most gratifying profusion. In many ways National Emblem is a rose of wonderful possibilities.

Many people prefer pink roses to all others and they will be delighted with Colleen, which is really rose pink, with deeper rose-crimson veneering on a creamy-yellow ground. The petals are large and the center high, and the fragrance of this rose is delicious. Countess Clanwilliam is a delicate peach-pink at the base of the petals, which are heavily edged with deep cherry red, making a contrast which is as distinctive as it is beautiful. Large and remarkably symmetrical are the flowers of Mrs. Bertram J. Walker, and the color is very unusual, being a bright cerise pink. In all ways this is a most satisfactory rose and a worthy companion to Mrs. James Lynas, an extra good garden rose, having large, well formed blossoms of pearly pink, flushed with delicate peach.

The list of new hybrid-teas might be made longer but only one more will be mentioned and that because it is an exceptionally dainty rose and very free with its flowers. Its name is simply Janet and it looks much like the climbing Gloire de Dijon which has long been in high favor from Philadelphia South. It is a blush rose with salmon shadings and most attractive.

Why We Stand on One Leg

NATURALISTS have distinguished us from the higher animals by the fact that we stand upright on two legs. But, do we? Watch a crowd standing about a street orator and see how many are really standing on both legs. Or try yourself to stand on two legs and see how soon you are ready to fall from fatigue.

The truth is we have not yet absolutely acquired the upright position ascribed to us by the scientists. Even in the army, where comfort is always sacrificed to trim appearance the command "stand at ease" which allows the soldiers to throw one leg back and prop themselves upon it, shows how impossible a perfectly upright position is to maintain for any length of time. And have you ever noticed that all seafaring men acquire the habit of walking back and forth, even when ashore. On board ship the rolling of the ship makes the resting position on one leg difficult, so the sailor paces back and forth across his deck, even though he may be able to take only two and a half steps each way.

As any anatomist will tell us, we are still built very much like the monkeys. Standing perfectly upright can only be done by a very complicated cross strain, one set of muscles pushing forward, another holding back. With every movement we make a new adjustment of these muscles takes place.

The trouble is all with our hip bones. If they fitted vertically into the pelvic girdle and not at an angle and if the spine were directly above it, all that would be required to stand perfectly upright would be a slight amount of balancing.

Therefore, to rest these muscles we place one of them at rest by throwing one leg to one side, allowing the other to do the work. When one leg has rested sufficiently, it takes up the strain and the other takes a spell. Nor does it matter how much we strengthen our leg muscles by walking or other exercises, the perfectly upright position is still a hard one to keep.

Art and Utility in Window Boxes

ARTISTIC effects may be obtained as easily and permanently with the window box as with the flower bed on the lawn or in the garden. But the same care and attention is required to make a success of one as of the other. With what high hopes do many flower lovers start porch and window boxes in the spring, only to reap a harvest of disappointment before the summer is well under way. This may result from two or three reasons: One is that poor judgment has been shown in selecting the flowers or vines, both as regards their color combination and the location of the box in sunshine or shade. The other may be owing to neglect in watering, especially if the box be of wood and therefore subject to leakage.

Many people err in using boxes that are too shallow and dry out too quickly. While there are some advantages attached to the wooden box its disadvantage is that it will not hold moisture but will leak over the window sill and frequently, in city apartment homes especially, will prove to be an annoyance to the tenants below.

Metal window boxes are rapidly finding favor on this account. There is no leakage and furthermore they guarantee a proper moisture for the seed bulb or vine for days at a time and thereby insure the flowers against neglect in watering. Daily watering is needed in case the box be of wood and is very much in the sun. The advantage of the metal box lies in the fact that the soil dries out much more quickly than in the garden and if neglected the plants will perish of thirst.

Most any catalogue will give a good idea as to plants that will harmonize. Care must be exercised in getting the proper combination of colors and also as regards the length of life of the plants, as it never looks well to have two or three plants in a box die or fade very much earlier than their companions. A box very much exposed to the sun will thrive with geraniums and petunias, with thunbergia or maurandia and trailing nasturtiums to droop over the front. Where there is a good deal of shade the begonia and also vinca roses do well.

"What Lovely, Artistic Walls!

"Mine are a fright. They need re-papering badly, as usual. And the plaster is cracking and falling again. How do you fix yours?"

"Our walls and ceilings never need 'fixing'—they're always just like this. No expensive repairs and cleaning after messy workmen, for us! We've UPSONIZED. Quite the modern way, you know."

UPSON PROCESSED BOARD

Upsonizing makes every room so much more beautiful. The paneling is an artistic delight, and you can finish it in such handsome tints. Washable paint gives a surface that you can always keep clean, fresh and sanitary.

All this beauty lasts. Because UPSON PROCESSED BOARD is strong, durable, perfect and permanent. It is like real lumber—altogether different from ordinary wall boards. It is DEPENDABLE.

The long, pure, wood fibers are compressed into hard, stiff, wood-like panels, kiln-dried. That's why your carpenter finds it so quick and easy to work and apply, any time in the year. Takes only one-third as long as plastering, and no fuss or muss.

The specially prepared painting surface saves you from $5 to $15 a room over the cost of painting ordinary wall boards, besides giving handsome effects. And this surface is waterproofed, defying ordinary dampness or leaks.

Yet the cost of Upsonizing is just about the same as the first cost of plastering. In the long run, it is a big saving over any other interior lining. Adaptable to every building, the costliest or simplest.

OUR FREE BOOK on Interior Decoration will show you how Upsonizing has beautified 40,000 homes. Test the UPSON BOARD sample yourself—compare it with any other wallboard. Mail coupon today. We will include our folder on Upson-Fibre Tile.

How I Jumped from $1500 to $50,000 Yearly

"Power of Will" Was My Guide"

"Three years ago I was making $1500 a year and working day and night. Today I make a thousand dollars a week and have time for other things as well. To the lessons in 'Power of Will' more than any other thing do I owe this sudden rise."

These are the exact words of an owner of "Power of Will." His name is not published, for obvious reasons, but will be gladly given in confidence on request.

As remarkable as is his experience it might almost be called typical of what this wonderful course in Will Training is doing for thousands of men and women in every walk of life who are using "Power of Will" as the stepping stone to greater accomplishment.

What is "Will Power"

The Will is the motive power of the brain. Without a highly trained inflexible will, a man has about as much chance of obtaining success in life as a railway engine has of crossing the continent without steam. The biggest ideas have no value without Will Power "to put them over." Yet the Will, hitherto entirely neglected, can be trained into wonderful power like the brain or memory and by the very same method, by intelligent exercise and use.

If you held your arm in a sling for two years, it would become powerless to lift a feather, from lack of use. The same is true of the will—it becomes useless from lack of practice. Because we don't use our wills—because we continually bow to circumstance, we become unable to assert ourselves. What our wills need is practice.

"Power of Will"

by FRANK CHANNING HADDOCK, Ph. D., a scientist whose name ranks with such leaders of thought as James, Bergson and Royce, is the first thorough course in Will Power ever conceived. It is the result of over 20 years of research and study. Yet you will find every page in the 28 lessons written so simply that anyone can understand them and put the principles, methods and rules into practice at once with noticeable results right from the very start.

Meant For You

There are over 75,000 people in all walks of life who own "Power of Will." Among them are such master men as Judge Ben B. Lindsey; Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Lieut.-Gov. McKelvie of Nebraska; Assistant Postmaster-General Britt; General Manager Christeson of Wells-Fargo Express Company; E. St. Elmo Lewis, now Vice-Pres. Art Metal Construction Company; Gov. Ferris of Michigan, and many others of equal prominence.

Never in the history of self-help literature has there been such a record. And the owners regard it as veritable text book. It has been instrumental in changing the entire lives of thousands—making them dominant personalities, self-confident and eager, in place of the fearful, unhappy, unsuccessful men and women they formerly were. No matter what your position—whether an errand boy to the president of a mighty corporation—no matter what your age, from 17 to 70, Power of Will can change your whole life—can make a new man of you just as it has for so many others. Whatever you want in life is yours, be it money, power, prestige or happiness, if you but master the wonderful system of will training taught in "Power of Will."

Making Most of the Garden

machine that will water twenty-five hundred square feet costs only $12. It is fifty feet long, portable, can be attached by a length of hose pipe to any sillcock, throws a mist in three directions and will cover a width of eighteen feet.

For small gardens and for lawns there are spray attachments to be used with the hose which do very good work indeed and costs $5 or less. They cover a wide area with a spray of water that falls as gently as an April shower and they can be carried anywhere at a moment's notice. Surely there is no reason for letting one's garden burn up if a fair pressure of water is available. And even a hose will be given added years of service if properly cared for, which means oftentimes keeping it free from kinks. Several kinds of reels are to be obtained, but the writer likes best the sort that is attached to the sillcock, where it can be wound up with the least possible trouble.

Equipping the Bug Arsenal

EVEN water, though, will not save your garden from the bugs. You need poison, bad odors and no end of patience. Covering some of the plants with screening will help, but you will have to do more or less gunning for the pests all through the season. The ammunition commonly used consists of arsenate of lead, kerosene emulsion, whale oil soap and Paris green. Of late, though, various preparations made from tobacco have been put on the market and have proved exceedingly useful in the small garden. Likewise there are ready-made oil or soap mixtures which are much more convenient than kerosene emulsion and fully as satisfactory, while they lack the exceedingly disagreeable odor of whale oil soap. These remedies are applied with spraying devices which may range all the way from a sixty-cent hand sprayer to a barrel pump on wheels.

While the conventional methods are those just described, many garden makers are breaking away from them and are adopting dry sprays as being more convenient and quite as effective. Arsenate of lead may be used in the dry form by means of a new gun which is very easy to operate and distributes the powder all over the plant. Hellebore may be applied in the same way and is better for fruit and berries that are partly formed.

Tobacco dust is one of the best of remedies to use in fighting all sorts of garden pests, both in the flower and the vege-

It's the clean, sweet sap of the Sapota Tree

In tropical regions grows the Sapota Tree. Botanists call it the "Achras Sapota." Its buds turn into delicious fruit. It yields a creamy sap for Sterling Gum.

In the late Fall of the year, the rainy season comes. The sap rises. The trunk of the tree is tapped. The milky sap flows out, rich, pure and clean.

Then they boil it into buff-colored cakes. The cakes are wrapped and sent to the Sterling Kitchens.

As you enjoy your Sterling Gum, remember the clean, sweet sap of the Sapota Tree. Remember the gloved hands that guide its making into Sterling Gum.

The 7 points of Sterling excellence are:

Point 1—Crowded with flavor
Point 2—Velvety body—No Grit
Point 3—Crumble-proof
Point 4—Sterling purity
Point 5—From a daylight factory
Point 6—Untouched by hands

table garden. It is cheap and non-poisonous. Flowers of sulphur may be used in this new kind of blow gun for mildew and other fungus troubles. There are also good dry insect killers which come in boxes with perforated tops, by means of which the powder is easily distributed over the plants. All in all, the garden maker requires a much less expensive bug arsenal than formerly was the case in order to wage an effective campaign against the host of garden pests which is sure to appear.

Berries Until Frost Comes

SO much for the vegetables. How about the fruit garden? Do you enjoy strawberries and raspberries all summer? If not, you are failing to make the most of your garden, after all. Perhaps you are skeptical when you read about Fall-bearing strawberries. Yet these berries have proved their worth and are being grown in constantly increasing numbers. Plants set out in April will begin bearing in August and not stop until frost freezes the berries on their stems. When Spring comes they will start in again and produce another generous crop. An acquaintance of the writer's figures on a quart box of berries from each plant. They are fine, large berries, too, and delicious in flavor to the very end of the season. Particularly satisfactory results can be obtained in the home garden when these all-season strawberries are grown in hills rather than by the more common matted-row system.

The St. Regis ever-bearing raspberry must also have a corner, if you are to make the most of your garden, at least if you have a fondness for red, ripe raspberries of high color and fine flavor. Remarkable as it may seem, the St. Regis raspberry begins bearing earlier in the season than most other varieties and continues to bear until cold weather interferes. Ripe fruit was found in the writer's garden the past season two weeks before Thanksgiving Day. It is true that the plants are never so heavily loaded at any one time as are those of the Columbian and Cuthbert varieties in their brief season. Isn't it better, though, to have a moderate supply all summer rather than a feast and then a famine, as when the old-time sorts are grown? Certainly it is in the home garden. When one is growing raspberries commercially the situation may be different.

You will need blackberries in your garden, of course. Have you excluded them up to the present time because you dislike plants that are covered with needles? That excuse will hold good no longer, for the Wachuset is almost free from thorns. It is a fair sized berry, too, and the quality is excellent. There are some fine newer sorts, however, that are worth testing, among them the Star blackberry, which is reputed to be enormously productive. The vines are so heavy that they need to be tied to stakes or trained on trellises and the fruit is borne in gigantic clusters.

Finally, there are grapes. You cannot make the most of your garden if you omit them, and they can be trained along the sides where they will interfere little, if at all, with the ordinary garden operations. There are many standard sorts and there is also the new Caco grape, a cross between the Concord and the Catawba. It can be grown in any back yard and the red fruits are at least two weeks earlier than Concords. The man who is making the most of his garden will be slow to forsake his old and true friends among the vegetables and the fruits, but he will not refuse to become acquainted with new arrivals when they are properly introduced. If he does, he will soon find that he is not making the most of his garden, as he should.

Red Glass Milk Bottles

IT is not at all improbable that milk will be generally delivered in red bottles, for it has been discovered that while ordinary light hastens the "spoiling" of milk, the red rays prevent it. The violet rays, on the contrary, cause the milk to turn.

Pure, fresh milk, or sterilised and pasteurised milk, if placed in an uncolored glass bottle and left in the full sunlight, is completely spoiled by evening. But substitute a red glass bottle, or wrap the ordinary bottle in red paper, and milk is perfectly good after standing ten hours in the sun.

Celery for the Home Garden

ANY person who has ever grown his own celery successfully has no desire to eat any other, and there is no reason why anyone who has the room to grow it should not have his own winter supply.

The old method was to dig a trench a foot and a half deep, which was filled with good loamy soil, and stable manure, in which the young plants were set. The first objection to this was that these young plants were shaded part of the time until they grew up to the top of the trench, and in the effort to accomplish this, nature grew them so rapidly that the stalks grew long and slender and the crowns did not bush out as they should. From time to time, as the plants grew, the soil from the sides of the trench was filled in about them, using the hand to get it about the stalks, which was back-breaking work at the best. As the plants emerged from the trench, the soil was ridged about them, frequently until growth stopped, when they were allowed to stand until bleached.

Compare this with the new way: Select a strip of mellow sandy soil, following potatoes is good if the latter were fertilized heavy. Dig the soil to the width of two feet, as deep as the top soil, working in as much stable manure as it will take, not putting it deep down in the furrow as you dig, but laying it half way up the furrow, so that when covered it will be not more than four inches from the top of the soil, as we desire the fibrous roots to luxuriate in this later on. If you have the time, or assistance, it will benefit this soil if it be trenched before digging. To do this, throw it out clear down to the subsoil for a width of two feet, on the side of the row, and allow it to lie a week, and then put it back, and allow it to lie another week before digging. This must be done as soon as the soil can be worked, and not when the weather gets warm, as the soil should not be exposed to the hot sun. Sunshine kills vast numbers of the beneficial soil bacteria, without which no soil is fertile. There is no use in digging up the ground between the celery roots, as this space need only be kept free from weeds, and is used as a path as well.

Of course the celery seeds should, for an early crop, be sown in the house or greenhouse in flats thinly, and when they have shown their third leaf, thin them out to two inches apart in the flats, and shear them off a half inch above the crowns, to make them stool out. The more branches you get the more heart there will be to the celery. The seedlings should be kept in a warm light place, but not in the direct rays of the sun, or they will become spindling in spite of all you can do. They may remain in the flats until time to transplant them to the open ground; but if you have not too many to handle, it will repay you to shift them into other flats, allowing them to set three inches apart and set them out about the first week of June.

The rows should be leveled off before the planting is begun, and the plants set level with the top, and just as deep as they set in the flats. It is the intention to grow them "flat" just the same as beans or peas. The soil is worked about them, but never ridged up or allowed to have access to the heart of the plants.

There is a reason for this method of celery growing or rather a number of them. The one which suggested it is the fact that all the diseases of a fungous nature, which afflict celery, carry their spores in the soil, and it is these spores coming into contact with the plants which cause heart-rot, brown-rot, and anthracnose, all of which render the celery plants unsightly, and often unsalable. You have often noticed the brown on the ribs of the outer stems of celery? This is caused by anthracnose, a fungous disease, the spores of which are carried in the soil, and when the soil is banked against the plants, these spores find a lodgment thereon and develop with the result stated.

All this we avoid in growing celery "flat," and keeping the soil away from it. In addition, the celery plant, like others, develops best in the full light, sunshine and air, and it gets all of these when it is allowed to grow normally as any other plant would.

FOOD DEPARTMENT

Fruits and Their Uses—Cooking and Serving

AS a rule not a little of the enjoyment of a meal depends on daintiness of service, and a service of fruit is no exception to this. Fruits may be fresh, delicious and wholesome but much of the value is gone if the appeal to the palate through the eye is wanting. And in this age where most attractive china and glass may be purchased for a small outlay and where dainty napkins of linen or paper in endless variety are within reach of all there is no excuse for carelessness or slovenliness of service with fruit or indeed any food.

Fruits are best when served raw, in season—a few cannot be taken in their raw state while some are rendered more easily digestible by cooking. The cooking should be done in a kettle of earthen or granite ware and a silver or wooden spoon used for stirring. All fruits contain certain acids which when brought in contact with tin or iron develop a poisonous compound.

In serving use small plates of china or glass with silver knives and paper doilies for fresh fruit where cream is not used. Fruit napkins are smaller than the ordinary napkin and may be had in almost every quality of linen. Bear in mind that peaches, pears, and several kinds of berries make stains on linen that are very hard to remove.

To serve Grapefruit:

After wiping the grapefruit cut in half crosswise. With a small sharp pointed knife cut between the pulp and the skin all around. Remove with sharp scissors the center part and run the knife all around each section. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and chill thoroughly before serving. If liked a tablespoonful of sherry, a teaspoonful of rum, one-half tablespoonful of sloe gin or apricot brandy may be added before chilling the fruit.

Apples—baked.

There are many ways of adding variety to the everyday baked apple. A spoonful of whipped cream with a stuffed date, a dab of jelly or chopped preserved ginger make easy and effective garnish, while filling the core cavity with mincemeat or chopped raisins will not only decorate but will impart a very delicious flavor. Serve with cream, whipped or plain.

In baking apples baste frequently with the hot syrup so that they may bake an even rich color.

Berries.

These should be washed and picked over carefully before serving. Garnish when possible with the natural leaves of the fruit but if not possible any soft "greenery" will do.

Grapes.

These should be kept in bunches but washed and looked over before piling lightly into a fruit dish.

Syruped Apples

Apples
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
5-cent can condensed milk
Vanilla
Powdered sugar
Chopped nuts

Pare medium size apples and remove cores. Stew until soft in a syrup of the sugar and water boiled until sugar is dissolved (a few minutes), taking care to keep the apples from breaking. Place in glass dishes with syrup and a sprinkling of chopped walnuts. Then heat the can of condensed milk in boiling water, without opening. When thoroughly heated, remove from water and shake vigorously for a few minutes. Then place on ice until thoroughly chilled. When ice-cold open the can and beat contents in a bowl with egg-beater, flavoring with a few drops of vanilla and a sprinkling of powdered sugar. This makes a cheap and perfect substitute for whipped cream. Garnish each apple with the cream and a sprinkling of chopped nuts. A candied cherry adds daintiness.—Mrs. A. F. P., Laguna Beach, Calif.

Fruit Pudding

1 can pineapple
Juice 1 lemon
½ cup sugar
½ box lemon gelatine
½ cup cold water
4 egg whites
½ lb. malaga grapes
Whipped cream

Put into a saucepan over the fire the juice of a can of pineapple, sugar, and gelatine which has been dissolved in the cold water. Let come to a scald, then pour over the egg whites, well beaten. Cut the pineapple into small pieces and add grapes, halved and seeded. Arrange the fruit in the mold, pour the liquid gelatine over it and let congeal. Serve with the following:

Dressing

1 pint milk
Sugar
4 egg yolks

Cook to a soft custard the milk, yolks of eggs and sugar to taste and flavor with vanilla. Drop flecks of whipped cream over top.—Mrs. H. L. W., Racine, Wis.

Apricot Short Cake

2 teacups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 large teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
2 egg whites
2 large tablespoons butter
¾ cup sweet milk
Canned apricots
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Mix flour, salt, baking powder and sugar together, then rub in—as for biscuit dough—butter and milk. Make into dough, roll out and bake in well greased layer-cake pan. Cool and split open, spread with butter and then with canned apricots, which have been strained of the juice and chopped fine and sweetened with 4 tablespoons sugar. Finish with a meringue made of whites of two eggs and two tablespoons powdered sugar. Brown slightly. Serve with the following:

Custard Sauce

4 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
2 cups sweet milk
Small piece stick cinnamon
Vanilla

Stir sugar, flour and eggs together, then add sweet milk and cinnamon to the milk. Cook in double boiler until light consistency. Flavor with vanilla.—Mrs. C. A. D., Xenia, Ohio.

Brown Pudding

1 cup New Orleans molasses
1 level teaspoon soda
1 cup sweet milk
Pinch salt
1 large spoonful butter
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup chopped dates
3 pieces canton ginger

Beat molasses, butter, salt and milk. Add other ingredients and steam two hours in coffee cans half full.

Dressing

2 cups confectioners' sugar
Butter size of an egg
2 eggs
1 pint whipped cream

Rub butter into sugar, add egg yolks, then the stiffly beaten egg whites, then the whipped cream. Flavor as desired. This recipe serves about 16 people. —Mrs. W. D. McC., Crafton, Pa.

Soft White Cookies with Raisin Filling

Flour
1½ cups sugar
¾ cup shortening, either lard or butter or both mixed
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 level teaspoon soda dissolved in little milk
Salt
Nutmeg

Mix well 1 cup sugar (reserving ½ cup for sprinkling on tops of cookies before baking) with shortening, egg, milk, soda, pinch of salt and a sprinkle of nutmeg, and flour. Use enough flour to enable to roll and cut.

Filling

½ lb. raisins
½ cup water
½ tablespoon butter
Flour

Put raisins in pan with water and butter, and as they come to the boil, thicken with tablespoon of flour mixed with a little water. Put one layer of cookies in pan, spread with raisin mixture, then place another cookie on top, sprinkle with sugar and bake.—Mrs. M. A. F., Chicago, Ill.

What Standardization Means to Automobile Buyers

IT means VALUE—the utmost in efficiency per dollar of cost. Just to the extent that a car is standardized does the buyer's dollar approach the maximum of purchasing power.

Standardization means definite, proved quality, known manufacturing costs and reduced selling costs.

Of the million autos that will be sold in 1916, 75% will be standardized cars selling for less than $1000.00 each. This remarkable American achievement is the result of standardizing motors, starters, carburetors, speedometers, ignition and lighting systems, transmissions, differentials, tires, wheels, axles, rims, bearings, etc.

Finally the upholstery has been standardized by the almost universal adoption of

DU PONT FABRIKOID

MOTOR QUALITY

Rayntite Fabrikoid top material, single or double texture, is guaranteed one year against leaking, but built to last the life of the car.

Craftsman Fabrikoid, the artistic and durable upholstery material for furniture and home decoration is sold by the yard in leading department stores.

40% of all 1915 cars sold were upholstered in this proved, guaranteed material, and in 1916 the total will be nearly 60%.

Fabrikoid is the only standardised automobile upholstery. It wears better than coated splits (commonly sold as "genuine leather") and has the artistic appearance and luxurious comfort of the best leather.

How Movie Actors Preserve Their Looks

Here are the Five Steuarts. All are in the movies. Mr. Steuart tells how they work, and how his entire family keep their beauty.

"I believe we are the largest acting family on the 'screen' " writes Mr. Steuart. "All of the children act and have done so since each was two months old. We are 'The Five Steuarts,' and you've very likely seen some of us filmed with Ethel Barrymore in 'The Nightingale,' Mabel Taliaferro in 'The Three of Us,' etc., etc.

"Wife and I think Pompeian MASSAGE Cream is great. Nothing like it for getting the dust and excess oils out of the skin. A massage with Pompeian sort of takes the 'tired' out of our faces, too. Do we look overworked? No, but we surely are. On our feet all day and always under a strain, but we take good care of ourselves, which includes using the 'Great Youthifier.'

"Cordially, Maurice Wilcox Steuart.

"P.S.—The kiddies use your new product, Pompeian NIGHT Cream. Fine for their tender young skins when they get rough, red and chapped by the wind or cold. Wife and I have just started to use your Pompeian HAIR Massage. It surely is good stuff."

A clear, youthtul, velvety skin makes almost any woman a queen in her circle of friends. She attracts, charms and rules—and is therefore happy.

But beauty of skin is won and kept only by constant care. Whether your skin needs one or both of the Pompeian Creams depends upon your own particular complexion needs.

POMPEIAN

DRY SKINS need Pompeian NIGHT Cream. It should be used every night. It soothes, softens and beautifies the face and hands while you sleep. Pompeian NIGHT Cream is unusually white and exquisitely fragrant. If your skin is also sallow and worn-looking, then a massage with Pompeian MASSAGE Cream several times a week is also advisable.

OILY SKINS need Pompeian MASSAGE Cream every day or two. Pompeian MASSAGE Cream is pink. It rubs in and out of the skin in its own peculiar way, cleansing the pores of excess oils, blackheads and dust. Gives the face a fresh, youthful appearance. At times even an oily skin may be roughened or chapped by the weather, and thus need Pompeian NIGHT Cream, too.

Many women write us of their new-found beauty-treatment. First, they cleanse and youth-i-fy the face with Pompeian MASSAGE cream. Then they finish off with Pompeian NIGHT Cream, which is left on the face to soothe, soften and beautify the skin while you sleep.
